THE VALUE OF A GOOD FERTILISING MATERIAL.

For ordinary garden purposes it is not necessary to invest in an expensive Fertiliser. But CONSIDERATION must be given to QUALITY. It is not probable that every gardener will trouble about analysing the manures he purchases, being content to PROCURE what he requires FROM A RELIABLE SOURCE.

ANDERSON'S "EXCELLENTA."
A Fertiliser that can be relied upon to give satisfactory results.
1cwt, 12/6; 56lb, 7/; 28lb, 4/; 14lb, 2/6. Tin, 1/.

ANDERSON'S "BLOOD AND BONE"
is a quick-acting Fertiliser, useful for both Flower and Vegetable Garden as well as Fruit Trees. Better to use small quantities of a good manure than larger quantities of an inferior brand.

ANDERSON'S BONEDUST, made by the best process, and free from waste materials.

THERE IS PHOTOGRAPHY AND PHOTOGRAPHY. WE ARE PROFESSORS IN PHOTOGRAPHY.

PHOTOGRAPHY is one of the Professions which admit of all classes of aspirants. As sure as the various standards of Gold differ in value, so sure is there an equal difference to be found in Photographers.

IF A PHOTOGRAPHER be not an artist he is but a mechanic working by rule to obtain a given result. But the work of the artist appeals to the heart.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN ITSELF is not Art any more than writing is literature, but an Artist behind the Camera ensures an Art Picture.

OUR WORK IS an incentive and an inspiration to every true lover of Art.

WE HAVE supplied the Public with Artistic Portraiture and gained for ourselves the reputation of being the recognised Artists of Sydney.

A TRUTH.—We number among our Staff of Artists Gentlemen of the HIGHEST TALENT. Specialists in each Department. Producers of Sound Original Work.

RUPERT CLARKE AND CLYDE MEYNELL,
FIRST APPEARANCE IN SYDNEY
of their
NEW ENGLISH COMIC OPERA CO.,

Feel sure that the high standard of the Company and the production will ensure for both the popularity and success that Sydney audiences so lavishly conferred upon their previous star attractions in this city, including the previous Comic Opera Co., and the Oscar Asche-Lily Brayton Co.

THE ARTISTS have been selected with the greatest care, and represent some of the leading comic opera organisations in England. Those who will make their first appearance here in "THE ARCADIANS" include—

MAIE SYDNEY (Prima Donna),

TOM WALLS,	GERTRUDE GILLIAM,
CONSTANCE TAIT,	PERCY CLIFTON,
NELLIE CAVANAGH,	CHARLES STONE,
LENA DENTON,	CISSIE CALLCOTT,
ETHEL FORSYTH,	ARTHUR EDWARDS,

Who will be Supplemented by Those Most Popular Artists, HAROLD THORLEY, ESSIE PERRIN,
and
WILLIAM CROMWELL.

THE SPLENDID CHORUS, which has been such a notable Feature of the productions of the Clarke and Meynell Comic Opera Co., has been specially augmented.

"THE ARCADIANS"
HAS PASSED ITS SIXTEENTH MONTH AT THE SHAFTESBURY THEATRE, LONDON, AND HAS TAKEN AMERICA BY STORM.

THE MAGNIFICENT SCENERY, depicting Arcadia, the Askwood Racecourse, and the Arcadian Restaurant, has been specially painted by PHIL GOATCHER.

THE DRESSING will be a feature of the play that ought to make a strong appeal to devotees of fashion and lovers of the beautiful generally. In the Askwood Racecourse scene, for example, the dresses will be replicas of those worn by the leaders of fashion at Ascot and Goodwood last season. They represent the finest and most artistic work of ALIAS, DUCIET, JAY, PAQUIN, and WORTH. The Arcadian costumes and their accessories have been designed by WILHELM, and made by ALIAS, London.

An Augmented OPERATIC ORCHESTRA will be under the direction of VICTOR CHAMPION.

The Opera produced by CHARLES A. WENMAN.

THE BOOKING.
ADVANCE BOOKING APPLICATIONS for the first-night performance, BY LETTER ONLY, will now be received at the Criterion Theatre up to Saturday Next, 16th. R.S. and D.C., 7/6; Ordinary Box Plan opens at Elvy's on Monday, 18th.

is exceedingly small when compared with the great and busy interior. Similarly, our George-street Vestibule conveys but a slight notion of the enormous industry carried on behind it. When we tell you that our Studios and Workrooms together occupy the whole of the third-floor space from the Market-street end right up to the towering central dome, some 300 feet! and that, in addition, we have large framing works in the Markets and Basement, you will realise that our business, carrying a staff of nearly 80 Australians, is one of considerable magnitude. ILLAWARRA RACECOURSE COMPANY.
CAPITAL, 6000 IN 6000 SHARES OF £1 EACH.
This Company has been formed to acquire 171 Acres of Land immediately adjoining the Berry Railway Station, and to establish a Racecourse and conduct Races and other Sports thereon. The land is rich alluvial soil, level, drained, and richly grassed. As farm land alone it is of highest quality, and gives a rental of about £150 per annum. It is within one minute's walk of the Berry business centres, and as town lands will yet command a high value. The land comprises what was formerly the Berry District Racecourse. A track 1¼ mile round can be made at trifling expense.
Stands and other improvements will be erected immediately on designs of Messrs. Robertson and Marks.
The proximity to the railway station, which is less than one hour's run from Wollongong, gives this Course a great advantage.
It is proposed to hold 12 race meetings in the year, and on a moderate estimate of attendances a profit sufficient to give a dividend from 10 to 15 per cent. is estimated.
The District of Berry is central to large and growing towns such as Nowra, Milton, Kiama, Gerringong, Kangaroo Valley, Albion Park, Jamberoo, Shellharbour, Dapto, and Wollongong, whilst the Illawarra District has a population of about 60,000 people.
In addition to this, special trains will run from Sydney, as in the case of Wollongong races, where such trains are crowded with visitors to the races.
Of the 6000 Shares for issue, 5000 are already applied for, leaving only 1000 available.
Immediate application necessary, as list will Close on TUESDAY NEXT, at 12 o'clock.

A QUESTION OF POWER.
What is admired in a prize-fight is POWER, yet to over-value physical prowess is to put the whole question of real Power into a false perspective. The Black races have been forced to specialise on the physical side; the White race has been able to take a wider scope. Thus it is that the Black has a stronger skull; the White a stronger brain.
The reputation of the White race does not depend on what the white man can do with his fists, but with his fingers; not on the jars which his brain-box can stand, but the thoughts that his brain can think.
The affair at Reno is interesting; but, after all, it is a small thing—a trifle. The ring wherein White Australia has to fight its great industrial, commercial, and racial battle is the whole continent of Australia. YOU and WE are in that fight. Every time we build an "INVINCIBLE" Engine we are helping Australia; every time when YOU buy an "INVINCIBLE," the Australian Engine, you are helping Australia.
Do not "give aid and comfort" to the foreigner. Buy an "INVINCIBLE."
Besides, it is the BEST Engine, and has the MOST REASONABLE PRICE.

STANDARD OIL ENGINES are the highest grade of Engines on our markets. "Standard" Engines were recently awarded three Gold Medals and the Highest Award at the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition in 1909, for the best Marine and Stationary Oil Engine.
The Coco Bay Condensing Company, of Oregon, wrote to the Standard Company on March 10, 1910:—"It may be of interest to you to know that we have turned off about 28,000 miles with our Launch 'Sunrise,' equipped with one of your 20-h.p. Engines, and in so far as the engine is concerned, it does as good work as the day the boat was launched. We expect to build another boat and equip same with two 20-h.p. twin-screw engines."
All the best boats are fitted with "Standard" Engines. Large stocks are kept by the Commonwealth Agents.

IMPERIAL OIL ENGINES.
MORE COLD FACTS.—30,000 MILES NON-STOP!
Upper Lane Cove Ferry, Ltd., May 13, 1910.
To the Agent, Imperial Marine Oil Engines, Sydney.
Dear Sir,—It is now over 12 months since installing the TWO 8-h.p. IMPERIAL Engines in our launches KILLARA and NATIVE ROSE. These engines drive the hulls 50 miles daily (on holidays they go for 12 hours without a stop). The repairs have been almost nil, and, judging from present condition, they will be out of date before they wear out. Last year the KILLARA did 15,000 MILES, and, as you are aware, the work is very severe, dragging over sand flats, etc., etc., these facts go to show that the ferry could not be run without good engines, and our experience of the IMPERIAL Engine is that it IS A GOOD ONE.
Your truly, (Signed) C. E. LUDOWICI,
Chairman of Directors.
This admits of no comment. IMPERIAL Engines are beyond reproach. The LATEST and BEST.

NOTICE.—To all interested in the progress and upliftment of Humanity, it should be known that there is only one Theosophy and Theosophical Organisation throughout the World; yet there are many people, and some societies, who use these terms, but they are in no way a part of the movement, being practically efforts made to destroy its good influence and misdirect the public mind. THE STORY OF CLARICE.

BY KATHARINE TYNAN.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.)

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE SICK ROOM.

Agnes stood where he had left her in the hall, staring at the contents of the letter.

"My dear Hugo," it ran. "I dare no longer keep from you that Clary is very ill. I told her this morning that you had a right to know, and she acquiesced. At a time like this all considerations such as those that weighed with her sink out of sight. Come; I shall be looking anxiously for you.

"Yours affectionately, and in sore grief,
"ALEXANDER ELLIOTT."

His wedding day! Poor Hugo! She did the kind and sensible thing, prompted perhaps by her knowledge of what she herself would have desired. Neither Sir Humphrey nor Lady Godolphin were at home. There was a train up at 5 o'clock, which Hugo doubtless meant to catch. She sent an order round to the stable-yard for the dogcart, and it was at the door when Hugo came downstairs carrying his bag and just remembering that he had forgotten to give the order.

His eyes met hers and thanked her mutely. Then he stooped down, and their lips met.

"Jerry would not mind," he said. "Tell him I am glad."

"Yes, I will tell him. You will let us know as soon as possible?"

"Yes, dear; I will let you know."

"God-speed, Hugo!"

Jackson, the groom, who had grown up at the Court, averted his eyes from this loverlike parting, stooping down to talk to the old butler, who was stowing away Hugo's bag under the seat.

"Take care of aunt Cecily."

"I am not going to leave her any more—at least not for long. Jerry promises that we shall settle down here. Bartons is big enough for us and his mother. She must not be left either."

She went out with him, and stood by the step while he arranged things in the cart. She had comforted him more than she knew with that clinging woman's kiss, which had been more eloquent than many words.

He was in London by half-past 7, but there was no train from Liverpool-street till 9 o'clock. The sensible thing would have been to have dined at his club or a restaurant, but he felt the necessity for pushing on; he could not have borne the cessation of activity which turning aside for a meal would have seemed. At Liverpool-street he felt that he was on the way, and to pass the time of waiting he had a plate of cold meat in the refreshment-room, which might have been sawdust for all he tasted of it.

What an endless time the time took to pass! Nearly three days ago since the letter was written; and what might have not happened in the meanwhile? He had known of such night-journeys as that he was now taking, and had pitied the unhappy wretches, sitting still and wondering if they would be in time, while the train carried them on through the night. And now it was his own case.

He had only one companion down from Liverpool-street; an old clergyman who dozed, or seemed to doze, in his corner behind an open newspaper, which it was impossible to read by the dim light. Hugo glanced at him. He could only see the silver hair above the newspaper, and a pair of shoes, with spats on them, under the black, clerical legs. The shoes with the spats reminded him of Gilbert Rushforth.

While he looked the newspaper was lowered, and he met a pair of benignant eyes, very blue, in a rosy old face.

"Forgive a stranger for speaking to you," the old man said. "But I perceive that you are in trouble, sir. Perhaps you are not aware of how often and how heavily you have sighed."

"I beg your pardon," said Hugo. "I was not aware of it. I am sorry that you are burdened with so doleful a travelling companion."

"Don't apologise. Sorrow is common to us all; and I am afraid you are in sorrow."

"I am on my way to the sickbed of someone very dear to me. It may be"—he swallowed something in his throat—"worse than that."

"Poor boy! poor boy!" said the old man, tenderly. "You see how sorrows meet—yours at the beginning of your life mine nearly at the close. I pray that yours may be only a passing sorrow—that she you love may be spared to you." How had he known it was a 'she?' Hugo wondered vaguely. "As for me, I have lost my travelling companion of many a year. She has set out on her last journey without me. Those she gave me preceded her, and I am left alone. Yet I can still say—thank God!"

"You are happy, sir, in being able to say that," Hugo stammered. "But—I am very sorry for your grief."

"And I am sorry for yours. Take the sympathy and prayers of a chance wayfarer like myself. I pray that you may find hope at your journey's end. When the time comes that there is no hope, I pray that you may be able to find—God."

The train slackened and the station lights came into view. The old man stood up and took his bag from the rack.

"Good-night," he said, "and God-speed. I hope there will be comfort at the end of the journey."

The train had stopped and he got out. Hugo looked after him as he stepped sturdily along the platform, carrying his bag. He had left behind him a sense of comfort. Hugo was one of the many young men who, while being quite certain that they have a religion, bring it little into everyday life. He would have said he believed in religion as a living force. Could he help it, having known such elect souls in their various ways as Lady Godolphin, Alick Elliott, and Gilbert Rushforth? But religion had not come to uphold him in his hours of grief. Now, as he sank back in the corner of the carriage, he closed his eyes and said over to himself: "God is Love—God is Love." In a time of less strain and stress he would have been shy, like many young Englishmen of his class, of looking his religion in the face. A religion that could be talked about and felt was for priests and women. A man's religion was something that no one should surprise, hardly himself. Now he felt of a sudden that religion was a tangible thing, something to lay hold upon in grief and disappointments. The old clergyman had reminded him of Gilbert Rushforth in more ways than because he wore spats upon his shoes. He had a feeling as though that old friend had been with him and had talked to him out of the peace he had attained of the love and the kindness of God.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when he arrived at Mark's Tay station, and there was a walk of some three miles before him. He ran most of it, although he was encumbered by his bag. It was an exquisite night, and the cherry orchards were still in bloom—tall bridal ghosts, standing up in the soft obscurity of little orchards where the nightingale was singing. He thought of the Cot, the little old house with its windows like kind old eyes peering out from the masses of ivy. The garden of the Cot would be a riot of blossom to-night, and their nightingales would be singing in the scented dusk for their wedding night.

The villagers were all asleep although it was only 10 o'clock. There was nothing awake but the nightingales and the croaking frogs among the bulrushes. In the fields as he passed he could see the huddled shapes of sheep, their lambs lying by them in a happy content. At last the Manse was in sight. He could see one latticed upper window in the red gable of the house, Clary's room. Was she lying there, still living, and hoping for him? or—

Someone crossed the lit window quickly, a woman's shape, with a high cap upon her head—a hospital nurse apparently. The movement gave him hope. There might yet be things to do for Clary. And now he was come, would she not live for him? He had heard of people living for love, because someone could not do without them. Would not Clary live for him? She was always so sweet and gentle, so kind; if life depended at all on her will to live—and he had always heard that it did—would she not live for his sake if she had no will to live for her own?

Anne opened the door to him, and looked at him with eyes of sombre reproach. If he had never come their way would not the child still be happy, and their lives untroubled?

His heart fell with a suddenness, heavy as lead, at the sight of Anne's face. Would she look like that if there were any hope for Clary?

"She lives?" he asked.

"Oh, aye, she lives," answered Anne, and choked suddenly. "I'll tell the minister you're here," she said, pushing open the door of the minister's study, where the disorder of the table showed plainly the disorder of the master's mind. There had always been something meticulously tidy about the minister's way of disposing of his papers.

Standing by the table, his hat in his hand, feeling that the heavy heart dragged him to earth, Hugo noticed mechanically a heap of unopened letters and papers on the table. That was bad, very bad. There was not much hope about that sign. And outside the nightingales called to each other—the birds that should have sung their wedding hymns.

The door opened, and the minister came in. He looked haggard, as though he had not slept. His eyes blinked as though they could not bear the light. As he came forward with an extended hand the young man had an idea that the minister looked like a man devoured by remorse. There was more than natural grief to have wasted a man's face like that.

"My dear lad," he said. "She is very ill."

Then he suddenly put down his eyes on Hugo Venning's shoulder, and sobbed in a painful abandonment. Hugo stood still bearing it. It was dreadful to him that the minister should cry. But he supposed he had been carrying his grief all alone. He wished that he could cry. It would be better than to have a heart heavier than lead dragging one down to the earth.

"You should have told me before," he said, moistening his dry lips.

"It has not been so bad till these last few days. The doctor said she would get over it—her nervous system had broken down as the result of shock. He said she would get over it, but—there has been fever so long, and she is burnt up, poor little darling, exhausted. Now that the fever has gone she lies like a snowflake on her pillow. She has no will to live."

"If it is only that she shall have the will. She will not break both our hearts. When may I see her? To-night?"

"I do not know if the nurse will allow it to-night, but I shall see. Since she does not sleep it will not disturb her sleep to see you."

Hugo looked at him with a dull sense of wonder. The minister seemed so disturbed, so broken up by his display of emotion. But something of the tense rigidity had passed from his face. He looked more human than he had done before that momentary breaking-down.

Now he came and laid a kind hand on the young man's shoulder.

"You want food, my lad," he said. "You have had a journey. But how is it you came so late? We have been expecting you for the last two days."

"I was at the Court. Your letter followed me about. I only received it this afternoon."

"And travelled up all that way? Kind boy! Anne shall give you some food. I think Clary has hoped for your coming. I will see the nurse."

"I can't sleep without seeing her; and I don't want any food. I had some at Liverpool-street. If it would do her any harm, at least let me see her from where she will not see me."

"I will hear what the nurse says."

NOTES.

The Institute of Journalists.—The members of this association, like Blackburne, seem prepared to play anyone at anything. They have played several matches, "billiards and chess," now on Monday they are going to play the Public Service Association at "chess and Bridge."

Sydney School of Arts C.C. Championship Tourney.—Recent results: Bradshaw beat Calvert, Calvert beat Cummings.

Sydney School of Arts C.C. Handicap Tourney.—Recent results: M'Naught beat De Flines, Bruce beat Gluck, Coombs beat Bruce, Malmgren beat Bruce, Mair beat Ford, Danlyn beat Baikie, Mair beat Bruce, Ford beat Paul, Baikie beat Paul.

Blindfold Simultaneous Chess.—Johner, in Boston, played 12 games, winning 8, losing 3, and drawing 1.

Mieses and Spielmann.—At Regensburg Spielmann defeated Mieses by 5-1 and 2 draws.

The King of Games and the King of Beasts.—Signor Forilli has been playing games of chess with Signor Cavaziotti in a lion's den. "Beyond brushing the pieces over with his paw" (says B.C.M.) "and inconveniently lying couchant at the side of the board, so that one of the players must needs lean over his body to make his moves, the king of beasts showed no aversion to the king of games."

Simultaneous Chess.—Leonhardt played 19 games at Glogau, and won 16, lost 2, and drew 1.

On Swapping.—The value of a piece depends upon three things—its intrinsic worth, its position, and its place in your scheme of attack and defence. The intrinsic worth of one bishop is of course exactly the same as that of another bishop, and obviously less than that of a queen. The position of a piece may increase its value immensely: it may be developed, and, so to speak, in full possession of all its powers; or it may be lying undeveloped, and those powers dormant. Again, whatever its position, it may be the key to your game—guarding a mating square, for example. There is a great temptation for a player who feels inferior to his opponent to swap off. In theory this is all right, because if carried on long enough it ensures a king apiece—and a draw. But we all know that in actual practice it is apt to work out far otherwise. One reason is that the "swapper"—if there isn't such a word there ought to be—is all the time exchanging developed pieces for comparatively undeveloped. Of course, in the receiver of odds, judicious "swapping" is the best possible policy, as the actual value of the handicap is increased with every exchange. The player who develops soonest will be best situated for exchanging—as for everything else.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

LIFE AND LETTERS OF WILLIAM BECKFORD.

Mr. Lewis Melville has produced an excellent account of "The Life and Letters of William Beckford" (Heinemann). It is strange that a man who won the praise of Byron, Lockhart, and Disraeli should have attracted so little attention from biographers. Beckford was certainly one of the most interesting men of his time, and in any country but England he would have been one of its most notable men. His "Vathek" has become a classic, and his books of travel had wide popularity in their day. But Beckford was one of those who have tried to make life itself a fine art, and it is as an artist of life that he chiefly attracts, or, rather, has failed to attract, attention. The son of a millionaire, he was brought up under the eye of Chatham, and the younger Pitt was his playfellow. As a lad he was petted by Voltaire and Madame de Stael, and in later years he was the intimate of Nelson, Portland, and Disraeli. Yet until Garnett wrote his account for the "Dictionary of National Biography" the only attempt at a life was a miserable production published in 1859. The author has gone far to remedy the defect, and in particular the long series of letters written by Beckford between 1777 and 1844 is characteristic and instructive. These have been made available by the courtesy of the present Duke of Hamilton—Beckford's surviving daughter married the tenth Duke—and there is a good deal of other correspondence as well.

The builder of Forthill led a secluded life, even from boyhood, and this accounts largely for the suspicions of his fox-hunting neighbours, and for the stories, usually defamatory, that were circulated about him. He was, in fact, accused of most crimes in the calendar, including that of poisoning his wife at Cintra. The high walls around Forthill were supposed to conceal unimaginable orgies. It was said he had a herd of dwarfs with whom blasphemous rites and magical incantations were performed. The charitable explained these aberrent doings by "mental derangement." As a matter of fact, he merely had nothing in common with his commonplace critics, and he had the courage to live his own life when such a proceeding was flagrantly immoral. The Beckfords settled in Jamaica during the seventeenth century, and became famous planters there. The father of the author of "Vathek" died when his son was 10 years old, but he had had a distinguished career. Born in Jamaica in 1709, he was educated at Westminster, settled in London, sat in Parliament, and became Lord Mayor. Chatham was godfather to his son William, born in 1760, and saw that great pains were taken with his education. The boy was well worth the trouble. At 13, as Chatham put it, he was all air and fire. In some ways he would have been better at school and university. It was decided to keep him from both. When he was 17 he was sent to Geneva, where he made the acquaintance of Bonnet, de Saussure, and Voltaire—who was then 85, and a mere skeleton. The boy read enormously, and learned to thoroughly despise convention. His letters of the time are full of what sensible people call decadent aestheticism. Having returned to Forthill in 1779, he made his first essay in literature, the "Biographical Memoirs of Extraordinary Painters." This was a burlesque performance, but its brilliant satire on the Dutch and Flemish schools was remarkable work for a boy of 17 or so. At any rate his vivid imagination was saved by a keen sense of the ridiculous. With regard to "Vathek," the legend that it was written at 22 in one sitting is dispelled by the correspondence. As a matter of fact Beckford worked at it for several years from 1782 onward. Henley published his translation from the French in 1786, but was apparently guilty of a breach of faith in so doing, and the Episodes which were to be related in the Hall of Eblis were not ready. Beckford travelled about Europe almost incessantly until he was 34, when he settled down at Forthill, and built his wall to keep out the foxhunters—a wall seven or eight miles in extent—and there presently the fever of building seized upon him. It occupied him for the next 20 years. At the same time he was an enthusiastic collector, and got together one of the finest libraries in Europe. In 1882 it realised nearly eighty thousand pounds, and would be worth perhaps twice as much to-day. Naturally, Beckford hated Horace Walpole with a furious hatred, only appeased by the Strawberry Hill sale of 1824—though Beckford was then over 80. In the meantime Forthill had been sold (1822), mainly owing to depreciation of property in the West Indies, and Beckford had settled down at Bath, where, in spite of his losses, he was still a wealthy man. He died there in 1844, retaining his wonderful vitality to the close.

ON AND OFF DUTY IN ANNAM.

Gabrielle Vassal's "On and Off Duty in Annam" (Heinemann) is a very readable account of French Indo-China to-day. The population of about five million peoples the delta of the Red River, the lower valleys, and shores of the China Sea, and the lower delta of the Mekong. Besides the Annamese are to be found the aboriginal inhabitants, the Mois, and several other races, while the Chinese carry on most of the small trade. They make good profits out of their practical monopoly of the rice trade, opium, and alcohol, though the French tax them prettily heavily. Annam proper is a Protectorate with 10 provinces, but the native administration is under direct control of French officials. From about 100 B.C. onwards for a thousand years the Annamese were governed by Chinese mandarins. In the tenth century more or less ephemeral local dynasties were founded, and for the most part Annam maintained its independence. At the beginning of last century it dominated Indo-China. The French Protectorate was recognised after Admiral Courbet's operations begun in 1883. The author is the English wife of a French army doctor, who was ordered to Annam a few weeks after their marriage. The doctor was appointed to the Pasteur Institute of Nhatrang. This place is a little fishing village with a white colony of 20 or 30 persons. The institute was directed by Dr. Yersin, one of Pasteur's first pupils, and a pioneer of plague serum and had just been erected when the party reached it in 1904. Rubber plantations at the time of writing provided the institute with an income of about £800 a year, and Yersin also grew tobacco, coffee, and coca for cocaine. An amusing picture of life in the village is given. One of the curious sights to be seen was droves of a thousand or more ducks—artificially incubated. The problem of the House of Lords is satisfactorily solved in Annam. Titles drop one degree with each generation, so that a family that does nothing soon loses its distinction. On the other hand a successful agriculturist is ennobled, though the "literary" mandarin is held in highest esteem. Native governors have no fixed salary, being supposed to be supported by voluntary offerings. The religious fervour of the people is concentrated upon ancestor-worship, the influence of which, says the author, is almost entirely good. Various other chapters give bright and informative accounts of Annamese manners and customs, of journeys among the inland hills, where the Mois dwell, of the agricultural station of the institute, and of an exciting tiger-hunt. There are numerous excellent illustrations.

MAKERS OF JAPAN.

In "Makers of Japan," Mr. J. Morris writes a series of twenty-two solid and careful studies of modern Japanese, statesmen and their work. Modern Japan, the author reminds us, dates from 1853, though there were patriots in advance of their age in the first half of the nineteenth century. One lost his life in a terrible earthquake, one was executed by order of the Sho-gun, a third was stabbed to death by turbulent "wave-men." A significant feature of that time was the decline of Buddhism, and the revival of Shintoism, which, by its stress on ancestor worship, is the most direct incentive to patriotism it is possible to conceive. Among the makers of the new time here specially dealt with are his Majesty the Emperor, Marquis Ito, Marquis Yamagata, Marquis Oyama, Count Itagaki, Count Matsukata Masayoshi, and Admiral Togo. The author very successfully accomplishes his purpose by writing history through biography. The book, which was first published in 1906, might, with advantage, have had one or two chapters added, but so far as it goes it presents a very thorough and graphic account of the wakening of New Japan. (Dymock.)

HENRY OF NAVARRE.

The author known as "Le Petit Homme Rouge," whose account of the Court of the Tuilleries, issued in 1907, attracted much notice, now produces a study of "The Favourites of Henry of Navarre," which is much above the average level of French memoir-writing. Henry of Navarre was one of the most amorous of kings, and a book such as this might easily have been a mere "chronique scandaleuse." The career of the good Henry is, of course, sufficiently dreadful whatever way you look at it; but though the author does not discount detail, he treats his subject in a seriously historical spirit. The period, too, was one in which love and war seldom stopped contending for the mastery, and the story is full of those desperate adventures that have attracted the makers of romance for generations. The gallery of fair women includes portraits of "La Reine Margot," Diane de Gramont, Gabrielle d'Estrees, Henriette d'Entragues, and the Princess de Conde. All five exercised strong formative influence on the career of Navarre. But that is only the beginning of the story. In an appendix is given a list of sixty women whose names history or tradition has coupled with his. Henry of Navarre has become so much a romantic myth that a scholarly author is certainly not wasting his time in preparing a veridical history. The hero was not the handsome figure he is painted; he was careless of his attire and even personal cleanliness, and he suffered severely from indigestion. With regard to the rights and wrongs of the St. Bartholomew massacre, the author reminds us how largely personal and political motives were at work all through this age of murder. The mother of Henry had been more or less responsible, for instance, for the murder of three hundred Catholic gentlemen at Pau, and whether or no Coligny directly instigated the assassination of the Guise, "certain it is that under the search light of modern investigation the Admiral no longer appears an impeccable character." So far as Henry himself is concerned, it is at least to his credit that the black and white sides of his character seldom mixed. (Dymock.)

THE RAMPARTS OF EMPIRE.

In "The Ramparts of Empire" (Black) Mr. Frank Fox writes "A view of the navy from an imperial standpoint," and acknowledges with gratitude the distinguished courtesy of Lord Fisher, who, because this was to be a book about the navy from the point of view of a "citizen of the overseas dominions" gave him certain facilities. Also there is a dedication to Nelson, in which the children of the oversea dominions, including Mr. Frank Fox, come to pay reverence to that hero's "surviving soul reincarnated within the navy generation after generation"—and a great deal more to the same effect. As a matter of fact, the book is simply a popular account of the Navy, past and present, written without any attempt at expert treatment, and suitable for the use of the young, who will doubtless appreciate the spirited, not to say lurid, pictures supplied by Norman Wilkinson and Rose Barton. Within these limitations the little book is brightly and vigorously written. Those who buy prize-books for boys might find it worth looking at. The publishers remark that "Mr. Frank Fox, whose services in the cause of Imperial defence are as well known as his picturesqueness as a writer, sees the navy in a spirit of vivid enthusiasm"—a gracious advertisement that must be dear to the heart of any imperial pioneer.

SCIENCE FROM AN EASY CHAIR.

For several years past Sir Ray Lankester has contributed an occasional science column to the London "Daily Telegraph," and we may expect these articles to be reprinted in a series of volumes, with added illustrations. One such volume was published in 1908, and a second on a rather more ambitious scale, now reaches us. Sir Ray is perhaps rather too much inclined to write down to an uninstructed public, and he betrays an almost nervous desire to choose popular topics. But whatever he writes is sure to be fresh and stimulating, and these little essays are well worth gathering together for a wider audience. In the 63 chapters Sir Ray chats interestingly about a great variety of topics, from the ancestry of the horse and the history of dragons to the maternal care of molluscs and the worries of clothes moths. Biological topics naturally predominate, and amongst other things there are several chapters on Darwinism and on prehistoric man. The numerous illustrations add greatly to the value of the text. Sir Ray's experiment seems to have proved there is a home for science in English daily journalism, which so far has conspicuously neglected it. It is, of course, not easy to write a science column for a public with little or no scientific knowledge. The choice of topics is rather severely limited, and the temptations to write either above or below the level of the reader are both equally dangerous. We do not think, however, that the "chair" should be made too "easy." Technicality is, of course, useless, but in practice it will be found that quite a number of readers will safely follow a general argument, and it is better to give them credit for a little mental effort than to treat them as if they were babes and sucklings. It is much to be hoped that Sir Ray Lankester's example will be followed by others. Few, perhaps, could rival his special charm, but many could help in a work which our own experience suggests is well worth while. Science is apt to be rendered arid and sterile by its exponents, and the vice of specialisation tends to make it in large measure unintelligible even to the scientist. But just here lies the field of the interpreter, and it is one he will never be able to exhaust. (From George Robertson.)

RECENT FICTION.

E. J. Rath's "The Sixth Speed" (Cassell) is a sufficiently exciting story which the discreet author has refrained from planning on a grandiose scale. Sanderson is a millionaire's chauffeur, who invents a motor boat that can race along at a hundred and twenty miles an hour. He carries out a sort of piratical crusade against millionaire yacht owners, and gives the British navy a lively time until in an hour of peril he hands his invention over to the Empire.

Alfred Gibson's "London and a Girl" (Cassell), in spite of some obvious crudity, is a story that succeeds in becoming interesting. The narrative opens with a girl left to mother four young children on nothing a week. Her experiences as an artist's model, chorus girl, lady's companion, and so on, are described with simple realism. Three men offer to marry her, but the course of true love is as tortuous as usual. Ultimately she achieves a great success at the Paris Opera House; but it was a still greater success to marry Paul.

Mr. William J. Locke is as clever and brilliant as ever in "Simon the Jester" (John Lane). Simon le Gre is a modern young man of thirty-eight, well-to-do, on the road to Cabinet rank. He learns that he has only six months to live, and spends the time playing at a cynical sort of Providence. This leads him to give away his fortune to a stockbroker, who is subsequently hammered, and to rescue his young friend Dale from a lady who is the daughter of a lion-tamer, and the possessor of a gambling husband in Algiers. In doing so he falls in love with her himself, and is simultaneously cured by a marvellous operation at the hands of an unknown French surgeon who did not know what he was attempting. He is, of course, socially and politically ruined. In real life he would have gone into the lion-taming business and made a fortune. Out of deference to the susceptibilities of English novel readers, he devotes himself to social work in the East End, and no doubt in the next chapter after the last he becomes a socialist Labour member and a devoted exponent of No Veto.

Richard Dehan's "The Dop Doctor" (Heinemann) has been described by the critics as a book in a thousand, and some of them have compared the author to Balzac in lavishness and ruthlessness. For once in a way these judgments are well founded. The author does not write for children, or for the impatient reader with a small soul. His tale is long and involved, ragged in action, disjointed in incident, overcrowded and overwrought. But it is real, and vital, and passionately human. It is true that, like Balzac, the author has created real men and real women—a crowded gallery of them. As someone once wrote: "A steady course of Balzac reduces our living friends to shadows." His characters have a kind of fervent fiery-coloured existence. They dominate us, and defy scepticism." Just that can be said of Owen Saxham, and Beauvayse, and Lynette, and Lady Hannah, and a dozen more the author creates to dwell in Gueldersdorp through the weary months of the great siege. South Africa and the war are right in the background—a dark and sombre background against which silhouettes the tragedy of many lives. We believe in those lives. We believe they could not have been, and ought not to have been, other than they were. We believe in the good women and in the bad men. We learn to believe the white radiance of life is fashioned from many-coloured stains, and we learn to believe that as there is no beauty and no joy, so there is no suffering and no sin, shall return void from the abyss, shall fail to accomplish that whereunto it has been sent.

SHORTER NOTICES.

Melville and Mullen publish an interesting little essay on "The Creed of Athanasius the Great," by Dr. Papaconstantinos, Archimandrite of the Greek Orthodox Church in Melbourne. Athanasius's chief claim to fame is that he did not write the Athanasian Creed, which was probably written in the fifth century by the Bishop of Arles, or, as some say, the Bishop of Tapsa. Athanasius was a Bishop of Alexandria in the fourth century, who distinguished himself by his conflicts with the Arians, who employed the most satanic devices to lessen his moral prestige and secure his successive banishments. He attended the Nicene Council, and assisted to draw up its creed; but certainly had nothing to do with the "Quicunque Vult," which did not appear for nearly two centuries after his death, and which perpetuates the Western "heresy" that the Holy Spirit proceeds both from the Father and from the Son.

Mr. Webster Jenkinson's "Bookkeeping and Accounting" (Arnold) is a thoroughly good advanced text-book, intended for students preparing for the examinations of the Institute of Chartered Accountants, the Institute of Bankers, and similar bodies. A knowledge of double entry is assumed.

In "International Language and Science" (Constable) F. G. Donnan translates half a dozen essays by Lorenz, Ostwald, Pfaundler, and others on the need for an "auxiliary language" for science work, and on the steps taken to prepare such a medium of communication by an international commission with its headquarters at Paris. The language is called Ido, and the vocabulary contains 5400 stems. There have been more than sixty attempts at an artificial universal language, but this is claimed to be the first constructed on thoroughly scientific principles. The secretary is Herr A. Waltisbuhl, 46 Bahnhofstrasse, Zurich. The system in general is a modification of Esperanto.

The text of the pieces for Thomas Beecham's grand opera season, Covent Garden, 1910, are issued as sixpenny pamphlets. "Muguette," "Tales of Hoffmann," and "Werther" come as specimens. The proposed repertoire includes the "Koanga of Delius," the "Henry the VIII. of Saint Saens," and the "Feuersnot" of Strauss, besides the same writer's "Salome" and "Elektra," and a good complement of Verdi, Wagner, and Mozart, with a dish or two of Puccini thrown in.

The mystically inclined will delight in G. H. Miller's "Dreams" (Werner Laurie). Most of the text is authentic interpretation of the following sort:—"To dream of phosphorus is indicative of evanescent joys;" "if you see photographs it is a sign of approaching deception;" "to dream of pickles denotes that you will follow worthless pursuits." The author, who is fully convinced he is part of the Divine Mind, does not mean to be funny, but he is—very.

Mr. H. S. Hall has prepared a new "School Algebra" (Macmillan). The last edition of "Hall and Knight" in Dr. Knight's lifetime was the sixth, issued in 1890. Since then it has undergone 15 reprints, besides three new editions. The present book is on closely similar lines, with some concessions to the modern passion for graphs.

Werner Laurie issues a shilling edition of "Biography for Beginners, with 40 Diagrams by G. K. Chesterton, and edited by E. Clerihew, B.A." This exquisitely humorous work should be in every home—the home will always be fully occupied in hunting for the humour.

A selection from the works of Emerson is the latest addition to Bell's "Masters of Literature." The extracts have been happily chosen, and Emerson rather lends himself to such treatment. (Dymock.)

NOTES.

The tourney to decide the draughts championship of New Zealand is in full swing. Fourteen prizes are to be allotted:—1st, championship and £16; 2nd, £11; 3rd, £8; 4th, £7; 5th, £5 10s; 6th, £4; 7th, £3; 8th, £2; and 9th, a trophy.

GLASGOW CHAMPIONSHIP.

Mr. J. L. Collingwood has defeated Mr. J. Murray in the final tie by 1 to nil, with three draws, and gained the above title. The new champion was for many years the secretary of the Hutchesontown Liberals, and was the means of that club taking a foremost place in the city when everything seemed against it. He also served the Glasgow Draughts Association well as secretary for six years, and saw it extend from four to ten clubs during his term of office. To him also is due much of the credit of the inauguration of the championship, and the securing of the trophy upon which his name will now be inscribed. As a player in club matches, Mr. Collingwood holds a great record, having only lost one game in the past four seasons.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Mr. Julius Knight, who made his farewell appearance in Sydney on Wednesday, after a continuous engagement which will have kept him for three and a half years at the J. C. Williamson theatres, is understood to be a well-to-do man, so that his return from England, for which he sails after his Melbourne season later in the year, is problematical. No actor, not being an actor-manager, has remained in Australia so long, or played so many famous modern parts. Many people have forgotten by this time that Mr. Knight's debut was under George Rignold's management at Her Majesty's Theatre on October 17, 1891. The piece was H. A. Jones's "The Dancing Girl," with Miss Laura Villiers as the Quaker-dancer Drusilla Ives, and Mr. Clifton-Alderson as the Duke. These English artists failed to please, and in these columns Mr. Knight, in the juvenile part as Christison, was hailed as the only one of the newcomers to make a genuine success—"in his earnestness he was always impressive." On returning to England the young actor made a hit as Napoleon in "A Royal Divorce;" he next appeared as Andreas in Sardou's "Theodora," at the London Olympic; and in 1892 played Julian Belford, the hero in "The Prodigal Daughter," at Drury Lane Theatre. This character he sustained for eight months in New York, and then joined Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum for more than two years in such parts as Valentine in the "Faust" drama revival, as Louis of France in "Becket," and in the production of "King Arthur" (1895), subsequently playing Romeo, Orlando, and similar parts with Miss Fortescue. His Australian popularity arose from his engagement by Messrs. Williamson and George Musgrove in 1897. It was on April 17, 1897 that he played one of his best parts here as Rudolph Rassendyl in "The Prisoner of Zenda," when "first appearances" were made by Ada Ferrar, Miss Elliott Page, Mr. Gaston Mervale, and Mr. W. F. Hawtrey. These artists later ensured great runs for "The Sign of the Cross," "A Royal Divorce," "Under the Red Robe," and "Harbour Lights," so that eventually Mr. Knight remained here for two and a half years. On August 21, 1899, he reopened in London at the Adelphi Theatre as the hero (Lieut. Dare, R.N.) in "With Flying Colours," was prominent at the Court and Garrick theatres, and also appeared as Sir Horace Welby in "Forget-me-Not," in a society revival of the play in which Mrs. Asquith was the Stephanie, and the Hon. Ethel Cadogan the ingenue. Several London engagements and a tour with Mrs. Langtry were followed by a long tour in "Resurrection," with Miss Lily Brayton as leading lady. In this way it was not until the end of 1903 that the actor was back in Sydney to make another great success in "Monsieur Beaucaire," followed by "The Eternal City" and Tolstoi's "Resurrection." This stay lasted until March, 1906, and a few months later Mr. Knight was appearing as Polixenes in Beerbohm Tree's London production of "A Winter's Tale." Mr. Knight reopened in Sydney as "Robin Hood" in March, 1907, and has been touring the capitals of Australasia ever since in comedy-dramas which do not now need calling to mind. Throughout he has consistently sustained the great role of his life—that of "a good artist."

At the Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society's concert at the Town Hall on Wednesday, July 20, Herr Slapoffski will conduct Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2, in D," pronounced "the most interesting, though not the greatest, of the nine." We read also that "metaphorically speaking, Beethoven's genius in this Symphony is seen standing at the extreme limits of the domains fenced in by Hadyn and Mozart. It still wears the garments of the eighteenth century, and they dictate an orderly and elegant form of speech; but in the Finale, Beethoven is wearing them with an occasional carelessness that is indicative of that future when he laid them aside, and devised others more in accordance with his own personality." This work occupied a considerable portion of the year 1802, and has been described by Hector Berlioz as "noble, vigorous, and spirited." There will be a first performance here of "A Faust Overture," originally intended by Wagner as the first movement of a "Faust" Symphony. The composer described it as showing Faust in solitude, "the utter dissatisfaction, disappointment, and unrest of the man who has 'abstained, renounced,' who has put aside 'the joy of living' in order to achieve the ideal of his soul by profound and sustained study, and who, at last, wakes only to perceive that in striving towards the unrealisable, he has missed also the practical purport of life." The music will be found imbued with grandeur and beauty. Such favourite pieces as the "Oberon" overture, and the suite composed by Grieg for Henrik Ibsen's poem-drama, "Peer Gynt," will also be performed, and the duet from the second act of "Lohengrin" will be rendered by Mme. Slapoffski and Miss Muriel Barton.

According to the London "Daily Chronicle," the "Passing of the Third Floor Back" has been translated into Russian, and is to be staged at St. Petersburg early next month. We also learn that Mr. Forbes Robertson, who is now in England, cleared £60,000 by the play during its seven months' run in New York. Mr. Matheson Lang and Miss Hutin Britton, who will not return to Sydney, and are, therefore, in their farewell two weeks with this successful play, witnessed it during its eventful season in New York. In other ways Mr. Lang had some interesting experiences in connection with his engagement at the New (Millionaires') Theatre. It seems that the management began sending him wireless messages before the steamer had sighted Sandy Hook. "The first four," he remarks, "were all right, but the fifth made me gasp, for it inquired whether I were ready to play Charles Surface in 'School for Scandal' on the Monday, and Uncle Tom in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' on the Tuesday. I was about to reply that I doubted my ability to undertake the latter part, when another message came, asking if to Uncle Tom I could add Little Willie in 'East Lynne,' Charley's Aunt in 'Charley's Aunt,' and Hamlet. This made me think, and eventually I discovered that my wife had persuaded the Marconi operator to let her have some forms and envelopes; but for a moment or two I was badly 'rattled,' as the Americans say."

"Mr. Preedy and the Countess," R. C. Carton's latest comedy, has been produced by the Clarke-Meynell management at the Melbourne Theatre Royal. Australian playgoers have seen all the best of the pieces by this playwright, who is a brother of Sir Anderson Critchett, and a son of a once famous London oculist of that name. Edward Terry brought "Liberty Hall" to this country, whilst the Brough's produced "Sunlight and Shadow," "Lord and Lady Algy," "Wheels Within Wheels," and "Lady Huntworth's Experiment." Mr. Hugh Ward more recently joined Mr. George Willoughby in producing "Mr. Hopkinson." The new play brought forward the new star company formed in London this year by Mr. George Willoughby. In this way Mr. David James appeared as Mr. Preedy, "a perfect good sort of worm, with a habit of turning now and again when trodden on." Mr. Willoughby figured as Bounsall, head partner with "the worm" in Bounsall's Emporium. Late at night Bounsall visits Preedy's rooms with Joanna, Countess of Rushforth (Miss Mab. Paul), with whom he is "platonically eloping," and quarters her on Preedy with the explanation that "he has been suddenly called away to the dying bed of a rich godfather." He promises to call in the morning with a motor to take Joanna to the house of a respected aunt, there to abide in honourable chaperonage until the decree is made absolute by her offended husband. A farcical situation is thus created, ending eventually in Bounsall's marriage to the heiress of his godfather, and the consequent return of the volatile duchess to her husband. The piece was warmly received, and was the occasion of much laughter. The Willoughby Company will open at the Criterion Theatre in "The Night of the Party," opening their season on October 1.

"The Orchid" has been revived in Melbourne, after some years' interval, by the Royal Comic Opera Company. The piece had not been seen since the late George Lauri played the part of Meakin, and it is now the new English comedian, Mr. Bertie Wright, who "does all the dirty work." Miss Fanny Dango, as Lady Violet Anstruther, now sings "Little Mary," but Miss Florence Young repeats a former role as Josephine Zaccary. Mr. Langford Kirby and Mr. Andrew Higginson now figure as the mixed-up bridegrooms, and the popular musical comedy was joyously received. The J. C. Williamson management will shortly begin to move their attractions round again, so that the "Royal Comics" will be in Brisbane for the Show dates, thus replacing "The Dollar Princess" Company, which leaves for the Queensland capital a fortnight hence. The fact must not be lost sight of that this evening's production of "A Knight for a Day" will be for two weeks only. The new English farcical comedy company is to open at Her Majesty's in "A Brass Bottle" on July 23.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY HENRY W. LUCY.)

Lords and Commons.—Situation of the House.—The Australian High Commissioner.—Hapless Shareholders.—The Price of Novels—Ratca'chers.

WESTMINSTER, June 3.

The champions of the Peers in the London press continue to plead for indefinite postponement of the issue between the two Houses. Having had their fling, played for high stakes and lost, they now somewhat meanly shelter themselves under the aegis of the memory of the dead King, and whimper for a truce. Since this new manoeuvre has started nothing of practical form has taken place, either in favour of it or in contravention. The death of King Edward naturally, automatically, led to cessation of the political campaign, which had reached a critical stage at the date of the adjournment for the spring recess. For the last four weeks no leading statesman on either side has appeared on the public platform. Thus the country is left in doubt as to what view leaders of parties are disposed to take of the matter, or whether indeed they have thought it worth while to consider it.

The situation is so closely defined, and the issue so clear, that it does not seem likely busy men would feel disposed to devote precious time upon what is actually a nebulous proposal put forth without authority. A truce can be arranged only on the principle of give and take. What its promoters call "The Truce of God" relieves the House of Lords from a dangerous position into which they have wilfully, deliberately, thrust their heads, whilst it deprives the majority of the House of Commons of the advantage of a hardly-fought campaign, extending over 15 months.

Sir George Reid has filled for only a few months the post of representative in London of the Commonwealth of Australia. But he has already established a distinguished position. Discovery was early made that he is endowed with the rare, consequently highly-prized, gift of after-dinner speaking. It may be common in Australia, as it certainly is in the United States. With us, it is an exceptional possession. As a rule, public dinners in London are made depressing by delivery of a long course of halting addresses, proposing toasts, and responding thereto. Lord Rosebery has many claims upon the admiration of the nation. None is more warmly, gratefully acknowledged than the charm and grace of his post-prandial orations.

I happened to hear Sir George Reid speak the other night at the Royal Literary Fund dinner. His predecessors and successors were, as became the tradition of the occasion, highly distinguished men. Sir George's speech was decidedly the best of the bunch. He brought to the stale ceremony the breeziness of a more youthful land. Nature has favoured him with most of the elements that ensure success—a good voice, an excellent memory, a fine turn of phrasing, and, above all, a keen sense of humour. Before the King's death interrupted the flow of public festivals, the High Commissioner of Australia was present at most of them, and seemed ever to have something fresh to say.

The final call of £5 per share of the Law Guarantee Trust Society, though not unexpected, falls as a crushing blow upon the hapless shareholders. A peculiarity of the situation, illustrating the confidence placed in the concern, is shown by the large holdings of distinguished men. The Lord Chief Justice is interested to the extent of £20,000. Lord Beauchamp, sometime Governor of New South Wales, at present a member of his Majesty's Government, holds a similar number of shares, whilst Mr. Justice Grantham put in £30,000, every penny of which is forfeited. Sir Edward Clarke, ex-Attorney General, was also a large shareholder, and one of the directors testified to his belief in the soundness of the business by holding stock amounting to £61,000. This also is swept away in the great debacle.

The company is comparatively new, having been registered in 1888 with a capital of a million. Matters looked so promising that a few years later it was increased to two millions and a half, allotment being scrambled for by shrewd business men on the Bench and at the Bar. Only one pound per share was called up, the first note of alarm being sounded when, a short time ago, an additional £4 per share was swept into the company's coffers. Now the remaining half of the £10 shares goes into the same bottomless sea.

Surprise is expressed that novel writers like Mr. Anthony Hope, Mr. H. G. Wells, Miss Beatrice Harraden, and others who can command their own prices in the market of the six shilling novel, should be content to start the daring enterprise of the London publisher who announces their works in two-shilling form. One tells me that the publisher simplifies matters by guaranteeing the author's fee on a scale at least equal to what would be payable on the average sale of his or her work issued at six shillings. The experiment is keenly watched alike by authors and booksellers. With neither class is it popular. The sub-committee of the Society of Authors certainly represents the general view of the body they represent when they strongly advise maintenance of six shillings as the standard price of new fiction.

It is a curious thing I have not seen noted that the fashion established only within recent years of charging 6s for a new novel is a recurrence to ancient custom. In the library at the British Museum is a slim volume published in 1786 containing a list of publications since the year Queen Anne came to the throne, with their price. It was then the custom to publish novels in three volumes ("Cecilia" ran to five), and they were priced per volume. Thus Fanny Burney's "Evelina," published in 1778 in three volumes, sold for 7s 6d. The volumes of "Tristram Shandy," published in 1759, are priced at 5s. The "Vicar of Wakefield," seven years later came out in two volumes, selling at "5s sewn, 6s bound." Anyone possessing a copy of this edition would make a nice little profit to-day. The original edition of Bunyan's "Pilgrims' Progress" was priced 1s 6d. A copy of it recently sold at Sotheby's for £1475.

It was Walter Scott whose abounding popularity put up the price of novels. To begin with the advance was moderate. "Waverley" and "Guy Mannering," issued in three volumes, sold at 7s a volume. That was the modest way of setting forth the price. As an odd volume was obviously of no use, it meant that the purchaser paid a guinea for the book. Scott's price was next put up to 24s. For "Ivanhoe" 30s was charged, whilst "Quentin Durward" and later novels were priced at a guinea and a half, a charge consecrated for 70 years. Mrs. Gaskell's novels were issued at that price. A short time ago her old publishers, Smith, Elder, issued a new edition of her works, beautifully printed on fine paper, handy in size, with a specially written introduction to each volume, the whole eight volumes costing little more than the guinea and a half our forbears paid for a single novel. He was a bold publisher who first laid sacrilegious hands upon the covenant of a guinea and a half per novel entered into by generations of publishers with authors, reducing the selling price to 6s for a single volume. He would be a bolder man still who attempted to revert to the old practice.

Some authority with exceptionally sensitive ear has discovered a flaw in the tone of Big Ben. In sounding one of the quarters of an hour it is, in infinitesimal measure, flat or sharp, I forget which, but it really doesn't matter. Big Ben is good enough for residents in Westminster and for the multitudinous crowd that through the revolving year pass to and fro by the Clock Tower. Its striking of the hour and the quarters is to me at once the most musical and most familiar melody. It is imitated, not with perfect success, in distant parts of the Empire. I remember many years ago, landing at Bombay homeward bound from Japan, being awakened in the morning by sound of the old tune. It came from a neighbouring clock tower built and endowed by a wealthy native, who had heard the chimes at Westminster. Oddly enough, considering the proximity of the tower, the striking never breaks in upon debate either in the Lords or Commons.

THE DERBY.

(BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, June 3.

There are more ways than one of seeing the classic race for the Derby, and there are many ways of not seeing it at all, even though one is on Epsom Downs specifically for that purpose. No one of the hundreds of thousands of spectators sees the whole of the race, and a vast majority are satisfied with the momentary flash of colour, and the one brief instant of the strain of contest, which is all the course allows them. The great race starts on the lower slope of a hill. The horses fight out of a valley before they come into view. They sweep along the crest of the hill for a moment or two, they swerve round Tattenham Corner, and finally they rush down another slope to the stands and the winning post. For the great body of the people the first stage of the race does not exist, visibly, and the remainder of it only in flashes. I had seen two Derbys finish. I decided to see this one start.

The roughness of the Epsom course is known of all. It is a standing surprise, nevertheless, for the tourist visitor. Expectant of elaborate framing of one of the great contests of the world, he comes, instead, upon a stretch of common land, open to all, hilly, uneven, and curiously unadorned. At one side of the starting point a wood skirts the rails. The grass of the actual course is in its natural state, and the first stage of the great race is run upon a section of a typical English field, lying yellow, on Wednesday last, under hosts of buttercups, thick strewn about the horses' feet. From a point near the starter one looked out across the hill to the stands in the far distance, where close-packed thousands were doubtless wondering how the candidates were faring in the preliminaries. A dull roar of sound surged across the hill. Then the horses came out of the paddock in single file, crossed a sloping field, and lined along the course. Somehow, at that point, the roar of voices ceased, and the black masses of distant people stood suddenly silent. With their riders anxiously manoeuvring the more restless among them into position, the seventeen crack three-year-olds drew across the tape. Lord Rosebery's Neil Gow, one of the two pronounced favourites for this year's Derby, is a notoriously capricious animal. The difficulty appears not to make him win a race, but to persuade him to start for it. Here again he set up objection, and his backings and curvetings for long gave Maher, his rider, anxiety, while the rest of the field waited impatiently at the barrier. Foremost among them in appearance, Lemberg, the destined victor, Major Loder's Admiral Hawke, a beautifully proportioned animal, and Lord Villiers' Greenback, a smallish but upstanding black colt, came in for most attention. Neil Gow, a handsome chestnut, whose victory for Lord Rosebery would assuredly have aroused a great popular demonstration, was dubiously regarded by reason of an ominous plaster just below the hock. The report of his injury a day earlier, which had sent him down the betting lists, was thus seen justified, and his owner's chance of a fourth Derby correspondingly lessened. Maher at last persuaded him in the right direction, the flag fell, the tape flew up, a simultaneous plunge hurled horses and riders forward in a flashing heap—the Derby field was in full flight. In a few seconds they had breasted the hill, and were rushing across its summit. Then they dipped and were lost to view, and the huge crowds in the stands were seen in commotion, and a shout came across the hill. That was the end. Presently someone called out "Lemberg!" and in another minute hundreds of thousands were rejoicing, or sorrowing, at the victory of the favourite.

As usual, the sights and sounds of Epsom and Derby Day touched the colossal. Once again a multitudinous host of variegated humanity filled the spaces of the hill. The stands and enclosures doubtless have their own fascination of interest, but it cannot exceed that of the tumultuous vastness of that crowd on the other side of the course. It is a feature of Epsom that hundreds of people who might be expected to foregather in the enclosures do not do so. Their motor cars and carriages line along the rails, or take up positions on the slope of the hill. From that fact issues an additional element of confusion, for, by reason of it, fashionable drag parties and carloads of quite dainty persons are inextricably merged in the general. Thus, to a degree, probably not paralleled elsewhere, Piccadilly and Mayfair commingle with the substrata of Southwark and the flotsam of the Mile End-road. No carriage is immune from the roaring tipster, whose pitch, certainly may not be anywhere within a few yards, but whose voice is all-pervasive, while the smartest cars find themselves the centre of a shouting host of bookmakers and a variety of entertainment of nigger-minstrels, gipsies, cocoanut shies, Aunt Sallys, purveyors of the gentle whelk, and many another fish not within the writer's acquaintance, vendors of heaps of hard-boiled eggs, and merchants of much other indescribable. They are hemmed in on this side by donkey shays, and the vehicular motley of coster London, and on that by waggons freighted with barrels of beer, by refreshment tents, by precarious tables set up for supply of all sorts of goods vouched for as edible, even though they do not look it. The hill at Epsom on Derby Day is thus the leveller of London. There fashion flaunts her splendours and wretchedness its rags, and both alike, and all the intermediary degrees of them, find there a common entertainment.

Not that fashion flaunted many splendours at this year's Derby. On the contrary, dresses were almost uniformly sombre. The note of national mourning was abroad. Tier after tier the stands rose black, entirely unrelieved. Derby Day was filled full enough with sunshine, and a singing breeze blew gloriously across the downs; but the gay demonstration of frocking, which usually crowns the carnival with colour, was not for this year. Often, too, the thought of last Derby Day crossed the mind, and a vision of that unforgettable tumult of enthusiasm which followed the victory of King Edward's horse. Now, the sadness of loss had fallen across that jubilant memory. Many people, also, were absent who in happier conditions would have been there. But, broadly speaking, only the lack of colour varied this year's Derby from any other. The crowd was as vast, and the far-flung bulk of it as impressive, as of yore. The customary picnickers were there in hundreds. For them Derby day is an opportunity for a run through the leafy woods of Surrey, and a holiday upon its breezy hills. In the midst of the shouting bookmakers and the din of insistent financiers generally, rose the banners and the exhortations of the usual preachers. Unfailing of hope that they would somehow persuade the attention of seekers after winning horses into quite another channel, they battled against the surrounding tumult with unsparing enthusiasm. The tipsters, shrieking and yelling in an ecstasy of self-sacrifice, offered lists of horses which could not possibly lose, for a penny upwards, but themselves seemed to take no step to secure advantage in the matter.

In the late afternoon the great procession which had come by road began to file out upon its homeward way, and the shorter journey by train began to draw its loads. Derby Day had come and gone once more, a day of sunshine and cool hill breezes, and a clear view from the Downs across miles of wooded country, and fields of gleaming grass and Surrey bluebells. Furthermore, the expected had happened, and the favourite had won.

AT THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

AUSTRALIAN ARTISTS.

(BY J. L. W.)

Like timid flowers, hiding from the garish day in shady nooks, there may be other Australian pictures in this year's Academy, but, so far as I have been able to discover, the only glimpse to be had through the walls of Burlington House into the sunny land out yonder is Douglas Fry's chestnut at the sliprails. It is not much, merely an eclipse of the Sunland by a chestnut horse—"Eclipse first;" the chestnut is somewhat musty. By standing on tip-toe and protruding both eyes one can see that there is a three-rail fence in the mid-distance, with a nice white shanty, hanging as a pendant to Carbine's loose bonnet-strings. The sliprails are fairy things, not made to stay up, for they have fallen down at the wind of the racer's approach. The picture has been shown in Australia, where the finikin English thoroughbred no doubt seemed just the thing for the land of "Fair girl's grey horses" (as the Academy catalogue phrases it). Anyhow, it is a fine drawing of a horse, and the little occulted suggestion of Australia is deeply refreshing to a sun-hungry groper in fog-land. By the bye, on opening day (Monday, May 2) the weather was so bad that the gallery was plunged in night, and the electric light had to be kept on all day. It was touching to see the courage with which in the gathering darkness at noon the thousands went around pretending that they could see the canvases, when they could hardly even see the catalogue in their hands. There was some advantage in being able to study the pictures for some hours in brilliant artificial light, after having had exceptionally good daylight on both press and private view day. Pictures in out-of-the-way places were brought out from their hiding by the electric beams, and one discovered unsuspected beauties above the line.

One cannot help being sorry that there are no works shown by artists painting in Australia. The native-born is interesting for his achievement as well as for his own sweet sake, but his pictures, painted in Hampstead or in Montmartre, tell the same truth as others, namely, that there is no such thing as [illegible] in art. Local subjects, local atmospheric effects, they are the artist's bricks and mortar—or slabs and shingles, as may be. True, he will carry their influence with him for a while, and for a little perhaps he will build in Brompton villas that bear ghostly suggestions of slab and dab. But that is a quickly passing phase; it wears out with the last suit he brought from Collins-street.

Australian individuality?—Yes, the Australian painters and sculptors working in London and exhibiting at the Academy show clearly the strength and independence of their character in every one of their works. And if at first there is an inclination to aggressiveness, that is a cardinal virtue in Burlington House, where a volcanic eruption could not howl down the gentlest academician.

From "The Black Soil Plains" to "The Seashore in Essex" is a tidy jump, but George W. Lambert and his pony have done it, and "Holiday in Essex" (155) is certainly evidence of a fine achievement. The picture, which is illustrated in "Pictures of 1910," is said to represent the artist's wife and children. He is doubly to be congratulated. It is a classic composition of great power and beauty, the colour scheme rich and brilliant, the drawing equally remarkable for care and for bold mastery, distinctly a notable picture. It may be urged that there is a total absence of out-of-door atmosphere and surroundings, that the figures are all carefully posed in the studio, and are consciously gazing at the operator. That is all true; and the figures, and pony, fill the whole canvas, the indicated background being frankly nothing but a background. But the same is true of many great works of art, and so, in itself, it is no proof that this picture falls short of even that high category. Lambert has also a portrait (694) of the Right Hon. Russell Rea, which is skied. It is stiff, and looks commonplace; the device of a deep blue unrelieved background assists the Lambertian inclination to come out of the frame. The work may be better than it looks, but its altitude lifts it above criticism. Close handy to Lambert's big picture is "Corfe Castle," by Arthur Streeton; and unfortunately this is hung too high to be properly seen. This is particularly regrettable, because its chief quality is a delicate care and refinement of drawing; there is no broad, dramatic handling of masses. The old Norman ruin is seen greyly standing out on the top of its low hill of rocks and grassy steeps, and, seemingly, trees, though it is hard to be sure whether the scale makes them trees or bushes; and over all is a very tenderly-treated blue sky, laced with light clouds drawn with such patience and feeling that one is tempted to demand a step-ladder for its better inspection. The picture is curiously reticent for the Streeton of the Hawkesbury River and other breezy wonders of the Sunland days. In its colder way it has much charm of quiet, unassuming truth.

Still on the same side wall of the big gallery there is another important Australian. Rupert C. W. Bunny—"The Sonata" (193). This is a large painting of three women on a balcony overlooking sea or lake, presumably in Italy. It is moonlight, and one would think that something on the light guitar were more to the purpose than anything so imposing as a sonata. However, there is no suggestion of levity; on the contrary, the two ladies facing the music (assuming that the sonata is being performed by the orchestra in the room, and not off-stage in a gondola) look almost melancholy in their absorption. The other lady leans over the balcony with her back to the spectators. Artists tell me that this work is better than I think it. It has much charm of quiet warm harmony of colour; but the composition is bunchy, the flesh tones rather muddy, and the painting of the sky and sea seems crude and unfinished; still it is a thoughtful, feeling work, and arresting in the lesser dramatic sense.

No need to leave the great No. III. gallery for another whom we claim as Australian. E. Phillips Fox, who has two pictures well hung. The smaller, "By the Sea" (137), is in this room, and a very large canvas, "The Arbour" (273) in room V. The former is a charming study of a young mother, in a light summer dress, with her chubby naked boy, on the sands of some seaside place, with a small crowd of other paddling and castle-building kiddies further down the sands and in the shallow wavelets. Boatmen rest on their oars on a placid blue sea, whose horizon line is cut off by the top of the picture. Mr. Fox adheres to his somewhat shadowy method, the figures poetically conceived, and drawn with much delicacy and grace, are impalpable, almost to ghostliness, as though seen through a sunlit sea-mist. "The Arbour," if not the same, is very similar to a work exhibited two years ago in Australia. It is a group of modern domestic folks, largely children, again in artfully managed summer gear, sitting in a leafy arbour, through which the sun shines in a thousand elusive gleams. Here, also, the figures are so thinly painted as to look almost flat against the sunlight beyond the shade in which they sit; but the management of the bright sunlight effect is courageous and extremely clever; it looks like the real thing, which is rare in English art. Mr. Fox has the advantage of studying sunshine from life, as he lives on the Continent.

John Longstaff only exhibits one painting, a full-length portrait of Mrs. Purcell Fitzgerald and her son John (466). The boy, in a courtly black suit, with a frilly-looking white waistcoat, is admirably painted, almost in the artist's best manner, but the lady, in a dress of a dreadful purplish red, has all the appearance of being finished in a hurry, or not finished, which is probably the fact. There are crudities that are not seen in any of Longstaff's finished work, and will most likely be overcome before the picture leaves the artist's possession. Tom Roberts has the distinction of leading off with Mme. Hartl (No. 1), a three-quarter length of a plump and handsome lady in a very low-necked robe of dim red over a white garment of uncertain description. Mr. Roberts achieves a pastel effect, which is delicate enough, but his use of blue and green in the flesh tints and markedly on the eyebrows produces a somewhat unreal impression, as though the sitter were of painted plaster rather than flesh and blood. He is happier in "April Girl" (378), which is a charming study of a simple young girl in pale blue, with a black hat and black gossamer scarf, very tenderly indicated. The pallid rendering of the flesh is more in keeping in this subject, though a trifle more warmth would better suggest youth in springtime. Perhaps it is Mr. Roberts' protest against the popular superstition that April is springtime in England. A. J. Wetherall Burgess shows two pictures, "The Scarborough Fleet" (219) and "Fleet of England is her all in all" (286). The first is in a splendid position in room IV., and it deserves to be so well seen. The fleet is not the all in all in this case, for the work is a study of shallow sea waves on the shore, with only a distant indication of the fishing smacks afar off. There is a fine freedom in the painting of the curling and frothing billows, while the truth of the effect of movement betokens patient care as well as a fine natural instinct and sympathy with the subject. The colour of the sea is unconventional, and would seem strange to Australian eyes, except perhaps in the Newcastle district, for the dark colour of the earth on the Yorkshire coast gives the shallow waters a peculiar tinge which the observant artist has rendered with fidelity and success. The other work is the usual battleship, with others in the distance; well enough painted, with appropriate dramatic effect, but not of exceptional interest in conception or execution.

A BOTANIST'S NOTES.

IMPRESSIONS OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

(BY J. H. MAIDEN.)

III.

I was little in Perth, as my business took me into the bush. The latitude of the capital is about that of Newcastle (I mean the New South Wales one, for there is also one in Western Australia). I found the climate delightful in the spring of the year, the period of my stay. The south-westerly wind from the sea is a great comfort, cooling the atmosphere deliciously, much in the same way as our nor'-easter, and it appears that both can be depended upon with equal certainty, making their appearance in the early afternoon. The wind is known at Perth as "Dr. Fremantle" after the port, of course, and in allusion to the great sanitary value of this movement of the air.

Perth, on its western side, abuts on the beautiful King's Park, where the native vegetation is allowed to grow unmolested, and the public are prosecuted for plucking the wild flowers. I must confess I was a bit startled to read in the papers of prosecutions for this offence.

The park mainly consists of Mt. Eliza, which is reached by a not difficult slope from many sides. It is a charming object when seen from the Swan River, at its foot. Still more charming are the views from the park itself. It consists of 900 acres, and thus is larger than our own Centennial and Queen's Parks (really one park, separated only by a roadway). Both parks are dedicated to the capital cities of Perth and Sydney by Premiers—Sir John Forrest in the one case, and Sir Henry Parkes in the other. Wherever I travelled, whenever the question of King's Park came up, Sir John Forrest's name was blessed. The dedication of 900 acres close to the heart of the city was an audacious act, and theorists prophesied all sorts of dire things to the city, which history has falsified. And coming near home, in the centuries of the future, all Sir Henry Parkes' acts will be forgotten except two—his work concerning federation and his dedication of the Centennial Park to the public for ever. It would be the act of a statesman to decree that all Sydney suburban areas, and indeed all centres of population, should have a liberal amount of dedicated park space in the present and in the future. Indeed, there should be an automatic arrangement to prevent the percentage of park area to buildings ever falling below a specified minimum.

On the occasion of a former visit to Perth the banks of the Swan River were undefined and insanitary. Now, what a transformation. By filling in from the high land at the back, but especially by dredging from the river itself, the whole frontage to the city has been graced with a broad esplanade, forming a continuous series of park-like reserves, which are alike an ornament to the city and a healthy open space for its citizens. Portions of this broad esplanade form sites for future public requirements, which will still further contribute to the health and enjoyment of the people.

Perth is very imposing from the river front; indeed, the view of the city from the other side of the Swan River, viz., at South Perth, a favourite residential suburb, presents one of the finest urban views I have seen anywhere. We have a broad estuarine foreground, and to the right the beautiful Darling Range is lost in the distance, while immediately opposite the skyline is delightfully broken by the buildings, many of which are of large size and imposing from an architectural point of view; while the scenic effect is enhanced by the charmingly undulating and moderately high hills on which the city is built.

South Perth possesses, in my view, the prettiest Zoological Gardens of all the States. This is mainly because of its delightful situation on a gentle and somewhat irregular slope, from which, on the highest part, water peeps can be obtained, with views of Mount Eliza (King's Park) in the distance, while from the lower part of the grounds the view of the charming hill which forms the greater part of the garden affords a treat to the lover of a pretty landscape. The horticultural side of the gardens is excellent, while the animal life, the bird life in particular, shows the healthiness of the site, and the care bestowed upon the exhibits. I was particularly struck with the richness of the plumage of the birds, which seems special to South Perth.

Within the grounds is an artesian bore, which gives a practically unlimited supply of water at 120 degrees Fahr. This enables a building to be warmed for the accommodation of tropical reptilia, which are a great attraction. Facilities are given to the public for bathing in this bore water, which is stated to possess valuable medicinal properties. Certainly a bath is most comforting, as I can testify.

Contemplation of the boundless expanses in Western Australia of brilliant flower gardens was one of the objects of my trip, and to see the conditions under which some of the notable ones exist, partly with the view of introducing them to Sydney. It would take a book to but barely record what I saw, but here is a brief sketch, every word written at the moment from the window of a fast train, and not weeks or months afterwards.

"Rose at 6.30 (in the Kalgoorlie express) near Coolgardie, greeted with the complement of our western plains—reddish sandy soil; flat, or gentle undulations; dwarf wattles, a blaze of flower; dwarf eucalyptus, with taller trees standing out; casuarinas and flowering shrubs generally; dwarf shrubs a sheet of purple; gorgeous cassias, a blaze of gold; bright crimson of the hop-bushes (Dodonaea); sober greys of the saltbushes; masses, acres of pale purple and white."

Such were my first impressions of the goldfields—of their eastern plains. Is that a desert? Surely not.

It is interesting to see at Coolgardie the Moreton Bay fig, pepper tree, the bamboo reed (Arundo donax), and lambs' tails (Boussingaultia). At Malcolm, in a far more interior locality still, we see white cedar (Acacia baileyana) trees doing well on a railway station platform. Such plants as these make one feel quite at home.

From the point of view of the botanist, the miner who opens up new country is an objectionable person. He begins by chopping down everything that can be looked upon as a tree for firewood and other domestic purposes, for mining props and steam purposes. Then he lets loose herds of goats, which complete the devastation, since they roam the country at will, and have a remarkable appetite for most plants, leaving mostly the bare country rock.

The chief virtue of the miner is that he wins gold, and so causes railways and other lines of communication to be opened out, and thus presents facilities to the botanist to get into new areas. The latter only uses a mining camp for strictly utilitarian purposes, to get a meal and perhaps a vehicle, and then clear out to the area beyond, which it does not pay the timber-cutter to cut for the mines, or where it is too far for the peregrinations of the enterprising goat.

In the south-west in the coastal strip, from the vicinity of Cape Naturaliste to the Leeuwin, are many fine limestone caves, which are only just now being properly opened to the public, Busselton being the starting point. They resemble our own Jenolan Caves very closely, and only await a larger population for additional caves to be rendered available. In the meantimes the Caves Board very wisely have sealed up many caves. In the time to come these will be very valuable—not merely as a sight in themselves, but because they cause a circulation of the people, who get health and knowledge of the country in the process.

I voyaged in the Kanowna, an Australian steamer of 7000 tons of size, and luxurious appointments that surpass those of the ocean liners of a few years ago. There were many passengers going and coming, and that any local company could make such a steamer pay, is very creditable. Other Australian companies have other steamers equally large and equally luxurious, so I am told, but I will say no more about them, since I cannot speak at first hand. Previously I was under the impression that it was out of the question to visit Western Australia, except in a European mail steamer, and I offer my discovery for what it is worth.

Lastly, let me say that the Western Australians are a friendly lot of people. I travelled about 5000 miles within the State, and spread out my journeys so as to see as much of the vegetation as possible. Often I was in a situation where I wanted a little friendly assistance with my plants, or guidance as to the country ahead of me. I always received kindness. They refer to us as "t'other siders," and always in a kindly, friendly way. My admiration of their beautiful flora went to their hearts, and when I told them things about their plants which were new to them, they were most interested. The wealth of Western Australia in her timbers is not open to dispute, but a very imperfectly-worked mine is the richness of the country from the horticultural side. I revelled in a succession of brilliant native flower gardens from beginning to end of my visit. Some constituents of them I am trying to introduce into New South Wales, but above all, I am trying to get Western Australians to collect seed and place it on the market. For beauty of flowers, for beauty of shape of the shrubs, for grotesqueness of leaf, flower and fruit, and for botanical interest generally, the flora of Western Australia is without a peer on this continent. Therefore, let it be botanically explored more by Australians, and let us not leave this pleasant duty, as has largely been done in the past, mainly to Europeans.

THE JUNE REVIEWS.

THE GREATNESS OF HINDUISM.

J. N. Farquhar contributes to the "Contemporary" an enthusiastic appreciation of Hinduism. He thinks its theory of God and the world sets it among the very greatest religions. The world process is eternal: both worlds and souls are in a sense the subject of reincarnation. The second premise is the reality of the Divine, a reality that justifies innumerable divinities. But Hinduism is more than a religion; it is a social system. It has built up the strongest social fabric the world has ever seen. Somewhere about 1000 B.C. the Aryans entered the Punjaub, and began to establish that caste system which has endured for 3000 years, and promises to endure for an indefinite future. In rather quaint contrast to that keen practical grip of nation-building—caste is the one efficient substitute for eugenics—comes the ascetic ideal which abandons the world to itself. Speaking of the immediate situation, the writer rather acutely remarks that Western scholars have taught the modern Hindu the value of his religion. Twenty years ago the average educated man of North India was ashamed of idolatry; to-day you may see him in any Calcutta tramcar making his obeisance to the idols as the car sweeps by. The sacred books of Hinduism are read as they have never been read before.

THE LADY ABBESS.

Mrs. Putnam, who seems to have set out to discuss the women of all the ages, has in the "Contemporary" an interesting account of the Lady Abbess. The modern women's college, she says, only feebly reproduces the freedom of development found in the early convent. The Lady Abbess had great spiritual rewards and great temporal prizes. She had the stimulus of competition with men in scholarship and in executive capacity, and she was part of the two great forces of the time, feudalism and the Church. She was not, of course, an invention of Christianity. For instance, the worship of Demeter had its convents of nuns, and the festival of St. Agatha, as carried out to this day in Catania, begins with a horse race and culminates in a great procession with torches and ringing of bells—ritual taken over bodily from the Demeter cult. It is not by accident that the festivals of the Virgin so often coincide with those of heathen deities; the tribal goddess, moreover, became a local saint. In another aspect, the convent represented the revolt of women against the patriarchal system. The abbess was generally a woman of good birth, strong character, and independent ways. The impulse to leadership which sent men into the world sent women into the convent. The writer gives a graphic picture of the Anglo-Saxon abbeys, and it is remarkable that all our English women saints are Anglo-Saxons. Few abbeys for women were founded in Norman times. Yet feudalism rather strengthened than weakened the position of the abbess. By right of tenure she had at one time the privilege of being summoned to Parliament. In the time of the first Henry the Abbess of Shrewsbury found seven knights for the King's service, and held her own courts for pleas of debt and the like. On the Continent, Matilda, Abbess of Quedlinburg, was twice regent for her nephew, Otto III., and summoned a Diet on her own authority. Bede records of the Abbey of Goldringham that the virgins who are vowed to God whenever they have leisure spend all their time in weaving fine garments, with which they adorn themselves like brides. In the tenth century we find a leading lady novelist, in the Abbey of Gandersheim, anticipating Anatole France. Four hundred years after her death the Rhenish Celtic Society printed an edition of her dramas.

CONCERNING TOURGUENEFF.

The "Fortnightly" has two readable articles on Tourgueneff. Francis Gribble opens with a graphic picture of him in Paris, the Paris of Hugo, and Edmond de Goncourt, and Dumas and Flaubert. To their talk he listened with the Medusa-like amazement of a barbarian, and was staggered by things, says Maupassant, that would have seemed elementary to the pupils of one of our lycees—a remark with a double edge. Richard Curle discusses Tourgueneff from a philosophic point of view. "Influenced on the one hand by the impersonality of his school, and on the other by an ancestry of poetical mysticism, he looked at life with the eyes of a sceptic and of a dreamer." The writer institutes a comparison with Ibsen. Ibsen's understanding of character is cynical and bitter, Tourgueneff's is sad and sympathetic. Ibsen considers love a delusion; Tourgueneff considers it an illusion. Yet even Ibsen could give "a last cry of the disillusioned to the unplumbed depths of his own inherent romanticism." Of the two the pessimism of Tourgueneff is perhaps the more profound. Ibsen realises that life is illusion, but Tourgueneff knew that illusion is life.

SIR WILLIAM QUILLER ORCHARDSON.

Mrs. Alec Tweedie writes in the "Fortnightly" a pleasant appreciation of Orchardson, who was one of the few moderns to see his old work increase in value. "Hard Hit," painted in 1879, brought £4000 at Christie's a year or so ago, though he was always well paid for his pictures. The "great masters" mostly starved. Yet Orchardson was among the most modest of painters. Simplicity was his keynote—simplicity alike of character, life, and style. There were days towards the end when he looked as if a puff of wind would blow him away. Yet he painted as well at 75 as he had done 40 years before. Orchardson left Edinburgh for London in 1862, when he was 29. He was made an A.R.A. in 1868, R.A. in 1883, and received an Oxford D.C.L. and a knighthood in 1907.

THE TRAINED NURSE.

The "Nineteenth Century" has an article on the registration of trained nurses, by Mrs. Fenwick, president of the National Council of Trained Nurses. The modern nurse must possess a high degree of mentality if she is to acquire a perfect technique, and it is essential that women of a particularly high type should offer themselves for training in nursing schools. In the writings of Charaka, who lived in India about 320 B.C., the requisite qualities of a nurse are fully recognised, and the high ideal has persisted through the ages. Florence Nightingale's real title to greatness is the scientific accuracy of her mind. In 1860 she advocated most of what is realised as being most essential to-day. In the interim the teachings of Lister and Pasteur had revolutionised medicine and surgery, but the importance of the nurse in the light of the new knowledge is only now firmly established; and the necessity for uniform training and organisation was not realised. Until they are realised even more fully the status of the nursing profession will remain much lower than it ought to be. The writer urges that organisation, education, and legal status should be guaranteed by the State. The efficiency of trained nursing is still seriously impaired by the chaotic condition of nursing education, and by the temptation to supply semi-trained nurses at highly profitable rates. There is no central nursing authority such as the General Medical Council, and no one knows precisely what the qualifications of a "certificated nurse" may be. The writer wants to see established a governing body for the nursing profession, which shall define the standard of efficiency and register efficients. Such registration, however, has many vested interests to fight. It is worth noting that it was suggested by Sir Henry Acland as long ago as 1874. A voluntary system of registration has been carried on by the British Nurses' Association since 1887. The British Medical Association has on three occasions passed resolutions in favour of legislative action, and the advocacy has now become international in scope.

Some people talk for talking's sake,
Perhaps they know no better;
Such folks are often ignorant
And scarce could write a letter.
But when we talk our aim is this,
We'd like the public to secure
Their health against cough, cold, and chill
By taking Woods' Great Peppermint Cure.—Advt.

WILD BEES AND SUGAR BAGS.

(BY E. S. SORENSON.)

New South Wales is rich in wild honey. Perhaps it is not so plentiful now as in former years; still there are tons of honey in trees in the sparsely-settled parts of the bush. Where selections and farms are thick, with the consequent denudation of forests, it is a long hunt to find a bee's nest. One is taken as soon as it is found, the finder being satisfied to get the bees if there is no honey, whereas the same man a few years earlier would not touch a new nest, and when he felled a tree he took the honey and left the bees to find a new home for themselves. They never go straight away. When the nest is robbed they swarm and bunch close by, where, if it is afternoon, they will remain till next morning, starting off house-hunting about 8 or 9 o'clock. There are plenty of hollow trunks and limbs about, but the bee is particular in choosing her residence. Height is no object. Some nests are found near the top of the highest trees; others almost at the root. Neither is there much partiality shown in the kind of trees, though ironbarks and red and grey gums are the most frequently inhabited. The hollow must be fairly clean, not too extensive nor too limited and have only one small outlet. A little knotty hole is a favourite door. If there should be other small holes or cracks about it they are carefully closed up with wax. It is the queen who picks the home. When she has found a hollow that suits her she comes out and enters a second time; then the swarm that has been waiting for the result outside crowd in after her, and the duties of the new home begin almost immediately. Unlike hived bees, which are provided with sustenance to start with, if it is only sugar and water or diluted syrup, these have to start with an empty cupboard, and have a busy time before them.

Nearly everybody in the bush keeps an eye about for nests when travelling through timber. When the gums, acacias, and wild apple trees are in flower you hear a continual hum of bees everywhere, and when the forests are wide you know that the nests are not far away. Watching upwards for the tiny black dots that you hope to see darting in and out is a neck-aching business. When you have discovered the dots, you have yet to distinguish between bees and flies and wasps. It is not a pleasant experience, after chopping down a hard tree, to find that your nest is simply a dead animal with an assortment of flies in attendance, or to be accosted by a hostile army of French bees (honey-making wasps), demanding "whaffor." A pair of binocular glasses is a good thing for such a purpose. One method of locating nests is to catch a bee drinking at a waterhole, stick a piece of thistle down to its body just under the fiery lance, regulating the weight so that it can fly but slowly with it, then follow it. When it reaches its home tree it will rise straight up. The only drawback is that you are apt to find a log unexpectedly with your feet, and hit the ground on the other side with unnecessary violence. When the blackfellow adopts this plan his gin runs behind him, and tells him when to jump. As a rule, he "mooches" slowly along with ever-roving and keenly observant eyes.

Blacks are experts at taking sugarbags. They do not mind stings; in fact, they seldom get stung. Yet they never cut a tree down or use smoke, and nine times out of ten have not a particle of clothing on them. When a blackfellow climbs a tree, unless there are whites about, he leaves his clothes on the ground. One day, while out shooting, I came across an old gin standing at the butt of a gum tree, holding a piece of bark about a foot square in her hands, while several dogs sat on their haunches star-gazing beside her. Her other half was a hundred feet up the tree, extracting honey from a hole he had cut in the side of a limb. As he dropped the comb, piece by piece, the gin (when not interfered with) caught it dexterously on the sheet of bark, and thence passed it to the billycans. The dogs, however, gave her a lot of trouble. One or two would yelp and spring at the descending comb, sometimes catching it (and smashing it), but mostly sending it and the bark and the gin spinning in three different directions. Then would follow a whirlwind of sticks, bedraggled skirts, unkempt hair, and vituperation, mingled with a deep baritone snort of disgust from aloft. The storm moderating, her long thin fingers and the billy-lid went to the rescue of the depreciated segments of sugarbag.

The apiarist has a big pull over the sugarbagger, in that he knows what his hive contains before he begins to rob it. You can get no indication of what is in a tree. I have seen over 2cwt of honey taken out of a single nest. In the same vicinity two of us worked half a day cutting down a red gum, which was 6ft in diameter, and gnarled and knotted at that, and when we cut it open there wasn't as much honey in it as would fill a pickle bottle. It was a new nest. Another time we cut down a big tree on the river bank, which we knew had been inhabited for three months past. It caught in another tree and hung. We left it there for two months; then one morning we went out and chopped down the other. It fell into the river, and the nest was buried two fathoms under water. The worst of it was, the two trees formed an obstruction, preventing the steamers from plying up and down the river. There was a £50 fine attached to this, so we could not conveniently say who was responsible. There was no sense in being George Washingtons when the reputation would cost £50 in one lump. We could not spare it. Under the circumstances we did the best we could. The steamer passed down stream late at night. In no little trepidation we stopped her at the next bend, and informed the captain of the place where two trees had been felled by somebody after honey. We knew they were after honey, because we had often seen the nest. She hove to till morning, when we went down and assisted to cut a passage through. It was hard work, there are no two ways about that; but it was not worth more than 50s. The captain advised us to bill the Navigation Department for our services, but we never troubled.

In the Richmond and Clarence River districts one frequently comes upon bees' nests accidentally; and a few years ago a nest might remain untouched for months, though known to dozens of people. Anybody who desired honey in that neighbourhood only wanted an axe and a bucket to get it. Riding along a bridle track on Myrtle Creek, I have seen eight sugarbags in about a mile, which will give some idea of the wealth of honey in a locality comprising hundreds of square miles of dense forest. Returning once to the Richmond after delivering cattle on the Lower Clarence, we camped a night at Gibberagee, the site of an old-time sheep station. While gathering wood I noticed traces of honeycomb in the half of a hollow limb lying on the ground, and, looking up, saw great flakes of comb hanging under the other half of the limb on the tree. It had been split down to within a few feet of the trunk in a storm that had passed probably months before. The bees had continued to work there, and now the comb hung down a foot below the wood. The tree was too high and straight to climb, and the only thing in the shape of an implement we possessed was a rifle. The sugarbag was too tempting to leave, so we tried shooting it. The first bullet through the comb brought down nearly a pint of honey, which we caught in a billy. Then I loaded with pebbles, and took a side shot at the top of the nest. Small pieces of comb were dislodged, and several tiny streams began to trickle down. At the second shot a whole side and a half of splendid comb honey crashed on to the bark we had spread. With that we left the tree. I happened to pass this strange sugarbag again several months afterwards. The bees were still working as before, and a great white comb filled the breach we had made with the rifle shots.

An edifying spectacle often witnessed in the bush is the catching of swarms of wild bees. The hum of a travelling swarm can be heard at a great height, even when the bees cannot be seen. There is no mistaking the sound. As soon as the alarm is given there is an excited rush for tin-kettling instruments, and the whole family sallies forth, running to keep under the swarm, beating a tattoo on tin-dishes, cans, kerosene tins, and such like melodious instruments. When the bees get low enough water is thrown among them, and the flight is over. They quickly bunch on a bush or low limb. Boxing them is simple. One holds the box under the mass, another hits the limb a sharp blow with an axe, and a third, standing ready with a sheet, throws it over the box immediately the cluster drops into it.

Native bees are also plentiful in this part. They are smaller than the house fly, and are stingless. They are, nevertheless irritating little insects, swarming upon and crawling over one when their nest is being robbed. The nests are usually in small dead trees, and on an average fairly low down. When high they are hard to distinguish from flying ants. The bee-hunter gets them between himself and the sun. There is not a great quantity of honey in a nest, but it is a sweet, delicious honey. The comb is in globular shape, divided into numerous large cells, very different from the ordinary bees. I have taken it from trees in winter in a candied state. There are two kinds of native bee. The Richmond River blacks call them cobbi and boo-yan. They are about equal in size, but quite different in appearance. The honey, too, is different in appearance and flavour. So far as I know, there has never been any attempt to domesticate these little workers. I don't think it would be an easy task to keep them in hives, and they don't comport themselves in a manner, like the other kind, that would assist in boxing them; but if the difficulties in the way could be overcome their honey would command fancy prices.

YOUR HEALTH DEPENDS ON YOUR KIDNEYS.

Consider what it means to neglect the kidneys. They are the great blood filters of the body. All the blood passes through them once every three minutes, day and night, to be purified. So the kidneys are working day and night to keep you in health. But when they are weak and ill they do not do this filtering work thoroughly, and a little of the uric acid and waste matter is left in the system every day. This gathering of kidney poisons is shown by a dull ache in the back, sallow complexion, nervousness, and languor. When the uric acid begins to crystallise, its sharp, jagged edges cause cruel, cutting pains in the back, making it almost impossible to stoop or move about quickly. Doan's Backache Kidney Pills are made to heal and help the kidneys in their great work. They take out the uric acid (the acid that causes rheumatism, gravel, gout, heart disease, sciatica, and neuralgia); they take out the water that causes the dropsical swellings; they relieve backaches, correct the flow from the kidneys, &c. Doan's Backache Kidney Pills act on the kidneys, and on the kidneys only. They are not a cure-all, but a cure for all kidney diseases. They will keep you bright, free from pain, backache, and headache. They will keep you efficient. Doan's Backache Kidney Pills are a little remedy that help men and women to bear the burdens of life more easily. Make better, happier, more capable people of them. Are doing it right here in Sydney. Your friends and neighbours say so. Read the following testimony from a Sydney man, aged 77, who has been permanently cured of serious kidney disease by Doan's Backache Kidney Pills.

SYDNEY MAN CURED.

Permanent Cure After Three Years' Suffering.

Mr. John Loaney, 20 Swanson-street, Erskineville, Sydney, states:—"I wish to give you particulars of my experience with Doan's Backache Kidney Pills. I owe these Pills a debt of gratitude, for they have cured me of very serious kidney disease. My ill-health commenced three years ago, when I first had to lay up. I had terrible pains in my back and right side, and my secretions scalded, and were thick, and contained sedimentary matter. I also had fits of giddiness, and every day I would have a violent headache. For two years I spent an average of two weeks out of every three in bed, and even when I was up I was very ill. I was very weak, and fell away. I had the best medical advice and treatment to be procured. Ten Leading Sydney Physicians treated me in the three years of my illness; their bills totalled £180. The general idea was that I suffered from stone in the kidneys, and I was constantly advised to undergo an operation. At last a specialist put me under the X-Rays; he found no foreign substance in the kidneys, but a dark veil enveloped the right kidney, showing pronounced disease. He told me that it was unnecessary to be operated on, as my kidneys were too far gone for an operation to benefit me. I gave up all hope of recovery, and fully expected to die soon, and my friends were of the same opinion. My lawyer was brought home and made out my will—I was held up to sign it. Not long after this I was advised to use Doan's Backache Kidney Pills. The man who had urged me to give this remedy a trial had been cured by it, and had the utmost faith in its healing properties. He told me he had been doubled up with the ailment, and not able to get about at all, and one box had cured him, and for good. One could not but be convinced that he was in thorough earnest, so I sent for a supply to Ellis's Pharmacy, Erskineville. I used nine boxes, and was cured. I felt no good effects until I was using the third box, and after that my recovery was gradual. I left off taking the Pills four months ago, and have not needed to take one since, and am still in the best of health. My case is the more marvellous in that I am an aged man. The medicine I took before I got Doan's Backache Kidney Pills would stock a chemist's shop. I might mention that the operation which had been suggested was to cost me £60. My cure by Doan's Backache Kidney Pills cost me less than 30s."

Four years later Mrs. Loaney says:—"The above is true, and I am pleased to say my husband is still free of kidney trouble, and has been for the past four years. In fact, he was never better in his life, and is without ache or pain. I think this is marvellous, for he is 77."

SCIENCE NOTES.

W. G. P.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF INSECTS.

With few exceptions insects are oviparous. The aphididae produce living young, though an egg-tube in the same ovary may be producing eggs. Among the diptera the young may be born in the pupal stage, one at a time, the earlier larval stages being passed in the body of the parent, and the single large egg being really a pupa. Insect eggs vary in number from a few to many thousands. Often the entire quota is rapidly deposited, and the parent at once dies. The egg has three external coats, of which the shell proper may be characteristically sculptured into complex forms. Even where this is not the case over the whole surface it happens around the orifices admitting the spermatazoon to the interior. Such apertures or micropyles may be protected by special porches, which may show remarkable development. The egg-contents consist of an evenly distributed structureless matrix of protoplasm and of yolk made up of several kinds of granular constituents. Before fertilisation the chromosomes which form a group of minute bodies near the edge of the egg divide into two, of which the first portion is excluded from the egg-contents, but not from the eggshell. The second group divides again and again excludes half, the exclusion of those "polar bodies" being only temporary. The union of the remaining chromosomes forms the egg-nucleus (female pronucleus). On fertilisation a sperm nucleus is formed, and the two, moving toward the interior of the egg-contents, amalgamate. By repeated division of the resulting nucleus a large number of nuclei are formed, which arrange themselves as a sort of continuous envelope, enclosing most of the cell contents. Such a structure is called the blastoderm. A thickened portion of it becomes indrawn, and forms a ventral plate in the interior. This plate differentiates into layers, from which (endoderm and ectoderm) the parts of the formed embryo will be derived. As to the precise manner in which this happens there is still much difference of opinion. Evidence of segmentation, however, comes very early, the segments of the head, thorax, and abdomen usually becoming visible in that order. It is, however, impossible to say yet whether the number of embryonic segments is the same in all insects; and the later stages of embryology are rather bewildering in their variety.

Upon leaving the egg a young animal may or may not resemble its adult parent. Post-embryonic development is very marked in the case of insects, because the various stages of the life cycle are sharply defined, and force themselves even on the casual observer. It is to be remarked, however, that such metamorphosis is not common to all insects, and is found among many other groups to a greater or less extent. Frogs, sea-urchins, star-fish, crabs, certain fish, afford a few random instances of metamorphosis in other animals, while many insects are born in a form closely similar to their adult stage. In any case the changes that go on are continuous, and though striking enough the process is one of orderly development. Among the insects the outstanding general feature is the separation in time of growth, development, and reproduction. The perfected adult form is concerned mainly with reproduction, and often dies as soon as that function is discharged. Although a familiar topic of "natural history," the scientific study of metamorphosis is quite recent. Formerly the external shapes alone attracted attention; the really essential points are the development of internal organs, the development of physiological processes, and the significance of the metamorphic stages in the phylogeny of the group—group relationships are often indicated plainly by the early and intermediate forms.

When we remember that there are a quarter of a million named species of insect, and probably ten times as many still unclassified, it is plain how great a field for evolution the insecta have provided. It is therefore not surprising that even in the matter of life history the range of variation is very great. Metamorphosis, in fact, is a term that covers everything between the normal and almost uninterrupted development of the locust, and the apparently complete transformations of the butterfly. Where there is only a gradual series of slight changes the metamorphosis is said to be "incomplete." Otherwise it is "complete;" the most striking difference in the latter case being the intervention of the quiescent pupa stage. But even as to this no general rule can be laid down. Whether the metamorphosis is incomplete or complete, the insect undergoes a series of moults or ecdyses, the intervals between which are called stadia, while the form of the insect at each stadium is called an instar. Beyond this there may be great modifications during the larval stage, as adaptations to the then mode of life of the insect. For instance, certain beetles are born with legs, by which they can cling to a bee, but on being carried to the hive, where they live on the honey, they lose these legs. The change in internal organs correspondingly to the successive instars may be slight or profound. Some insects live on the same food throughout life; others undergo a complete change of habit. Thus the caterpillar is an enormous leaf-eater, while the butterfly lives on the liquid juices of flowers. Hence the digestive organs are very different in the two cases. The number of moults varies greatly. Sir John Lubbock observed as many as 23 in the case of a May-fly. On the other hand, there may be only a single fragmentary moult. The reason for the process is still obscure. The larva of the blow-fly moults within two hours of birth, so that the moulting can hardly be merely a device to give room for new growth. The chitin which forms the skin is a nitrogenous substance, and by some is regarded as a waste excretory product that has to be got rid of.

The blow-fly is a fairly typical example of metamorphosis. The development of the embryo in the egg is rapid—about a day. After the first moult the larva is a fast grower for about a fortnight, and moults frequently. It then becomes more or less quiescent, and great changes take place in the internal organs. After some days the outer skin is detached, and forms a sort of cocoon, the animal itself becoming soft and creamy, until it again takes on a definite form, the transformation varying according to the temperature. The remarkable breaking down of internal organs—histolysis—is seemingly accomplished by phagocytes similar to those constituting the white corpuscles of the blood. The phagocytes enter the tissue they are about to disintegrate and produce a pseudo-inflammatory process, from which certain buds or germs which will give rise to the new organs are exempt. These buds, of which about 60 have been observed, are in effect embryonic structures which have remained dormant while the larva has been growing. In some respects, therefore, the pupa corresponds to the egg, though some writers have pressed the analogy too far.

The bearing of development on classification is obviously important. At present the classification most in use depends chiefly on the structure of the adult insect. Thus Sharp recognises nine orders based on the nature of the wing parts, and on the nature of the mouth organs—whether mandibulate or suctorial. A more modern grouping is that of Brauer, who recognises 17 orders based partly on the presence or absence of wings, partly on changes in the mouth parts during ontogeny (life-history), partly on metamorphosis, and partly on other characters. But even this falls far short of a natural system [illegible] on genetic relationships. An immense amount of work, in fact, remains to be done before anything like a general treatment of the evolution of the insects can be attempted. Nine-tenths of them have not even been described in their adult stages, and exact knowledge of their life history is confined to merely a few forms. Fossil insects, again, are known mainly by their wings, and cannot be referred to natural groups until much more is known of the correlation between morphology and development than is available at present.

In a sketch of the life-history of insects at least a brief reference must be made to parthenogenesis—the development of the egg without fertilisation. There are many undoubted examples; and there are even a few species in which no male is known, and which may be looked on, provisionally, as perpetually parthenogenetic. It should be mentioned also that in a few cases young are produced by the immature insect, either larva or pupa.

THE STRANGER.

AND "THE GREATER REALM."

(BY ARIEL.)

We, most of us, hurry past the place, seeing only its unpleasing aspects—houses where the dust of generations seems to have gravitated; squalid streets and neglected children—all that we wish to escape from if we are "respectable citizens."

We are sorry to have seen these things. We would rather not know that they exist. So we shake the dust of this place from our shoes, and free our minds from memories of its unpleasantness, in the healthy atmosphere of our own bright homes.

"It is the dull, uncared-for houses; the more uncared-for people we would forget," comes drumming back the excuse within us.

And yet we know less about these houses, less of the people who dwell in them, than the stranger who visits our shores.

They of this place belong to one circle; we to another. Then, shall we always be satisfied to live within our own little social circle, to walk only in that limited area of our city which that circle knows? Or, will some day a desire awaken in us to widen our horizon, to break new ground; to drink deeper of life, even to know more of its good and ill, that is so strangely mixed?

Should such a desire come upon us now, we are standing at one of those gateways that lets us into the Greater Realm, where the stranger becomes known, and proves friend; where narrowness and imperfections pass away in the light of life's nobler realisations.

It is an unpretentious gateway. (But few of us enter the Greater Realm by heroics.) So commonplace, indeed, that it will strike some of us as too prosaic to lead to anything "worth while." It leads—to a branch of the "Day Nursery Association." To that directly; indirectly, to one of the greatest problems that the twentieth century has to face.

"Can we develop healthily as a nation by forming isolated social circles, by placing barriers, beyond the inevitable and natural ones, between class and class? Can there be any true nationhood while 100 circles stand strangers to 100 others in our midst? Must there not be many 'safety valves' through which the feeling of national brotherhood can freely pass? So that, at any and every moment, we can know that we are not merely a union of heterogeneous circles, but a true Australian nation, through which the quickening spirit of patriotism runs kindly from lowest to highest, from highest to lowest again."

We are at the gateway of one of these safety-valves. This little day nursery, at the foot of Brougham-street, in banned and neglected Woolloomooloo, will lead us on our way to the Greater Realm—if we wish to enter.

This half-forgotten place, then, has an even greater claim upon us than that of beauty and historic interest of situation.

"But what on earth has a day nursery to do with us?" we, most of us, think, even if we do not express the thought.

"It is merely an association—sensible and necessary enough—formed for the convenience of working women."

True. But it is an association formed not by the working woman, but for her, by women whose children have no need of such care as the day nursery offers; by women of the Greater Realm, whose social horizons are large, and whose liberal education (as well as womanly sympathy) has taught them that the welfare of every Australian child is of importance to the nation; that our duty to the population we have comes before that of asking for more.

It is an association formed by men and women who have realised that to get more life and fuller they must come near to the great working heart of the nation; who have realised that life is theory in action.

It is an association where the meeting of stranger with stranger has brought out the best on both sides; where giver and receiver have reached heights that they never would have sighted in their own more limited circles.

It is worth while lingering within the gates, to learn something of the making of a "valve;" and to see how easily the stream of fellowship flows when one is made.

The Day Nursery is not a "charity" in the modern interpretation of the term. Every mother who brings a child here to be cared for during her working hours pays for the privilege in fair proportion to her earnings (though not by that payment in proportion to the benefits received).

Within the gates a dozen small children are playing in the treeshaded garden, safe from the unhealthy influence of freedom in the streets, safe from the perhaps more unhealthy influence of loneliness in some cramped back room or unwholesome and unlovely backyard. A dozen children who, while their mothers are earning "bread-and-butter" as seamstresses, waitresses, cooks, by any means that takes them from their homes, spend long happy days, well fed and well cared for, and with other children of their own age, such days as that on which Browning's "Pippa" made holiday, so brief in their too often sad little lives; and with something of the influence that Pippa had on those who see them. A dozen children who must take their part as "women of our nation" in less than half a generation from now, playing in the shelter of this "safety-valve," and round about that old-time fisherman's cottage that still stands in these grounds—one of the quaintest records of old Sydney, a low-roofed stone cottage built on a high rock, partly hewn out of it. It was left standing by a miracle of patriotism when the ground was bought and the larger house erected. Surely this place will be rich in memories when our land is a little older.

Inside the house we find a dozen more little visitors, ranging in age from the infant of a few months—or weeks—asleep in its cot, to the toddler of two, who is busy "dissecting" a rag and sawdust doll. Babies are seen in every part of the house, asleep in their pretty cosy cots (the pink of cleanliness and daintiness) in the large airy dormitory; in the dining-room, with its liliputian table and chairs; on the wide verandahs; on the "sandy beach;" and, one at a time, but all in turn, in the kind matron's arms.

This is the little community that the day nursery was formed to receive; this little varying band of 10 to 20 infants each day—some of them less fortunate than waifs and strays, so evidently unwanted and unloved; some from happy homes, where the mother is wise enough to know that her children will be in safe keeping at the nursery, while she "needs must" be away earning what she can for their support and her own; some with the unmistakable mark of "proud generations" on their brows, a grace that the son of "100 kings" might covet.

All that is done for this little community is done by just one trained nurse (the matron) and her one assistant, for the association cannot yet afford to employ a larger staff for this branch.

And what is the work done? What does the association require of its workers? Babies arrive here at 7 in the morning; an occasional one even earlier. The last leaves at half-past 7 at night, or more often 8 o'clock (though the regulation closing hour is half-past 6). "But what can you do but keep the baby till its mother comes?" says the matron. Between these hours the matron is never off duty. For every baby must be bathed and fed. The clothes that it came in must be taken off (and more than likely washed), and the warm clean nursery clothing put on for the day. Soups must be made, milk foods and wholesome sweets prepared, for it is a long day for the children, and they get hungry in this healthy atmosphere. All these things—washing clothes, cooking foods, keeping the house spotlessly clean and in perfect order—are done by the matron and her assistant nurse, and done well. For look round and see how pleasant it is in every nook and corner, from the cheerful dormitory to the tiny kitchen, with its array of plates, each with its dainty squares of bread, now ready for the midday soup; a kitchen where the tables are always snowy white (like the bare floors throughout the house), and pots and pans, mugs and plate, shine as though a staff of maids were kept to polish them. But more than all this order and brightness, worth it again and again, is the matron's love for the children. Not one but finds the "day nursery" a "home" within a few days; not one but finds its way to the matron's heart within a week; and she finds time to keep them there, time to pet and fondle them, all through her busy day. She is not helped in her difficult duties by a liberal purse, as the little notice on the committee-room door very clearly tells:—"Wanted, biscuits, jam, treacle, fruit, donations." A notice that speaks loudly to those of us who have never wanted such things any more than we have wanted bread—rather intimately to those of us who have. A notice that would not have to hang there any longer if only half the other circles of our city knew!

The mother who has found the care of two or three infants too great a burden has something to learn from this matron's care of 20; has something to learn, too, from her success as a "foster mother." She does learn it, happily, a while she is paying only 3d a day for the care of her child here, she is paying a thousandfold more to the State by her better care of at least one more little Australian citizen.

Those who have undertaken the work have learned their lesson, too. Difficult as the initiation and support of the nursery has been, it has been found "worth while" to the workers themselves. It has opened up new vistas in life for them. They have entered the greater realm through its gateway, and none who enter there ever wish to remain within the hedges again.

We, too, who stepped inside this gateway just for a morning's interest and amusement, have also something to learn. We may not wish for "new vistas" now. We may be perfectly satisfied to-day with the world as we find it. But—

Just when we are safest there's a sunset touch,
A fancy from a flower-bell—someone's death.

Such things have power to alter all our theories and philosophies. But, the self-interest aside, we are at least rational, human. We know that 3d a day does not keep a child warmly clothed and healthily fed. We know that no woman should work as the cheerful, uncomplaining matron of this branch of the Day Nursery Association is working: 13 hours a day, without a break. And we know that the association would not have to ask for public support if only the people understood.

It would be easy for some to give £10 a year to support a cot here; it would be possible for others to give a few pence occasionally to help support one. Yet, if we look down the list of subscribers we find just those names that we find on nearly every subscription list of the same nature, names mostly that belonged to the old pioneer families who fought, bravely and honourably, the difficulties of this land's making—the names of men and women who have learned to understand how a nation is made, and to understand, too, how one is held together.

Yet it cannot be that the rest of us don't care. It must be that so few of us know of these works, and understand their value. And the greatest difficulty lies not in making them known (though that in itself is not an easy task), but in making their value understood. When we realise that every penny spent on works of prevention, on helping people to help themselves—on character-forming, in a word—is £1 saved for the public Treasury that otherwise must have been spent on rescue homes, penitentiaries, and hospitals, then we shall be a greater nation.

Let but the people realise this, and it will be found that there is sufficient worth in the British race we are made of to do the right thing voluntarily.

And if a visit to the Woolloomooloo branch of the day nursery can open the gates of the greater realm to any of us—if it can make the Stranger known—it is worth, well worth supporting.

A MIDNIGHT STORM.

IN THE KANIMBLA VALLEY.

(BY PETFORD ALLEN.)

Early morning light streams into the valleys and gorges of the Kanimbla. It penetrates every crevice exposed to its rays, on walls of cliff and through rent of boulder; whilst no atom of moisture which has reached the surface heights escapes detection by reason of its own tell-tale glitter. Under a blue and cloudless sky a soft zephyr fans from the southward; all the landscape is in silent repose, with no indications whatever in the heavens of either wind or rain or cloud. By noon, nevertheless, the barometer had declined several tenths; whilst sudden oppressive heat is already casting off steam vapour which agitates in the atmosphere as it rises to a higher level. The point of view is the well-known yet rarely-visited Sublime Point, lying mid-way between Wentworth Falls and Katoomba, reached by way of the former, across the "London Bridge" from which latter spot it is distant about two miles along a somewhat intricate overgrown and partly hidden bridle track. The projecting point extends a long way out into the landscape, and gives a commanding outlook of the two extensive and picturesque valleys named. Immediately under the extremity of the point the precipice falls perpendicularly 1200 feet. Fascinating are the glories of this wonderful panorama. In the remote south-west horizon two subtle "balls" of cumulus cloud slowly crept over the pinnacled ridges. Dignified strata of congested vapour from evaporation gathered on the far western plains.

None but very close observers would heed these two distant clusters of serrated cloud formation, ever the sure and ominous warning of violent disturbance.

How stealthily they move on towards the sea, whilst, excepting for these, the sky remains absolutely clear.

Impressive stillness everywhere pervades, except it be where tiny torrents murmuring down in the creviced chasms cascaded below. With the veering of the wind from the cool polar south to a little north of west parallel lines of cirrus cloud with frayed edges pass drifting overhead, followed by delicately-marked detached forms of the same strata, varying in exquisite shape and beauty. Prismatic colours adorn some; others resemble the very finest and most gracefully-designed lace work; such unusual decoration of the cloudscape invariably denoting a fall of hail.

At last the centre of the storm appears in the west, rising majestically in one dark mass of concentrated heat and electricity, behind which the sun at length sets; but although invisible, it illuminates the outlines of the densely spreading cloud with gold and silver bordering of rare magnificence, which to some extent lessens the intensity of the surrounding gloom. The mountain streamlets gently murmur on as the subtle "warning" moves into strange unknown destiny ahead, dipping to the Tasman Sea, the transition above meanwhile becoming more rapid, the gold and silver linings having gone, as also the golden glow.

The impending storm approaches with a death-like silence, as if to clash with the impenetrable blackness of night. No glimpse of earth or sky, nor sound of human voice, or else, save the plaintive notes of the boobook owl with its "mopoke, mopoke," far down in the uttermost depths, there to be as if answered by the piercing cry of the curlew, sometimes close in the bushes, then again in the far-away trees.

With thunderbolt suddenness the first storm shot of the battle bursts across the ravine from the zenith above, resounding in the gorges, after cannonading against the "Lone" mountain opposite; then reverberating for some seconds throughout the whole length and breadth of the valley.

Meanwhile intermittent vivid chain lightning splits the darkness to momentarily reveal one long horizontal roll of cumulus cloud moving from [illegible] south to where several conflicting air currents are struggling for supremacy. Truly a [illegible] night scene, especially when the flashes prolonged to illumine the perspective course of the undulating valleys and innumerable faces of rugged steeps on either hand. At intervals, in the centre of the gorge beneath, relentless rain fell in torrents, through the vast width of the volume of which one exceptionally sharp flash appeared to cut its way from west to east, reflecting electrical light upon countless millions of raindrops.

The fury of the elements was even more pronounced when a towering, withered gum-tree was stripped of all its branches, leaving the trunk from the base one long flame of fire.

Midnight came in this isolated, wondrous chasm, and one meditated on the profound mystery of it all.

The crisis of the storm by 2 o'clock in the morning had passed seaward. All sounds, but the new sound of roaring and rushing torrents, now reaches the ear; the turbulent streams in their course, dash and plunge over immense rugged boulders of granite, as well as over hundreds of miniature falls, in their rocky and sinuous journey along the bed of the valley, whilst pursuing their wild and maddened flight onward to the river, to the sea.

A few moments later and a silver line of beautiful light rimmed the far western ridged horizon from end to end. This unexpected development indicated the last of the storm, and as the width of silver gradually widened a star of the first magnitude passed down through its crystal clearness, then dipped beyond and was lost to sight.

Every sign of the disturbance had vanished one hour before dawn, leaving the landscape refreshed with a silken atmosphere and a sky of perfect transparency to await the breaking of another day.

A SINGLE BOX OF CUTICURA OINTMENT CURED THREE.

"My husband has suffered for years at different times with this distressing complaint—burning, irritating rash on his arms, legs, and down the centre of his back. He had tried other remedies but it did no good until he tried Cuticura Ointment. With the first night's use he got more rest, for of course he always suffered with it more at night. He would scratch till the pimples bled. He persevered with the Cuticura Ointment every night and within a week he was completely cured. Thanks to Cuticura he has not had any more trouble of the old complaint.

"My little girl, since vaccination, always had a rash. On the lower part of her head and neck would form white patches. I tried a lot of ointments and cold cream for this but they never did much good. She would scratch and make places bleed but she soon stopped her scratching after using Cuticura Ointment for a fortnight. She has had no return of it. She is five years old.

"My baby boy had teething rash on his arms, legs, and back for six weeks. It used to keep us both awake all night. He would keep scratching his little legs till he really made them bleed. I used to try different ointments for it. They did not do much good, but since using Cuticura my baby hasn't suffered any more with teething rash. It cured him in about a week. It did not take a whole box of Cuticura to cure the lot of them. Mrs. F. Hart, Castle-street, Woodbridge, Suffolk, England, Nov. 20, 1909." [illegible] R. Towns and Co., Sydney.—Advt.

COMING SHOW.

Ladies Poultry Club .... This Day

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Breeder.—While the poultry fancy will be pleased to hear of fresh blood from England in White Orpingtons, you can be assured that to bring out a trio as good as a few here will cost you £20 or more. There are a few individual specimens of this variety about Sydney, which would fetch a £20 note were they exhibited at any English show, win or not.

Mr. C. J. Turner had a full catalogue of pure-bred fowls to offer on Wednesday last. Silver Wyandottes were the most plentiful, followed by Orpingtons and Leghorns. A few Game, Plymouth Rocks, and Hamburgs were also offered. There was a good attendance of buyers, and for fair quality stuff satisfactory prices were realised. A very fine Aylesbury drake fetched 23s and a duck 20s. Messrs. Strachan and Rone on the same day offered a large number of Indian Runner ducks, which fetched up to 6s 6d. Of the few fowls on sale a black Orpington cock sold best at 10s.

The Railway and Tramway Employees' poultry and pigeon show, which closed on Saturday night last, was a successful affair throughout. A fine hall, good quality birds, not many complaints about the judging, a fair gate, and good management were the features which contributed to the excellency of the society's second annual show.

At the late meeting of poultry farmers anent the egg business charges were made that breeders marketed the eggs which proved infertile in the incubator, and that some of them ultimately found their way into the consumer's dozen of new-laids. The same trouble is being experienced in England, where in the early months of the year there are great numbers of infertiles. A late issue of the "Mark Lane Express" says:—"We put the question to a large poultry breeder, who said it was impossible for anyone to tell the infertile eggs from the incubator from new-laids." The paper adds: "In this we think he was quite right, and whether the flavour is affected or not through the egg having been in the incubator, we can quite understand anyone objecting to buying infertile eggs as new-laid. We may add that the poultry-keeper we have referred to sells his infertile eggs as such to private cusomers at a reduced price, and if the evidence of the latter and their readiness to buy is anything to go by there cannot be very much the matter with them."

The current issue of the "Agricultural Gazette" contains a well-illustrated article on the egg-laying competitions, which terminated at Hawkesbury College on March 31 last. The 360 first-year hens averaged 181 eggs per hen, as against 180 at the preceding test. The feed bill per hen was 6s 9d, and the surplus proceeds over the feed bill 15s per fowl, the highest yet recorded. White Leghorns laid an average of 192 eggs per hen, Silver Wyandottes 152, and Langshans 158. There was but one pen of Brown Leghorns, these producing 208 per hen; the pen of Minorcas laying 195 each. The third competition to determine the quantities hens will lay in their second year, in comparison with the first, has shown on each occasion a drop of about 50 eggs per hen. The ducks averaged two dozen each less, and the feed bill 2s 9d each more than the fowls, the profits on the fowls being more than double that of the ducks. The feeding was the usual bran, pollard, wheat, maize, greenstuff, and grit. The deaths were but 5 per cent. of the number competing.

The Ladies' Poultry Club show in the Masonic Hall, which closes to-night, is the last of the season's city or suburban events. March witnessed the opening one at the Royal, followed by the Western Suburbs, the Illawarra, the Poultry Club, Fanciers' Association, Parramatta, the Railway and Tramway, and a new one at North Shore. The latter was the only disappointing exhibition, all the others having increased entries. Many fanciers consider there are too many shows; still, so long as there is increased patronage, and the quality of the fowls improving, it is scarcely likely there will be any curtailment. Orpingtons at all the places were the most numerous, Wyandottes not up to those of last year, while Leghorns continue their popularity. The most pleasing feature was a marked revival in Dorkings, Plymouth Rocks, and Minorcas.

The South African poultry breeders, like the Australians, have within recent years been importing some pure-bred poultry from America, and find that most of the breeds do not agree in type, etc., with the English standard for judging. The secretary to the South African Poultry Association concluded his report as follows:—"On our agenda will be found a motion dealing with the American birds and their judging by the American standard. We feel that we cannot have two standards in existence, as same will lead to a lot of confusion, but breeders must endeavour to combine the best qualities of both, and if the English standard is adhered to general satisfaction will be the result. We must remark that what has caused much dissatisfaction is not that the standard is at fault, but that judges have often ignored the standard and practically made a standard of their own."

The above is exactly the position here. The standard is all right, but has been ignored by the judges, who have practically made one of their own, which brought many good breeds into disfavour. Andalusians may be mentioned. These short-legged, blue fowls were popular both in the show pen and the utility man's breeding yard, being noted for both the number and size of eggs they produced. A dozen or more years ago the judges began to favour length of limb, to the extent that nothing but the stilty sort could secure a prize. From that time the breed has been on the decline; two or three specimens being now the extent to which they are exhibited. Nor are they now much regarded as layers, and have no place in the egg-laying competitions. The Andalusian of old was a profitable fowl, while its colour lent variety to the show pen.

ARTIFICIAL INCUBATION.

Within the past year or two, a great deal has been written and said about artificial incubation, the chief grounds of discussion being the large number of fertile eggs which, with some breeders, fail to hatch, and known as dead in shell. Varied theories have been advanced to account for the trouble, and many experiments made to determine the cause. Some blame the machines, others put the trouble down to faulty ventilation, lack of, or too much, moisture, while poorly-constructed incubator rooms have also been blamed. It has always been contended in this column, that given good well-fertilised eggs from the healthy stock, and placed in any of the incubators now on the market, with a regulated temperature of from 102 to 104, results can be obtained equal to that by the natural hatcher. Those who have experienced bad results have only to look at the authenticated testimonials issued by the incubator makers, both Australian and American, showing in many instances there have been 90 chickens from 100 fertile eggs, occasionally up to 98, and in rare instances the full 100 per cent. was obtained. From the same make of machine, which gave these results, often as low as 50 per cent. has been recorded. Those who are always theorising as to the cause of dead in shell must know that if a breeder secures a 95 per cent. hatch to-day, with the same eggs and machine, and other like conditions, approximate results would obtain every time tried. There is scarcely a doubt but that the larger proportion of the poor hatches are due to weak fertilisation of the eggs. At a suburban poultry farm, where Langshans are largely kept, the first hatch of this season, 96 chickens from 100 eggs was obtained. The second run of the same incubator was due a week ago, and 99 chickens from 100 eggs resulted. The incubator is one of many on the market, nothing special about it, and is located in a weatherboard, iron-roofed structure, and in striking contrast to the specially-designed incubator cellar, or much-advocated, double-walled incubator-room. The simple explanation of this poultry farmer's hatching success is, that the stock are every one in the pink of condition. The head bright red, and the plumage glossy, the fowls alert and keen for their food. The male birds always in good condition, and never over done in the breeding pen. Good hatching is, however, only the half-way to success in poultry breeding, for, what does it benefit a man if he hatches all his eggs, and loses many of his chickens? The breeder mentioned above is equally successful in rearing, the only losses being an occasional one, due to some accident. Neither are there any of the patented rearing appurtenances on the farm, only ordinary home-made, square-shaped boxes, through which go a few pipes, a kerosene lamp, and a yard or two of wire-netting. These constitute the rearing appliances on the place, which, for quantities of eggs per hen, success in rearing, and general profitableness, is one of the most successful utility poultry farms in the State.

A cold can be cured much more quickly when treated as soon as contracted, and before it has become settled in the system. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cure of colds, and should be kept at hand for instant use. Pleasant to take. Safe and sure.

The uncared-for cough, the cough you let go on, hoping it will cure itself, is the costly cough. It is the cough that annoys you, keeps on hacking and tearing the delicate and sensitive membranes and tissues of the throat, until it is impossible to cure. Take care of your cough now. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It soothes, relieves, and cures.—Advt.

THE CHURCHES.

The additions to the Church of England burial ground at Wilberforce were consecrated by the Archbishop on Wednesday.

The Rev. Charles Hughesdon has been licensed as rector of St. Michael's, Sydney, as from the 1st instant. The Rev. Dr. Manning, the late rector, has been licensed to officiate within the diocese of Sydney.

Mr. T. A. Dibbs recently promised to give £700 towards liquidating the debt on Christ Church, Lavender Bay, on condition that the remaining £200 was subscribed by the parishioners. The greater part of that sum has already been found.

The Rev. W. Harry Edwardes, who was for some time assistant at St. Thomas', North Sydney, and at St. James', King-street, and recently locum tenens at Woolwich, leaves to-day by the A.U.S.N. Company's steamer Kyarra for Adelaide to take the locum tenency of St. Matthew's Church, Kensington, one of the suburbs of Adelaide.

The lady associates of the Church of England Deaconess' Institution have arranged to hold their annual sale of work on October 20, and Lady Chelmsford has consented to perform the opening ceremony.

At the conclusion of service at St. Luke's Church, Mosman, on Sunday evening last the rector, Rev. F. W. Reeve, admitted 22 men to membership of the Church of England Men's Society.

On Thursday evening, June 30, the members of St. John's Girls' Guild, Glebe, made a presentation to the Rev. Clive Statham. In making the presentation Miss V. Burbury remarked, "We shall always hold you second to the memory of our late dear rector."

The Haberfield Baptist Church is to be opened to-morrow. A number of special services will be held.

The Methodist Centenary Fund is fairly launched. The Rev. W. W. Rutledge, having visited the Stanmore circuit, inaugurates the movement in the Ashfield circuit by special service to-morrow at Ashfield, which will be conducted by himself and Rev. B. Danks. Arrangements have been made for special music, Misses Ernestine Louat and Myra Cresty being the soloists for the day. An attractive programme has been prepared for the public meeting on Monday evening to actually launch the fund, and the organising secretary hopes to have very substantial additional promises when he has completed the canvass of this fast-developing circuit.

The Rev. W. V. Jeffries, of Adelaide, who is on a visit to Sydney, will take part in the Central Methodist Mission demonstration next Thursday.

The twentieth anniversary of Mr. J. H. Mills' settlement as City Missionary at Glebe district was celebrated on Tuesday. During the social evening which was held the general secretary urged that a special effort should be made to liquidate the remainder of the building debt, £322 14s 1d. In a report given by Sister Atkins of her house to house visiting, special reference was made to the many cases of sickness in the district. Very crowded and unhealthy conditions prevailed, and in some cases three and four families lived under one roof. A movement had been started with the object of taking city children into the country for a week or a fortnight's holiday, and £50 had been subscribed to provide a mission cottage in the country, to be used by all the mission districts.

At a meeting of the executive council of the Australian Board of Missions last week the Rev. W. G. Ivens, late of the Melanesian Mission, was appointed superintendent of Yarrabah mission in place of the Rev. E. R. Gribble, who resigned. Archdeacon Lefroy, the general secretary, reported on his recent visit to Yarrabah, and spoke favourably of the general condition of that mission. The executive also passed a resolution requesting the Bishop of Carpentaria to undertake the management of the Trubanaman Mission on the Mitchell River in future. It was reported that the Church Missionary Association had accepted the invitation to join in promoting a missionary congress and conference in connection with the meeting of the general synod, which is to take place in October.

The sale of work conducted by the ladies of S. James' Church, King-street, in aid of the New Guinea Mission, in S. James' Hall, was a distinct success, financially and socially. During the evening a break was made in selling operations and an enjoyable hour was spent in listening to a most attractive vocal and elocutionary programme. The contributing artists were Miss Annie Roberts (humorous sketches), Miss Murielle Fraser (soprano), Miss Narelle Tingcombe (elocutionist), Miss Moss (pianiste), and Mr. Claude Spencer (tenor).

At the Cathedral Chapter House on Tuesday night Rev. Dr. Radford, Warden of St. Paul's College, addressed a gathering of Sunday School teachers on "The Preparation of the Teacher." He urged teachers to realise the importance and difficulty of their work, and to keep a high standard always in view. Preparation of lessons must aim at influencing the minds, hearts, and wills of the children, and to this end teachers must clearly realise the points of their subjects, and, indeed, must learn a great deal more than they intended to teach. The preparation of teachers must be intellectual and spiritual.

At the first anniversary of the Burwood Christian Brotherhood, which was celebrated by special services and meetings during the past week, the Rev. H. Clark was presented with a valuable collection of books.

The membership campaign of the Y.M.C.A. is progressing very favourably. For the first seven days of this month 50 new members have been enrolled, and it is anticipated that this average will be maintained each week during the month. A new illustrated prospectus of the Y.M.C.A. building is to be issued in a few days.

The Chicago Y.M.C.A. has just completed a financial campaign resulting in £236,500 sterling being secured. Four hundred workers, including many of the principal clergy, were 12 days unceasing in their labours.

During his visit to Sydney at the invitation of the Y.M.C.A., in addition to giving Shakespeare lectures, Rabbi Boas will speak on the "Synagogue—Its Origin, History, and its Relation to the Church."

The discussion of Prayer-book revision has entered on a new phase since the Dean of Westminster made his ingenious proposal in favour of leaving the book itself untouched, but of supplementing it with an appendix. The dean's idea is that, after a few years, the appendix might be revised in the light of experience—an important proviso. A majority of the London Diocesan Conference, without expressing any opinion on this latter point, has just voted for the embodiment in an appendix of "permissible additions and deviations."

William Frederick, a travelling salesman for a large flower plant at Duluth, Minn., according to the "Christian Advocate," of New York, bears the distinction of being the only person who ever committed the Bible to memory. He is not a member of any particular church, but he has made such a study of the Bible that he can repeat any passage in it from Genesis to Revelation, and state where it is found. He was 18 years committing the Bible to memory. His object in doing so was not for the purpose of arguing Scripture or of making a display of his wonderful knowledge along that line, but simply for his own benefit and his love for the book.

The Bible will soon be printed in every language or dialect known throughout the world. Last year, according to the one hundred and fifth report of the British and Foreign Bible Society, the languages in which either the complete Bible or parts of it were issued reached a total of 418.

At the last monthly meeting of the general council of the N.S.W. Christian Endeavour Union, 14 newly-formed C.E. societies, with 350 members, were affiliated with the union.

A demonstration to celebrate the 26th anniversary of the Central Methodist Mission will be held in the Town Hall on Thursday, and the chair will be taken by Lord Chelmsford.

The Rev. W. Temple, M.A., son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, will next month make a tour of the Universities of Adelaide, Sydney, and Melbourne, under the auspices of the World's Student Christian Federation. He will spend about twelve days in each centre, and will deliver a series of lectures and addresses upon Christian apologetic and social subjects. Besides being a Fellow and Lecturer at Queen's College, Oxford, he is president of the Workers' Education Association of Great Britain, an association consisting of about 1000 trades unions and clubs in affiliation for educational purposes; secretary to the council of the Oxford House Settlement, in Bethnal Green, London; and chaplain to the present Archbishop of Canterbury. During his student days he was a scholar at Rugby and an exhibitioner at Balliol. While at Oxford he was president of the union, the highest distinction which can come to an undergraduate. He was captain of the college Rugby football team. The lectures and addresses will, for the most part, be delivered under the auspices of the Australian Student Christian Union, but certain of them will be given under the direct control of the councils or extension lecture boards of the universities. In addition to lecturing to bodies of students, Mr. Temple will be free at stated times to speak with men personally. He will also address the boys at some of the great public schools in each centre. Special Sunday afternoon services for University members in the Cathedrals of Adelaide, Sydney, and Melbourne are being arranged.

DECENTRALISATION.

ROYAL COMMISSION INQUIRY.

MORE HARBOUR DETAILS.

The Decentralisation Commission continued its sittings yesterday, under the presidency of Mr. C. N. J. Oliver.

Mr. E. M. de Burgh, Chief Engineer for Harbours and Water Supply, resumed his evidence.

Regarding Byron Bay, he said if it was desirable to construct a harbour at this place by reason of its proximity to the rich dairying and agricultural districts, two breakwaters would be necessary—a northern and a southern—extending from the shore seawards, a distance of 5100ft, the ends being 800ft apart. The estimated cost of the northern breakwater was £323,250, and that of the southern £285,500, a total of £608,750. The depth of water at the entrance would be from 38ft to 42ft, low water, spring tides. Good stone for the construction of the breakwaters could be obtained 4½ miles away. The breakwaters would have to be at the northern end of the bay, as for harbour purposes the southern portion of the bay was out of the question, by reason of the shallow depth and the shooting that was going on.

Woolgoolga Bay was a safe anchorage in southerly and south-westerly weather, but with the wind east of south it was not safe. On the assumption that good stone was available in the locality a safe and commodious harbour might be constructed. The scheme included a northern breakwater 5200ft long, and a southern breakwater 2100ft long, the seaward ends being 800ft apart. The depth at the entrance would be from 52ft to 56ft at low water, spring tides. The estimated cost of the two breakwaters was £472,500.

At Coff's Harbour there was anchorage for coasters in southerly and westerly winds under the north side of North Coff's Island, in about 6 fathoms, but with any easting in the wind the shelter was not sufficient for safety. The whole of Coff's Harbour proper carried less than 30ft at low water, and was, therefore, unsuitable for ocean-going vessels of large size. A harbour might be made by running a breakwater in a northerly direction from near the eastern end of North Coff's Island, and another in an easterly direction from North Islet. A viaduct or causeway from the shoreline to the western end of North Coff's Island would be necessary to convey stone for the eastern breakwater, and for access to the wharfs and stores which would be placed on North Coff's Island. The northern breakwater would be 4600ft, and the southern 1800ft long; the seaward ends being 800ft apart. The depth at the entrance would be from 41ft to 55ft at low water spring tide. The causeway mentioned would be 3000ft long. The estimated cost was: Northern breakwater, £252,250; southern breakwater, £155,000; causeway, £34,400; total, £349,650. The North Coast railway passed within two miles of the present jetty at Byron Bay.

Trial Bay afforded good anchorage and shelter for country vessels in southerly and south-easterly winds. A breakwater had been run out 976ft from the shore on the eastern side of the bay. The original intention was to make it a total length of 4950ft, but the work had been abandoned for various reasons. The bay, as it stood, was too shallow to afford accommodation for large deep-sea vessels, the greatest depth being less than 30ft. A harbour that would be safe in all weathers might be constructed in the vicinity of South-west rocks. There would be two breakwaters, the northern with a length of 4000ft, and the southern 5400ft, the seaward ends being 800ft apart. The depth at the entrance would be 45ft at low water spring tide. The estimated cost was: Northern breakwater, £271,000; southern, £260,750. Good stone for the work was available in the vicinity.

Sugarloaf Bay afforded anchorage for coasting vessels in southerly and easterly winds. The best anchorage was in 4 fathoms. A harbour in this bay would involve the construction of two breakwaters, at a cost of £575,370. The North Coast railway passed within 40 miles of the bay, at a point about 10 miles northerly from Dungog.

Witness did not see the slightest possibility of the Clarence being made into a harbour for the accommodation of large ocean-going vessels.

The works at the Richmond were nearer completion than any on the North Coast, but to-day they only had 10ft on the bar, and 10ft on the crossing. Their objective had been 12ft; but by the work now being carried out in the river, with the object of getting a depth of 14ft from the entrance to Lismore, there was some hope of securing about 14ft at the entrance. This was an extremely useful port for coastal purposes, by reason of the rich districts behind it; but with the depths obtainable under the works now in progress, it would be useless for large ocean-going steamers.

The Commission adjourned till 10 a.m. on Monday.

THE LARGER HOPE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD

Sir,—I have been away from home, and could not earlier study your recent review of my book, "The Science of Life and the Larger Hope." The criticism is evidently that of a biological specialist, and is, therefore, most interesting and valuable. As the main issue raised therein is of vital importance for the relation of science to any reasonable spiritual view of the world I venture to ask you to allow me space for a few remarks.

Your reviewer describes—and rightly so—the first part of my book as "popular science." It consists, in fact, of certain popular lectures which I delivered here, and which I was requested to publish. But I hope its science is not the less trustworthy. If I can be shown to have fallen into any serious error I shall be really grateful, for I keenly desire to face the facts so far as they are accessible.

Your reviewer also, and wisely, points out the danger of manipulating generalisations without knowledge of detail, and thinks that I have not sufficiently studied the most recent results of bio-chemical research. Of course, I cannot claim to be an expert; but I am able to follow the chief lines of biological controversy, and I have studied the discoveries and hypotheses of men like Weismann, Verworn, Loeb, Hering, and Rignano, no less than those of neo-vitalists like Bergson, Montgomery, Morgan, and Driesch. I mention these names to guard against an implied charge of superficiality in my treatment of technical matters. And I have the authority of so ardent a champion of biochemistry as Prof. Robertson for stating that the main "underlying principles can readily be stated in concise form."' May I ask your reviewer if there is not also a danger of losing larges issues and wider relationship in over-specialisation.

Great is bio-chemistry, and great are its professors. But, after all, it can never do more than explore the mechanism in and through which life and mind manifest themselves. It describes the telephone, but cannot touch the meaning of the messages which pass over it. Even on their purely scientific side, the vital processes have unique characteristics which demand recognition. As says the bio-chemical specialist, Rignano, "it is evident that this endeavour not to attribute to vital energy and specific nature of its own, and consequently to explain even the most characteristic phenomena of life by means of only those energies which physics and chemistry afford us to-day can have no more success than if one should attempt to explain chemical phenomena by means of physical phenomena only." How much more is this true when we rise from the objective facts of physics and chemistry to the facts of the inner life, to the subjective willings and feelings and aspirations of the conscious "self." Surely we are landed into another sphere. And any scientist who refuses to see the profound difference between "subjective" and "objective," and to recognise that the former is out of his reach, cannot hope to attain to any comprehensive world-view into which to fit the results of his specialisation.

My sympathy with the scientist is whole-hearted. My desire to learn from him is very keen. But I cannot consent at his bidding to confine myself to the sphere of objective phenomena. I am alive; I can think; I can will; I can aspire. I can claim kinship with "something far more deeply interfused." And I will not sell my birthright for any mess of merely soulless facts. Possibly some may regard this assertion of my spiritual nature as a simple precipitate of bio-chemical processes. Well, in that case I should at any rate have the consolation of knowing that my views would be exactly on the same footing as those of my kindly critic. It would be chemical precipitate versus chemical precipitate. We should each of us be just what we are, predestined outcomes of mechanical processes, and there would be nothing extra-mechanical to which to make appeal. Caderent omnes quaestiones, save in so far as bio-chemical forces urged us into meaningless and illusory controversies.

I am, etc.,
J. E. TASMANIA.

LAW REPORT.

DIVORCE COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Gordon.)

MOTION FOR STAY OF EXECUTION.

Edmunds v Edmunds.

Mr. L. Armstrong, instructed by Mr. P. K. White, appeared for Lillie Carlyle Edmunds, respondent in the suit brought by Willie Alfred Sanderson Edmunds for divorce, and moved for a stay of proceedings until the first four days of next Term, on that portion of the decree of June 16 last giving petitioner the custody of the child. Mr. Shipway (Messrs. Shipway and Berne) appeared to oppose the application.

Application refused.

DECREES ABSOLUTE.

His Honor made absolute the decrees nisi in the following suits, and declared the marriages dissolved:—John Mackie Blake v Mary Blake, and Fanny Vandenberg v Louis Vandenberg.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Backhouse.)

ACTION FOR ASSAULT.

Hart v Dowsett.

Mr. Moriarty, instructed by Mr. H. E. M'Intosh, appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Blacket, instructed by Mr. J. W. Abigail, for the defendant. This action, which was heard on the 10th May last, was brought by Louie Hart, of Thomas-street, Drummoyne, by Charles Hart, her next friend, against Frederick Dowsett, of Park-avenue, Drummoyne, to recover compensation for an assault alleged to have been committed upon her by the defendant on February 24 last. It appeared from the evidence that the parties had been "keeping company" for some time, and the plaintiff swore that the assault was committed on the evening of the 24th February, while she and defendant were out together at Drummoyne. She claimed £400 damages. Defendant, however, swore that he was not with plaintiff at Drummoyne on the date stated; but was at Balmain.

His Honor now delivered his reserved judgment, and said that at first he thought that the facts might involve a criminal charge, and he therefore placed his verdict in a sealed envelope and gave it to the Registrar to keep until it was known whether the Attorney-General would take proceedings. He had since been informed that there would be no criminal proceedings, and he now gave his verdict. On the whole, and looking at the case as a jury would, he believed the plaintiff's story, and was of opinion that defendant's alibi failed.

Verdict for plaintiff, £25.

(Before Judge Rogers.)

COLLISION BETWEEN MOTOR AND LORRY.

Garvin v Brown.

Mr. F. J. Tanner appeared for the plaintiff. Defendant appeared in person. This was an action brought by John Garvin, of Steel-street, Surry Hills, against Tom Brown, of Elizabeth-street, Sydney, motor-driver, to recover compensation for injuries sustained by the plaintiff owing to the negligence of the defendant in the management of a motor car. Damages were laid at £400. Plaintiff's case was that on the night of December 3, he was driving a lorry bearing the remains of a motor car which had taken fire at La Perouse, and while crossing George-street West on the way to Wattle-street, a motor car driven by the defendant, and coming from the direction of Grace Bros., came violently into collision with the lorry. The impact was so great that the lorry was almost overturned. Plaintiff was thrown with considerable force on to the roadway under his horses, which, after kicking him, bolted. His right foot was crushed by one of the wheels of the lorry, and he was otherwise injured. He also swore that at the time, defendant was travelling at the rate of 30 miles an hour, and other witnesses estimated the pace at 25 miles.

The defendant stated that the motor car was going only at the rate of from 10 to 14 miles an hour. It was running alongside a tram approaching Wattle-street, when the lorry came across at six or eight miles an hour. Defendant was unable to pull out of the way because of the tram car, and a collision took place which fractured one of the front wheels of the motor car. Defendant admitted that at the police court he pleaded guilty to a charge of furious driving and was fined £10; but explained that he had pleaded guilty because he was under contract for a 10-days' trip in a car.

His Honor returned a verdict for the plaintiff with damages £52 10s.

ALLEGED FALSE PRETENCES.

Charles Alfred Newbridge, 45, a master mariner, was again before Mr. King, S.M., yesterday, at the Water Police Court, to answer a charge that between April 24 and June 15 last he falsely pretended to Paul Keig, licensee of the Balfour Hotel, King and Elizabeth streets, that he had £400 lying to his credit at the office of Burns, Philp, and Co., Ltd., by means of which he obtained from Keig the sum of £28. According to the evidence of the prosecutor accused called at his hotel and said that he had been recommended to stay there by a master-mariner at the Solomon Islands. He wanted to stay as a boarder, and represented that he had £400 lying to his credit at the office of Burns, Philp, and Co., Ltd. He was allowed to stay, and altogether he remained as a boarder for five weeks at 30s a week, and during that period witness advanced him money amounting to £19, making a total indebtness of £28. It was shown that accused had no such credit. He reserved his defence, and was committed for trial.

A VOICE ALMOST FROM THE GRAVE.

IF YOU SUFFER FROM NERVOUSNESS, WEAKNESS, LOW SPIRITS, POOR SLEEP OR APPETITE, BILIOUSNESS SICK HEADACHE, OR INDIGESTION, TAKE CLEMENTS TONIC.

Lassitude or nerve weakness is the bane of the civilised life. There is no medicine equal to this Nerve and Blood Tonic remedy, because it corrects the stomach, creates appetite, prevents biliousness, soothes the nerves, strengthens the heart's action, and give rapid relief. The letter below should be read and remembered. It is one of the most remarkable ever written.

Mr. Patrick Downes, formerly a resident of Corowa, N.S.W., and now of the Great Consuls Mine, Rutherglen, Vic., writes on 13/10/'09, stating he had been ill for years, had 17 medical examinations, had been in four hospitals without relief. But Clements Tonic cured him. Again, on 19/5/'10 he writes:—

Clements Tonic, Ltd.,

"I have sent my photo. I wish I could do more to advertise Clements Tonic to sufferers of ill-health, for scores of men and women come to me the last three months from far and near, and wanted to know if Clements Tonic cured me. I am thankful I can assure them all without fear or doubt it has. Also, those who gave me up, and the hundreds of people who know the truth when I was ill in Clunes, Ballarat, Wangaratta, and Corowa. Medical men had no hope for me, but thanks to this medicine, I am here before them all this day a cured man. I wish I could talk in person to you to tell you the look of surprise many persons have, especially those connected with the hospitals, who meet me and see me alive.

(Signed) PATRICK DOWNES.

Constipation, Debility, Lassitude, Flatulence, Nervousness, Weakness, Poor Appetite, Indigestion, Depression of Spirits, Melancholia, Brain Fag, soon give way before this sterling medicine. Always keep it—as it is only another name for sound health, and is the silent doctor in your house. Prevention by its timely use is always better than cure. Send for it. All chemists and stores sell it.—Advt.

UNNATURAL "NATURAL HISTORIES."

One of the needs of the day is a comprehensive and reliable natural history. The importance of nature studies is now generally acknowledged in the most convincing manner by the amount of attention given to the subject in the press and the schools. If the matter is worthy of the great and ever-increasing consideration given to it (and this cannot be questioned), it is surely necessary and worth while to have these studies conducted on a reasonably sound and scientific basis. What is most urgently required are standard authorities covering the whole of the ground, and brought into use in the schools. The position now is that what reliable and valuable histories are available are merely of a fragmentary character, and against these are circulated all sorts of confusing, conflicting, and misleading "studies," which have their source in either superficial and indeterminate knowledge, or speculative ignorance of the subject. The natural consequence is that all kinds of fallacies and errors regarding the fauna of Australia are disseminated and perpetuated, and the great majority of the people are kept in ignorance of the character and the habits and history of the birds and animals which are indigenous to their own country.

Numerous so-called "natural histories" have been written about Australia, and have been published and circulated; in some cases they have obtained a considerable vogue, despite the fact that they have contained most flagrant errors, and often enough stupid misrepresentations. The truth is that there is only one way of producing a reasonably full and authentic natural history of any country, and that way has never yet been tried in a whole-hearted manner. There is no single individual in Australia to-day sufficient of a prodigy to be able to write an authoritative book on the bird life of the whole of the continent, to say nothing of undertaking the same task in regard to the fauna generally. On the other hand there are doubtless scores who could be depended upon to give an accurate history of some particular branch, or phase, of this work. It is true that the one great book on birds (Gould's "Birds of Australia") was the product of an individual, but it was also the result of a lifetime of patient, able investigation on thoroughly systematic and scientific lines—the lines which take nothing for granted, and subject even the minor details of a study to crucial observation and searching test. But Gould's colossal work might just as well have been written in Greek or Latin for all the use it is to the public. Owing to the prohibitive price probably the book is as unknown to the public as a whole as if it had never been published.

The one effectual method of producing a standard authority would be through the collaboration of a number of specialists. One man may have a very thorough knowledge of the birds and animals of, say, New South Wales, but even that does not qualify him for the work of writing a valuable and authoritative work embracing the whole of the States. So varied is the wild life of the country that one man will not do badly if he succeeds in acquiring definite and conclusive knowledge of the birds and animals of one region; to be even able to do this he must have certain primary qualifications—the natural gift of observation, persistency of purpose, and the leisure which is necessary to opportunity. In our time what renders the task of observation more difficult and uncertain is the radical change of conditions. Changed conditions, as we have had demonstrated in the case of some of the most widely distributed and best known forms of wild life, bring about change of habits on the part of birds in accordance with the universal and inexorable law relating to adaptability. The species which fails to adapt itself to new conditions following upon the settlement of the country, the destruction of timber, harbours for natural food, etc., is bound to gradually decline and ultimately disappear.

Under the pressure of the law of natural selection birds and animals which are not migratory change their food habits in a manner that would appear incredible to those who had never had an opportunity of observing them excepting under perfectly natural conditions. The diet of the magpie, for instance, may be entirely different in one part of Australia from what it is in another. In some parts this bird—originally insectivorous—has become a grain-eater; in others a creature of carrion tastes. All these abnormal variations, modifications, and adjustments to new environment consequently add complexity to the question of nature study that is of any value, and make it more imperative than ever that we should have an authoritative work contributed to by specialists, not only in each branch, but for different regions as well. To produce the class of book that is called for in the interests of reliable natural history, the services of at least 40 or 50 persons of proved knowledge and ability would be required. Each of these could be entrusted with the duty of dealing with the one special branch of the subject for which he was best qualified by first-hand investigation and experience. No writer should be permitted to touch any phase of a subject which he had not mastered. In addition, there should be five or six editors—one for each division of the work—to review, arrange, and check in collaboration. No doubt it would be difficult to manage the business side of a work of this character in such a manner as to ensure that it would, when published, be within the reach of the general public. All such obstacles, however, could be overcome easily enough if the work were undertaken by the State or the Commonwealth. As the matter is of national character and importance, there does not seem to be any reason why this should not be done. Certainly, it is time that something was done to put a stop to the teaching of unnatural natural history in the press, and even by means of some of the books which still find their way into the schools. Only in the matter of degree is it worse to have false general history taught in the schools than to have children's minds imbued with ridiculously erroneous notions of the habits and character of indigenous birds and animals. Some of the errors given life in this way a generation ago are still flourishing, and will probably not be eradicated for years to come. One ambitious work of this kind, which used to be met with in many schools, "taught" that in Australia "the thick end of the fruit was next the stem," that when running "kangaroos touched the ground with their forelegs in every jump," and the profound lack of knowledge manifested in these matters was fully equalled in other directions.

ITEMS.

Mr. J. Enright reports selling at auction on Tuesday last, at Maitland, 258 horses, prices going to £51 10s; total sales realising £5895 10s 6d, an average of £22 17s.

Although artificial feeding generally shows good results with the ewes during a dry lambing season, the mortality amongst lambs is invariably heavy. Pastoralists often find that when lucerne, for instance, is distributed in a large paddock the ewes will leave their lambs to eat it, which leads to loss of lambs. Moreover, when ewes in lamb rush about a paddock for feed every day their condition is not improved.

The season in Riverina is one of the most remarkable ever experienced. During the early winter dry conditions prevailed, and feed rapidly disappeared. Towards the end of last month steady rain fell, being accompanied by warm, close weather. At present the conditions are such as might be expected during the springtime. In consequence green grass is becoming plentiful, and the new wheat is growing strongly.

One of the districts being opened up by a new railway in Queensland appears to be well suited to maize-growing. A farmer with scrub land cleared it and burnt off, and following the usual practice in Queensland he planted maize in the ashes. He netted £1259 from 110 acres. It is claimed that some of the areas have given 144 bushels per acre.

THE WOOL TRADE.

SUPER WOOLS IN GOOD REQUEST

Although there has only been a moderate volume of business transacted in the Sydney wool market by private treaty during the week, the tone has by no means been listless. The sales of some fair-sized parcels of skin-wools have been effected at late rates. Some of the selling houses reporting a quiet week, while others have experienced a rather better inquiry. Super combing wools have been in request at fair values; but for all other descriptions, and particularly lots of medium staple, the market has been slack, and very few lines have changed hands. Receipts of wool during the week by rail and boat have been light, and outside the ordinary output of skin-wools from the fellmongery works there will be very little of the staple offering in Sydney till the next series of sales, arranged for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, July 18, 19, and 20. How values will rule then will be more or less clear by the results of the Brisbane sales next week, and by the course that values take during the first week of the London July series opening on Tuesday next, 12th instant. The Sydney sales coming after the London opening will enable buyers to operate with confidence on the basis then established. Fortunately for the position at the present time, the quantities available for the next London series are below the limit that was fixed for the July auctions. The limit for new arrivals at the ensuing series was fixed at 160,000 bales. Instead of that limit being reached, it is 30,000 bales short. The net new arrivals amount to only 130,000 bales, which, with the 25,000 bales carried over from the April-May series, make a grand total of 155,000 bales, as compared with a possible 185,000 bales. That satisfactory state of affairs is increased, so far as the position of merino wool is concerned from the fact that the London offerings are understood to comprise only a small proportion of merino; the bulk being New Zealand crossbreds. Under all the circumstances, and taking into consideration the probability that the London September series will provide only a very modest bill of fare, the prospects are decidedly good. Especially so when we come to think that there is very little wool in sight for several months to come, side by side with an excellent consumptive demand that shows no signs of abating.

WHY THE POSITION IS SOUND.

The foregoing contention is more or less borne out by some wool users in their forecast for the coming season; and it is refreshing, indeed, to find that the position can be looked at from the consumptive standpoint side by side with a probable moderate increase in the next Australasian clip without jumping to the conclusion that there must of necessity be a material decline in wool values. After summarising the wool season, that closed last week, Messrs. Wenz and Co. said with regard to prospects that for the last two years the consumption of wool has increased, without the aid of any special factors, and notwithstanding the evident spirit of caution which has continued to guide the general course of business, prices have reached a level considerably above the average of the last ten years. This constant progress of consumption, with which the increase in flocks can hardly keep pace, would seem to be the main factor in the upward movement of prices. The growing output of gold and consequent abundance of capital, added to the higher standard of comfort, has raised the cost of living, and there can be no doubt that this greater diffusion of the natural wealth of the world enables a larger number to participate in the general prosperity. Ever since the wool trade returned to a position which may be considered sound, consumption has been so strong that it has become necessary to trench upon the new clip earlier than was ever the case before. Stocks of wool and goods have never been smaller at this period of the year, and early arrivals of new wools towards the end of summer are again desirable, for even admitting that machinery might not be working full time, manufacturers could scarcely hold off buying. Consequently, one should logically be able to count on present prices being well maintained, more particularly so, since the world's production, which showed no appreciable increase last year, does not promise any very material augmentation this year. The situation as regards other textiles, more especially cotton, does not seems to carry any danger to wool, and the only thing likely to upset the wool trade would seem to be an all-round decline in the general prosperity, as in 1907. It is noticeable that since that unfortunate year speculation has played a very small part. In Australia the lambing has been exceptionally favourable, and pastoral prospects could not be better up to the present, giving promise of a large clip. In South America, on the contrary, the losses of last year, which seriously affected the lambing, render a marked increase in production impossible in the immediate future.

NEXT BRISBANE SALES.

The first auctions for the 1910-11 Australasian wool season take place in Brisbane on Tuesday next, when some 17,000 to 18,000 bales are likely to be catalogued. Doubtless the offerings will be of an attractive character in both greasy and scoured, as the catalogues include a number of well-known brands. With such a start in the new season, Brisbane, as a selling centre, promises to maintain the importance that it reached in the season just closed. During the 1909-10 season, 180,751 bales were sold in Brisbane; as compared with 148,483 bales in the previous statistical wool year, and 882,200 bales during 1907-08. This development in the northern capital is likely to lead to some better arrangements for the holding of the Brisbane sales this season than in previous years. Last year more time was allowed between the cutting off and the switching on of sales in the Sydney market, while buyers were attending to the Brisbane offerings, and this season the time is likely to be lengthened. Proposals are being brought forward with regard to extending the selling days. The suggested plan is to allow Brisbane the whole of one week at stated times during which the Sydney sales are to be suspended. The effect of the adoption of such an arrangement would be that instead of Brisbane holding a tremendous sale all on one day, the auctions would extend over several days during one week, at convenient intervals; and serve the very great purpose of lessening the huge weekly offerings that have hitherto proved such a menace to the trade in October and November. If equally satisfactory, arrangements could be come to between Melbourne and Adelaide, one-twelfth of the clip could not be slumped on the markets of the Commonwealth in a week, such as was the case last season. The weekly series in Melbourne have been fixed to open on Monday, October 3. Included in the catalogues to be submitted next week in Brisbane are the following brands:—

Greasy: Cullin-la-ringo, Camden (in block), Clutha, FMY/Northampton, FAH/Dunstan, GF/Stainburn, GF/Langton, Happy Valley, JTN/Newstead, Maryvale/Morven, Maxvale, SK/Tilboroo, WRM/Cranford, WJH/Tallwood, Wantalayna/SM, C/Woodlands, GF/Teddington, Highfields, Bonathorne, AS/Dilga, SC and M'L/Belford, DS/Albion, La Plata, AJS/Tregoning, Callandon North, KMN/Longreach, L/Barford, Moscow.

Scoured: Avondale, AEH/Luthrie, DB/Majuba, FMY/Northampton, FGW/Sylvania, FWF/Cressy, GF/Barcaldine, GF/Wolfang, GF/Langton, GF/Beaconsfield, GF/Bimerah, HR/Warsdale, JSM/Dunluce, 1/Meroondah Downs, Minamere, TM/Yandarlo, The Grove/Winton, JAR/Winton, WRA/Fairview, C and K/Killarney, HV/Dundee.

DOINGS IN STIRRING TIMES.

Among the events of importance in wool-growing and wool-selling circles this week, besides the stud sheep sales, have been the publication of Dalgety and Co.'s most comprehensive summary of the 1909-10 wool year, and some most valuable suggestions for alterations in the wool-selling arrangements in Australia by Mr. Alfred Van Rompaey, of Messrs. Ostermeyer, Dewez, and Van Rompaey. Some extracts from Dalgety's annual review have been published in our commercial columns, and Mr. Van Romaey's proposals for selling wool in the Australian markets in two series—spring and autumn—appeared in the "Sydney Morning Herald" on Wednesday last. Mr. Van Rompaey does not anticipate the immediate adoption of his views, but he does expect that Australia will ultimately arrange for a lengthy break between offering one-half of the clip and offering the other half. He contends, most reasonably, that the mad rush to sell the vast bulk of the Australian clip in three to four months is prejudicial to both grower and spinner. It is the perpetuation of conditions that were not unreasonable in the early days of wool-selling in Australia; but altogether out of joint with the times now that London has been superseded by the markets at the seat of production. "Here," said Mr. Van Rompaey, "you have now an overgrown fair or season of, say, six months' duration; hold two distinct series or fairs, one in the spring, say, from September 15 to December 15, the other in the autumn, from March 15 to June 15. Such a system, I unhesitatingly affirm, would be to the benefit of grower and consumer alike.

"Why not close up the 'Spring Series' clean before Christmas," asks Mr. Van Rompaey. "Have three months' recess, and then in March let the 'autumn sales commence; the consumer will have worked up part of his previous purchases and will recommence his operations with renewed zest; the more so as his autumn purchases will arrive at a time when European stocks begin to get scarce, and when mills are generally busy. Under such altered conditions, if I were a grower, I think I should rather sell my wool in April than in October. . . . The first half of the clip, say, 400,000 bales, would be offered during the spring series, and the other 400,000 bales in the April-June or autumn series." "Dalgety's Review," quite independently, voiced more or less the same view, saying:—Once again growers who marketed their wool, either from choice or force of circumstances, at the second series did better than those who rushed their wool on to the market before the Christmas vacation. This is a fortunate thing for the Australian wool trade, for in future there should be less difficulty in impressing upon growers that it is in their interests to control supplies by limiting the weekly offerings in the various centres and by dividing the Australian selling season into at least two distinct series.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

BRADFORD WAITING ON LONDON.

Our cable message of yesterday's date states that the Bradford top market is quiet, and that quotations are unchanged. The trade is awaiting the opening of the London wool sales on Tuesday next. At the corresponding period last season the market was cabled as quiet, but prices were firm on the basis of the previous week's lower quotations. Our comparative table of Bradford quotations for the principal qualities is as follows:—

	64's.	Sup. 60. (Merino.)	Com 60's.	46's. (Crossbred.)	40's.

March 27	26½	25½	24½	14	12½
March 6	24½	23½	22½	13½	12

Messrs. Wenz and Co., writing with reference to the position of wool tops at Rheims on the opening of last month, said that quietness had been the main feature of the previous fortnight. The demand seemed to revive for a few days, but had fallen off again, and the turnover, mostly in merinos, kept within a limited compass. Prices remained fully firm. Noils were moving somewhat more slowly; however, quotations showed no material change. The combing mills continued well supplied there, while some mills in the north were already curtailing their production.

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Three vessels have cleared the Sydney Customs since last review with wool for the United Kingdom and foreign ports, aggregating 1220 bales. The 85 bales for Japan were wool tops from the Botany combing mill. During the corresponding week last year there was only one shipment, and that was by the Macedonia, with 1099 bales, for London. The figures are as follow:—

	Bales.
Prinz Waldemar, July 2, for Japan	85
Macedonia, July 2, for London	326
Suevic, July 6, for London	809

SOME NATIVE GRASSES.

BLUE GRASS AND MITCHELL GRASS.

BY J.D.M.

II.

Like kangaroo grass, blue grass is cosmopolitan in its habit. It is found in Victoria, New South Wales, and Queensland, in all kinds of soil and situations. It is perennial, and considered one of our best grasses either for pasture or hay, being very nutritious and fattening, and much relished by stock of all kinds. In Queensland blue grass is highly valued as a pasture plant, and a station that carries it is highly estimated. It endures the effects of the severest drought, and carries more sheep to the acre than any other kind of pasture. At the roots there forms a close, leafy sward, from which spring a number of flowering stalks, reaching a height of from five to six feet. In a normal season the grass stands cutting two or three times in the season, and yields at each cutting from three to four tons to the acre. The hay is of excellent quality. It seeds plentifully, and the seed when ripe germinates quickly. The grass can also be propagated from root cuttings. It was very plentiful on the Old Man Plain, on the Willandra Plain, and throughout Riverina, and was the grass par excellence on the Springsure and Peak Downs. While not so strongly in evidence on the Flinders Plains, it held its own on Malvern, Portland, Barcoo, and Alice Downs. Neither heat nor drought seems to have any appreciable effect on checking the growth, but overstocking is more likely to eventually lead to extermination. In a succession of normal seasons, two acres of blue grass country will maintain in good condition one sheep, and at the same time not unduly tax the pasture. Putting on, as has been done, and still continues, one, and oftentimes, two sheep to the acre, is simply "killing the goose that laid the golden egg." The bluish tinge in the blades makes the grass easily distinguished from Mitchell or kangaroo grass. Its creeping root stock forms a close turf. On fertile downs country it is estimated by pastoralists as the very best grass that is grown, either for the production of wool on sheep or beef on cattle. While neither heat nor drought affects its growth, severe frosts check it. Measures should be adopted to conserve blue grass by giving portions, alternately, of the interior a respite, to allow seeding. If allowed to be eaten out, a serious loss will be inflicted on the pastoral industry.

Mitchell grass was named after the great Australian explorer of that name, who during his north-western exploration tours discovered and named it, being attracted by its drought-resisting, palatable, and nutritious qualities, betokened by the improved condition of his horses. Mitchell grass rarely attains a greater height than 2ft. It has a coarse appearance when reaching maturity, but after a shower of rain throws offshoots from the joints of the stems, which afford a succulent mouthful. The seed-heads are much after the form of wheat-ears, and the seed is easily separated from the capsules that enclose it by rubbing the heads in the hands. The aboriginals, as they walked through the grass, used to pluck off the heads, rub them between the hands, blow away the chaff, and putting the seeds in their mouths, chew and swallow them. The gins also collected a fair quantity, and pounded them between two flat stones; the coarse flour resulting was mixed into a paste with a little water, and roasted on the hot embers. The seeds when chewed have a slightly saccharine taste. Pastoralists highly prize the Mitchell grass, which is most plentiful in the western districts of Queensland. Portland, Alice, and Bowen downs are richly coated with it; also the country extending west to the Thomson. When in seed it has a really strikingly handsome appearance.

THE SALEYARDS QUESTION.

At a general meeting of members of the Country Stock and Station Agents' Association on Wednesday evening, there were upwards of 60 agents present from all centres of the State. Mr. W. H. Wheatley (Goulburn) presided. The matter of saleyard accommodation at Homebush evoked considerable discussion, and the following resolutions were carried unanimously:—"That the members of the Country Stock and Station Agents' Association of New South Wales, assembled in general meeting, strongly urge the Government to grant an immediate inquiry by the Public Works Committee regarding the Homebush saleyards, with a view to transferring same to the abattoir area; that the foregoing resolution be conveyed to the Premier by our representatives on the deputation which has arranged to meet Mr. Wade on Friday, July 8, in connection with the matter."

ROYAL HORSE AND CATTLE SHOW.

The Royal Agricultural Society has every prospect of bringing off another successful horse show in August. The jumping and trotting events and the grand parade will be held on August 10, and the sales will be on the 11th, 12th, and 13th. It is a condition that all horses and cattle for sale must be entered for the show, the entry in all classes, save in the contests, being 1s per head. Judging in all classes will take place at 9.30 on the morning of the 10th, and the grand parade will be at 1.30. It is expected that the feature of this show will be the draught stock, and very large entries are expected all through. Entries in all classes close on August 3. The judges have been appointed, and in nearly every case men who have not acted at previous shows of the Royal Agricultural Society have been selected. The object of getting new men, who are highly recommended, is to enlarge the register of judges at the disposal of the society, and it is felt also that many of the exhibitors desire to see new blood coming into the arena, however satisfactory the decisions may have been in the past.

FARMERS' CONFERENCE.

The seventeenth annual conference of the Farmers and Settlers' Association opens on Monday. A large attendance is promised, some 200 delegates being advised from all portions of the State. The question of the formation of a distinct political party will be one of the main matters for consideration.

The Premier, Mr. Wade, will address the conference on Monday at 2.30 p.m., and the Minister for Lands, Mr. Moore, and the Minister for Agriculture, Mr. Perry, are respectively booked to give an address on Tuesday and Wednesday, and the Acting Chief Commissioner of Railways, Mr. Harper, on Thursday.

The conference has some 140 resolutions to deal with, and it is desired to finish up its deliberations by Friday if possible, to give delegates a rest at the end of the week, as many of them intend attending the dry-farming conference the following week.

ANGORA GOATS.

Messrs. Dalgety and Company, Limited, report having sold at auction at the annual stud sheep sales, four pure angora bucks, on account of Messrs. Blaxland and Knox, Wyalong No. 2, Wyalong, averaging £6 3s 4d per head. Two of the South Africans who are in Sydney attending the stud sheep sales, who are expert judges of angora goats, after handling these bucks, complimented the breeders on their good quality and covering.

The following report from their London agents on mohair (the fleece of the angora goat), dated London, June 2, will no doubt be read with interest by those who are watching the growth of the angora goat industry:—"Since our report of the 26th ultimo, the mohair market has remained very firm, with a decided upward tendency for kid hair, and all parcels of fine quality. There is a steady business doing in all classes at full prices, except the stronger-qualitied lot of firsts, which are still slow of sale. For a small clip of fine firsts, not quite full-grown, 15d has been paid."

BLOWFLY PEST.

Mr. W. W. Froggatt, F.L.S., president of the New South Wales Naturalists' Club, informed members of the club last night that he had been for some time lately engaged in investigating the cause of destruction of wool by certain blow-flies. He found quite a remarkable number of insects in dead sheep at Trangie, and exhibited specimens of several beetles and flies. A beautifully-coloured fly did most of the damage to wool by laying its eggs in it. The larvae when hatched out caused the actual destruction, and these attracted various beetles, who preyed upon them. Amongst the beetles was one called the devil's coach-horse, which ate the larvae freely. Another beetle was attracted by the bones and fat of a dead sheep.

MILKING SHORTHORN ASSOCIATION.

Mr. Frank M'Caffery, Kiama, writes:—I notice that the Milking Shorthorn Association is setting a notable example by offering a £10 prize, to be competed for, of course, among the members of that association for cows producing the most butter-fat in 48 hours at the next R.A.S.'s show. As this prize is supposed to be for pure-bred milking Shorthorns, I would respectfully suggest that all competitors be compelled to make a statutory declaration that each animal to be tested is pure-bred, and free from any taint of Ayrshire blood in her veins. When a declaration of this kind is taken it relieves the council of the R.A.S. of any doubts that may be on their mind regarding the purity or otherwise of any animal, notwithstanding that the animals in questions may conform to the wedge-shape, and carry the Dollar-spot throughout their skin peculiar to the Shorthorn-Ayrshire blend. The Shorthorn is of so decided a beef-type in its pure pedigreed state that very few indeed outside the magic circle can bring themselves to believe that the roans and reds we see exhibited as dairy cattle on our show grounds are pure-bred Shorthorns—hence the importance of a statutory declaration. It might in some instances safeguard the public.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT.

URANA.—The Urana Progress Association is asking, through Mr. Ball, M.L.A., for the inclusion of Butherwah Estate, of 24,000 acres, adjoining the township of Urana, in the list of estates recommended for resumption for closer settlement to be dealt with during the present session of Parliament. On South Urana, two miles from the township, there is an area of 8000 acres Crown lands, which some time ago, was surveyed into farm areas, with a view to making them available for settlement. Nothing further, however, has resulted, and as there is now apparently nothing in the way of throwing the land open, the Minister for Lands is being asked to expedite the matter. The area is good farming country.

PARKES.—The members of the Closer Settlement Advisory Board visited Parkes on their way to inspect Merriwee, in the Condobolin district. It is understood that instructions have been issued for the inspection of Gunningbland and Nelungaloo stations in this district.

PASTURES BOARDS.

MUSWELLBROOK.—At the monthly meeting of the pastures protection board Mr. J. C. White was re-elected chairman. Mr. C. H. Cox resigned his seat on the board. The inspector's report stated that the pastures, water supply, and the condition of stock were fair. There had been two outbreaks of pleuro. Rabbits were increasing in some localities. It was resolved to ask the department for an advance of £150 to clear the reserve at Denman of prickly pear. It was stated that a landholder was not liable to pay half the cost of rabbit-proof fencing on a boundary unless a similar fence was being erected. The treasurer's statement showed a credit balance of £280.

UNKNOWN MAN'S DEATH.

THE CORONER'S COMMENTS.

Mr. Stephen Murphy, the city coroner, opened an inquest at the City Coroner's Court, to inquire into the circumstances attending the death of an unknown man, whose body was found floating in the harbour between the North Shore ferry and the Parramatta River companies' wharfs, at the Circular Quay, on July 5.

John William Walsh, a wharf hand employed by the Sydney Ferries Company, stated that on the afternoon of July 4 he noticed the deceased, who was riding backwards and forwards from the Quay to the Milson's Point and Lavender Bay wharfs all the afternoon. He last saw him on the Milson's Point pontoon, at Circular Quay, at a few minutes before midnight.

Constable James Constable, a member of the Water Police force, who assisted to recover the body, made an examination of the deceased's clothing, at the morgue. It was almost new, and grey in colour. The garments were branded with the letters A.S.Y., and the figure 7 in a different place. The deceased was an elderly man of about 70 years of age, and when alive must have been about 5ft 9in in height. He had lost the middle finger of the left hand.

The city coroner, in postponing the inquest till Friday, July 15, said that he did not think that the authorities at the Government institutions should have given up their efforts to identify the deceased so soon. He would suggest that the clothing and the personal effects found on the deceased, together with a photo, should be forwarded to the various Government institutions throughout the State, in the hope of establishing the identity of the deceased.

FALSE ECONOMY.

It is always false economy to buy, or use, anything of inferior quality. From boots to advice, it pays to get the best. For 30 years we have been doing all we could to impress this truth upon the public mind. Many people, when they are suffering from common ills, such as rheumatism, gout, indigestion, biliousness, neuralgia, lumbago, sick headache, general debility, backache, sciatica, anaemia, blood disorders, gravel, stone, and bladder troubles, try first one medicament and then another without avail; but at last have to resort for relief to the long-tried and proved remedy, Warner's Safe Cure. The reason is that Warner's Safe Cure acts directly upon the kidneys and liver, and enables those organs efficiently to do their work of removing from the system the waste uric and biliary poisons, the retention of which causes us to suffer from the complaints named. Get the best! Get Warner's Safe Cure, and be relieved! If you write to us we shall be pleased to send you, post free, a pamphlet containing full particulars and a large number of accounts of remarkable cures. H. H. Warner and Co., Ltd., Melbourne, Vic. You can get Warner's Safe Cure from any chemist or storekeeper, both in the original form and the cheaper "Concentrated," non-alcoholic form, each containing the same number of doses.—Advt.

The sheep show is illustrated and described in the current issue of the "Sydney Mail."—Advt.

SOCIAL.

The period of general mourning for the late King Edward VII. having elapsed, the numberless social functions which had previously been arranged, and were then consequently postponed, are now taking place, and this month several public balls in aid of our different charities, private dances, and other social gatherings are breaking the monotony of this quiet winter season.

Her Excellency the Countess of Dudley presided at a drawing-room meeting, held in the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday afternoon, in connection with the Pilgrim Men's Home. Lady Dudley was accompanied by the Hon. Mrs. Cyril Ward and Captain Gilliat, and made an appeal for contributions in one of those delightful little speeches for which she has such a rare gift. The Rev. R. B. S. Hammond (the founder of the home, which is in Reservoir-street, Surry Hills) explained the object of the home, which is to benefit the women and children indirectly, through its influence on the husbands and fathers, and restore them as a breadwinner to the family.

Lady Chelmsford presided at the annual meeting of the Mothers' Union, which took place in St. James's Hall, Philip-street, last Tuesday afternoon. There was a large attendance of members, amongst those on the platform being the Right Rev. the Bishop of Newcastle, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. H. C. Dangar, Archdeacon and Mrs. Gunther, Mrs. E. Docker, Mrs. Hey Sharpe, Mrs. Kemmis, Mrs. J. Macarthur Onslow, Mrs. Russell; and Mrs. Lloyd. Lady Chelmsford, who was received by Mrs. Christian, Mrs. Dangar, and Mrs. Docker, made an excellent and thoughtful address, which has already been noticed in our columns, wherein she appealed to all mothers to teach their daughters a high standard of life and of love to keep and influence them for good. Mrs. Dangar and the Bishop of Newcastle also addressed those present.

Lady Chelmsford has kindly consented to preside at the lecture of Councillor Mrs. Helen Barton, on "Municipal Work in Glasgow," to be given at the Town Hall on Monday afternoon under the auspices of the Health Society of New South Wales. This lecture is one of the winter course of lectures given at the Town Hall on alternate Mondays by members of the Health Society.

On Thursday evening the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress of Sydney (Alderman and Mrs. Allen Taylor) entertained a large company at dinner at the Town Hall, the guests being invited to meet his Excellency the Admiral and Lady Poore. The host and hostess received their guests in the Lord Mayor's room, Mr. W. J. Layton being in attendance. The Lady Mayoress wore a handsome dress of black satin, richly trimmed with jet, and a diamond necklace. Lady Poore was in white brocaded satin duchesse, the bodice draped with some beautiful old lace, and a narrow bandeau of pale heliotrope satin was arranged in her hair. Dinner was served on small tables, the principal and largest being charmingly decorated with a profusion of dark red carnations and smilax; different coloured roses with their dark foliage, and trails of smilax were used on the others; whilst tall palms ornamented the room. An orchestral band played during dinner.

The marriage of the Venerable Archdeacon Abbott, of Tamworth, with Miss Annie Macdonald, daughter of the late Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Adelaide Cottage, Potts Point, took place quietly at Christ Church, Sydney, last Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. J. Albery, rector of Christ Church.

Many afternoon tea-parties took place after the matinee at the Theatre Royal last Monday afternoon, the largest being given by Mrs. Brady and Mrs. Jamieson, at the Australia Hotel, where over 100 guests were entertained in the winter garden.

Last Wednesday afternoon Lady Fairfax held a drawing-room meeting at her residence, Ginahgulla, Bellevue Hill, to which a number of friends were invited, to hear Mrs. H. C. Dangar, vice-president of the Sydney Association, and Miss Meager, general secretary of the Sydney Young Women's Christian Association, speak of the work of the Young Women's Christian Association. Mrs. Dangar, in a few appropriate words, pointed out the aims and objects of the association, which are to provide a home for young girls out of situations, where their surroundings, with the help of those in charge of the association, would prevent them from falling into evil ways. There are classes for girls, a club, a choral society, a literary circle, and a luncheon-room, where they can have a substantial meal for a very moderate sum. These meals are served by a guild of workers formed by a number of young ladies, who willingly give their time and assistance, taking it in turn to attend. Mrs. Dangar said the work of the association had grown so rapidly that they intended to make an effort during the coming year to raise funds to purchase the block of land adjoining the present site, and to place a building upon it. Miss Meager told how the work of the association had grown, and of the great value the home was to immigrants and travellers, who were met upon their arrival in Sydney and sheltered until they found situations. More guild helpers were required, and Miss Meager hoped those having leisure would come forward and assist in the good work. Professor R. Macintyre and Mr. Pratt also addressed those present, and a vote of thanks was accorded to Lady Fairfax for so kindly holding the meeting at Ginahgulla. The visitors were subsequently entertained at afternoon tea, Miss Fairfax assisting in dispensing the hospitalities. Amongst those present were Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Kater, Mrs. Russell, Lady Carruthers, Mrs. Geoffrey Fairfax, Mrs. Rabett, Mrs. and Miss MacCallum, Mrs. Wills Allen, Mrs. J. O. Fairfax, Miss Binney, Mrs. and Miss Williams, Mrs. Willoughby Flower, Mrs. and Miss Richardson, Mrs. Stuart Osborne, Miss Dangar, Mrs. Greene, Mrs. Busacott, Miss Armstrong, Miss E. Morse, and Mrs. A. Cox.

The Paddington Town Hall presented a most gay and animated scene on Monday evening, when the members of the Sydney University Sports Union held their annual ball, and entertained about 450 guests. The dance proved one of the most enjoyable of the season, and went with the greatest spirit all the evening, the hosts doing all in their power to conduce to the enjoyment of their friends. The decorations were charmingly carried out with festoons of greenery, studded with yellow roses and blue cornflowers, which colours (representing the Sydney University) formed the principal feature in the decorations. The staircase leading to the ballroom had the railings hidden beneath a wealth of cabbage palms, and arches of greenery with yellow and blue flowers were erected half-way up and at the top of the staircase. Some of the festoons were studded with blue and gold flowers, representing the Sydney University and that of California; others in red, and others again in blue and white, representing the American universities, out of compliment to the members of the American Universities' football team, several of whom were present with the Vice Consul-General for America (Mr. Henry Baker). The guests were received by the president of the Sydney Universities Sports Union, Mr. A. G. de L. Arnold, and the vice-presidents, Messrs. Hyam Marks and J. G. Mackay. The hon. secretaries of the ball committee were Mr. H. S. Utz and Mr. B. C. Fuller, the other members of the committee being Messrs. A. G. Arnold, H. Marks, H. Clayton, F. Hughes, J. C. Lamrock, J. B. Metcalfe, A. S. Lloyd, R. Hughes, G. Christie, E. W. M'Keown, O. Kelly, K. Street, S. M. Fisher, and Miss Tillingstone, Miss Beith, and Miss Cohen. Refreshments were served all the evening, and the supper-room thrown open soon after 10 o'clock, the tables being prettily decorated with yellow jonquils and violets. Amongst those present were:—Professor and Mrs. Wilson, Professor and Mrs. Fawsitt, Professor and Mrs. Douglas Stewart, Mr. G. Sly, the Misses Lee, Mrs. H. White, Miss Arnold, Miss A. Ward, Miss Pitt, Miss Matthews, Miss Alice Arnold, Miss Margaret Atkinson, Mr. C. Walker, Dr. C. N. Smith, Mrs. and Miss Marr, Dr. and Mrs. Armstrong, Dr. and Mrs. Burton Bradley, the Misses Bullock, Miss H. Coffee, the Misses Curtain, the Misses Christmas, Miss David, the Misses Fitzpatrick, Miss Fisher, Dr. L. H. Allen, Dr. W. Brooke, Mr. Barraclough, Mr. F. A. Eastaugh, Mr. Deery, Miss Galbraith, Miss Suttor, Dr. Godsell (Queensland), Dr. J. Hughes, Dr. Hoets, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Johnston, Mr. M'Donald Mackay, Dr. Poate, Miss Rorke, Dr. S. Rorke, Miss Lord, Miss Hume, Miss Lorna Graham (debutante), Mrs. and Miss Edgley, the Misses Read, Miss Yates, the Misses Perdriau; and the American visitors included Mr. Baker (Vice Consul-General) and Messrs. Roth, Kern, Bennett, and Leavitt. The programmes had the University Sports Union shield and motto inscribed in blue and gold, and Miss Summerbelle's waltz, "Beaux Jeux," was played by special request.

Mlle. Antonia Dolores, who has been charming large audiences at the Town Hall during the week, is in excellent voice, and looks remarkably well in her white satin charmeuse dress, with cut black jet ornaments on the bodice and at the waist, the bodice being almost high, with a transparent yoke of lace. She was the recipient of many floral tributes on Saturday last, and was delighted with the warmth of her reception. Mlle. Dolores has been the guest of honour at many social gatherings this week, and was entertained at afternoon tea yesterday by Miss Walker at her residence, Folkestone, Lavender Bay.

The first battalion of the New South Wales Scottish Rifles has arranged to hold the annual regimental ball in the Paddington Town Hall on Friday, July 29.

The annual ball in aid of the Boys' Brigade will take place in the Town Hall on Tuesday, July 19, when a large attendance is anticipated. Lady Harris is president of the ball committee, Mrs. Malcolm Stephen the hon. secretary, and Mrs. F. J. Thomas the hon. treasurer.

The annual dance given by the rector and students of St. John's College within the University took place in the hall of the college on Tuesday evening, and was attended by about 160 guests. Never did the college hall look prettier than on this occasion. The decorations were profuse and artistic. By the aid of pot-plants, palms, and flags, and the lavish introduction of the college colours (cardinal and navy blue), and the exhibition of the various trophies won by the students, a brilliant effect was produced. The supper-room was also prettily arranged, the tables being decorated with flowers and the colours of the college. The rector, Monsignor O'Brien, and his niece, Miss O'Brien, received the guests at the entrance hall, and the students then took charge of them. The general arrangements of the dance were carried out by a large committee, of which Mr. Edward Bettingham Moore was the hon. secretary. In addition to the students from the other colleges, there were also present Dr. and Mrs. Radford (St. Paul's College), Dr. and Mrs. Harper (St. Andrew's College), Miss M'Donald (Women's College), Dr. Todd (Sydney University), Dr. Odillo Maher, Dr. Godsall, Mr. and Mrs. Strusom, Dr. Jessie Aspinall, Mr. and Mrs. von Willer, and Dr. Lightoller.

The officials of the steamship companies held their annual reunion at the Paddington Town Hall on Wednesday night. The entertainment was most successful from every point of view. One of the features which characterised the decorative scheme employed in the hall was the disposition of the various house-flags of the oversea and interstate companies among the wealth of palms and other greenery, while Houlder Bros.' flag was prominently displayed as a compliment to the president, Mr. E. J. Lamb. Nearly all, if not all, the various shipping companies were represented. The details, under the direction of Mr. J. T. Sheehan (hon. secretary), who was supported by a strong committee, were most successfully carried out. The guests included Mr. E. J. Lamb and Mrs. Lamb, Mr. H. N. Lethbridge and the Misses Lethbridge, Captain and Mrs. Green, Mr. and Mrs. George Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Farley, Mr. and Mrs. Barter, Mr. F. J. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas, Captain and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. R. Fawcett-Story, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Wiltshire, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jewett, Mr. and Mrs. W. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Thompson, Mr. Mrs. and Miss Adamson, Mesdames G. S. Robbins, R. Humer, de Vere Hunt, G. A. Parkes, the Misses Muriel Casey, B. Stedman, M. Foot (Launceston), Springthorpe, Cooper, Fleming, Young, Millner, F. G. Waird, Millard, Hewlett, Miller, Dorothy Jackson, Atkinson, Garde, Cameron, Shepherd, Gowtland, Reed, Val. Reed, Yates, W. There were also present Miss Mary Bray, Miss Eckford, Miss Maysie Eckford, Miss Cecil Dawson, Miss Vera Fitzgerald, the Misses Yates, Miss Valerie Read, Miss Bookeman, Miss Nora Lee, Miss Bennett, Mrs. Cox, Miss M. The second annual "Cooee" dance was held at Baumann's Rooms on Thursday, June 16, over 60 guests being present. The ballroom was tastefully decorated, and the tables were arranged with gold and white.

At the weekly "at homes" held at the Patriotic Club on Monday afternoons club members may exhibit fancywork or handicraft of any kind, and musical programmes are frequently given.

A quiet wedding was solemnised at St. Clement's Church of England, Mosman Bay, by the Rev. C. T. L. Yarrington, on June 11, when Stanton Melick, of Redfern, was married to Florence Lunderland, of The Rest, Mosman Bay.

A wedding was solemnised at the Methodist Church, Stanmore, on Saturday, 18th ult., when the Rev. Frederick Hugh McGowan, Methodist minister, Muswellbrook, was married to Miss Kathleen Gertrude Rutledge, only daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. W. Woolls Rutledge, of Oareel, Petersham. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of guests and spectators, who quite filled the spacious church, which was beautifully decorated by girl friends. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, assisted by the Rev. C. J. Prescott, M.A. (President of the Conference), and the Rev. J. Hulme. The bride wore a dress of ivory paillette silk with silver and pearl trimmings, and a wreath and veil, the latter being the same as worn by her mother on a similar occasion in the same church. She also carried a beautiful bouquet, which, with a diamond and emerald ring, was the gift of the bridegroom; her only other ornament was a pearl and tourmaline pendant, presented by her eldest brother. The attendant bridesmaids were Miss Johnston and Miss Crozier and two little cousins (the Misses Kathleen Fletcher and Alice Moore). The two elder bridesmaids wore dainty frocks of pale heliotrope silk, and carried bouquets of pale pink roses, violets, and autumn leaves. The little children wore white silk trimmed with Valenciennes lace, and carried pink bouquets. The bridegroom's gifts to the elder bridesmaids were gold bracelets studded with opals and rubies, and to the younger ones gold brooches set with pearls and rubies. Mr. W. J. Williams was best man, and Mr. A. S. Rutledge groomsman. A reception was subsequently held in the hall adjoining, and the wedding presents were choice and numerous. The bride's travelling dress was a dark blue coat and skirt with hat to match.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

TWO KNIGHTS AT VARIANCE.

NEW MEMBERS SPEAK.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Of the six members who spoke in the House of Representatives to-day on the Address in Reply, five represented New South Wales constituencies.

Sir William Lyne claimed that by the result of the last appeal to the people his actions ever since he had been in political life had been vindicated. With a dramatic sweep of the hand he declared that all those who espoused his principles were sitting on the Ministerial side.

"Then why are not you in the Cabinet?" asked Mr. Joseph Cook.

"Because at present," replied the member for The Hume, "I'm too ill to be in any Cabinet, and it will be a long time before I am well enough to hold such a position."

Sir William was referring to what he termed "political gerrymandery" at the general elections in one of the States, when he fell foul of Sir John Forrest, who evidently regarded the matter in a personal light.

Sir John, pointing to his brother knight, thundered, "This bombastic"—when he was pulled up by the Speaker, who wished to know whether the member for Swan desired to raise a point of order.

"Yes," replied the ex-Treasurer, "I say that Sir William Lyne is excited."

An explanation was subsequently forthcoming by Sir William that, as Sir John Forrest did not fix up the readjustment, he could not possibly be blamed.

Mr. Kelly charged the Government with seeking to get a cable service from England at the expense of the people of the Commonwealth for the use of a Labour daily.

The Minister for External Affairs denied the accusation, and declared that any newspapers that wished could share in the service.

Mr. Matthew Charlton, who defeated Dr. Liddell for the Hunter, made a very good impression in the House. Perhaps his most telling point was in connection with the Old-age Pensions Act. He declared that the measure should be amended so that old people living in their own home would not have the value of the property set off against them, and the amount coming to them reduced on that account.

Mr. Riley and Mr. Catts sought to justify the various proposals outlined in the Governor-General's speech. The former, especially for a new member, was commendably brief in his remarks, and pointed out that members would have ample opportunity of debating the various proposals when they came before the House.

At a later stage Mr. Fenton (Vic.) pleaded for better conditions for the young yeomanry of the Commonwealth, and obtained leave to continue on next sitting day.

Mr. Charlton (N.S.W.) thought the Commonwealth Government proposed to treat the States fairly in respect to finance. It had to be remembered that New South Wales had been relieved of old-age pensions expenditure. In the mother State at present it was impossible to get land cheaply. The progressive tax would tend to cheapen land. (Hear, hear.) He predicted that people going on the land now on State terms would find before the 33 years expired that all their capital had been eaten up. (Hear, hear.) The present old-age pension system was a tax on thrift. If the old people lived in their own home, a reduction should not be made in the amount of the pension. The Labour party would endeavour to give effect to its principles one by one. It had not put the whole of its proposals in the Speech. Some would come on later.

Mr. Catts (N.S.W.) said he would oppose the Northern Territory proposition if it meant the construction of a specified railway route. The whole question should be gone into by a committee of impartial experts. Any proposal for higher duties would not have his support, unless it were at once associated with new protection. The House should have an opportunity of discussing the telephone rates question, before the new rates were brought into force. Although Mr. Thomas was a man of recognised ability, he had not sufficient experience in postal administration to effectively deal with every branch of the service.

Mr. Fenton (Vic.) claimed that not one single member of the Ministerial party had secured election on a minority vote.

At 4.5 p.m. the House adjourned until 3 p.m. on Tuesday.

POSTAL EMPLOYEES' CONFERENCE.

Alderman W. Grantham and Mr. Wallace Henderson have been elected by the N.S.W. Mail Branch Association as delegates to the Commonwealth Postal Conference to be held in Melbourne next month. The conference is the outcome of a suggestion by the Postmaster-General, and the delegates will discuss matters of interest to the public as well as to the service.

NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Nicholson and Co. publish a "Humoresque" for violin and piano, composed by Nelson Illingworth, and dedicated to Mr. Cyril Monk, who has already played it in public. This is a decidedly clever and melodious composition, suitable for salon use, or at a classic concert. The piano part is graceful, with a plaintive strain beneath its superficial vivacity, and the composer has provided optional violin parts suited either to a matured artist or a timid executant.

CASUALTIES.

BURNT WITH KEROSENE.

Robert Graham, 10, who lives with his parents at 107 Wilson-street, Redfern, was lighting a fire yesterday, and he applied a quantity of kerosene. The oil flared up, burning him severely about the face and right arm. The Civil Ambulance took him to the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital.

FALL DOWN LIFT WELL.

About 6.30 p.m. on Thursday Wm. Oliver, a storeman at Rowan's Bond, fell down the lift well, a distance of 25ft. Several of his ribs were fractured, and he was injured internally.

CHILD BURNED.

WEST MAITLAND, Friday.

Marjorie Way, 6, daughter of W. H. Way, of Luskintyre, was admitted to the hospital to-day, suffering from extensive burns, caused through her clothes catching fire. The little girl was standing with her back to the fire, when her clothes caught alight. She ran out of the house screaming, and her father, who was milking some distance away, ran to her assistance and extinguished the flames, but not before his hands had been badly burned.

THE LATE WILLIAM DALMAS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I wish to express my great pleasure that friends and former pupils of Mr. Dalmas propose to perpetuate his memory. The work of such a man is a real contribution to the life of the nation. Many a man now doing useful service to Australia will gladly own that he owes much of his powers and his ideals to his old master. The King's School, with its long traditions of nearly 80 years, loves to keep green the memory of those who enriched and strengthened it. Only last week a memorial shield was presented to the school to honour the name and work of Mr. Burkitt. The school history is rich in picturesque and strong personalities, and amongst them, in a high place, will always stand the name of Mr. Dalmas.

He spent the last peaceful years of a long life in Parramatta, and we who were privileged to know him then, always welcomed his presence at school functions, and his great interest in the old school, which, with his great "chief," Macarthur, he had helped to re-found by the historic migration from Macquarie Fields.

I hope your correspondent's suggestion will be taken up and a committee formed.

I am, etc., STACY WADDY,
Head Master of the King's School.

NO MEDICINE,
BUT CHANGE OF FOOD GAVE FINAL RELIEF.

Most diseases start in the alimentary canal—stomach and bowels.

A great deal of our stomach and bowel troubles come from eating too much starchy and greasy food.

The stomach does not digest any of the starchy food we eat—white bread, pastry, potatoes, oats, etc.—these things are digested in the small intestines, and if we eat too much, as most of us do, the organs that should digest this kind of food are overcome by excess of work, so that fermentation, indigestion, and a long train of ails results.

Too much fat also is hard to digest, and this is changed into acids, sour stomach, belching gas, and a bloated, heavy feeling.

In these conditions a change from indigestible foods to Grape-Nuts will work wonders in not only relieving the distress, but in building up a strong digestion, clear brain, and steady nerves. A Washington woman writes:—"About five years ago I suffered with a bad stomach—dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation—caused, I know now, from eating starchy and greasy food.

"I doctored for two years without any benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me. I could not eat anything without suffering severe pains in my back and sides, and I became discouraged.

"A friend recommended Grape-Nuts, and I began to use it. In less than two weeks I began to feel better, and inside two months I was a well woman, and have been ever since.

"I can eat anything I wish with pleasure. We eat Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast, and are very fond of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason." At grocers and chemists, ninepence (9d) per pkg.—Advt.

THIN WOMEN!

? WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE WELL AND FULLY DEVELOPED ?

Any woman who lacks good bust development lacks the one essential that creates a perfect appearance. Lack of proper bust development, hollow cheeks, and "salt cellars" quickly take from a woman the bloom and freshness of healthy womanhood.

Misfortune may have been your lot in so far as natural development was concerned, but science has found a way to correct your deficiency. Even though you have never been full-bosomed, and although you have been attenuated all your life, if you suffer from no wasting disease your bosom can be fully developed and your weight increased to normal.

There are to-day hundreds of women who were once thin, flat-bosomed, hollow-cheeked, and generally scraggly in appearance, suffering the effects of anaemia and defective digestion, who are now, for the first time in their lives, healthy, full-bosomed and pink-cheeked, and enjoying the full vigour of robust womanhood, as the result of a few weeks under

FAT AND ROSY.

Katoomba, N.S.W.
Manageress, Falliere Co.

Dear Madam,—All my friends are congratulating me upon the wonderful improvement in my appearance. Actually, when I look into a mirror now I hardly know myself. Yesterday, with not another soul in the street, an old friend whom I had not seen for some months was passing me, and when I stopped her she could not realise that it was really I. Your remedy is acquiring considerable status from my case, and I hope that other women who have put in miserable years as I have will see the wisdom of following your advice. I thank you for all you have done for me, and beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
(Mrs.) MAUD McPHERSON.

GAINED 10 INCHES.

Church-street, Parramatta.
Manageress Falliere Co.

Dear Madam,—I am pleased to tell you that since using your wonderful treatment my health has wonderfully improved, and my weight and measurements are now all that I desire. For years my extreme thinness was a constant source of deep annoyance to me. My neck and chest were so scraggly that I really appeared a perfect fright in evening dress. My arms were simply skin and bone, as really was my entire body.

To-day, after a few weeks under your splendid treatment, my bust is 10 inches bigger than it was (really, previously I had no bust measurement), and my hips have increased over eight inches. The bones of my chest and hands are now really imperceptible, though I am only nicely plump, and my figure gives me no further pang of regret. It lacks nothing. I hope you may be long spared to do the same for others who are as I was.

Yours sincerely,
MAY AMBROSE.

AUSTRALIANS AT THE TOP OF THE TREE.

LIVERPOOL, Friday.

At a congress of representative medicos from all parts of Great Britain just completed in this city, the Vecsey Method of Treatment, the new Australian method of cure for Varicose Veins, secured the universal approval of all present, and the opinion was freely expressed that for such cases it supersedes the surgeon's knife.

BLED TO DEATH.

NOBODY KNEW FIRST AID.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the absence of the knowledge of the principles of first aid by those about him, a farmer, 50 years of age, bled to death to-day at his home, four miles from Dimboola. He knocked an ulcerous sore and burst a varicose vein near the ankle. His daughter attempted to stanch the bleeding by applying flour, but this had no effect, and he died within 10 minutes.

POSITIVE, PAINLESS, ABSOLUTE CURE FOR VARICOSE VEINS!

Thousands of men and women suffer from varicose veins, and will go on suffering simply because they have been misled into believing that there is no cure for them "except an operation." As a matter of fact, an operation for varicose veins is Not a Cure; on the contrary, it is a step in the wrong direction that only makes the complaint worse instead of curing it.

One operation presages a further one, just as surely as day follows night, and as operation succeeds operation the condition of the complaint gets worse, until death comes to end the victim's suffering.

Varicose veins and varicose ulcers are dangerous complaints that should not be borne philosophically. Any day may see disaster overtake the victim of this disease.

A vein or ulcer may burst, a clot may form that will totally incapacitate the victim, if nothing worse results. Eczema often sets in, and makes the victim's life miserable.

The VECSEY METHOD of TREATMENT of varicose veins, ulcers, and eczema is one of purely local application only. A home system of treatment, easy to use, and positively wonderful in its effects. The first application relieves in bad cases.

Old standing cases of varicose veins and ulcers, that have existed for as much as twenty-five years, and have resisted all efforts to cure them, have by this discovery been rendered almost harmless and entirely curable under a few weeks' treatment.

THIS TREATMENT IS HARMLESS TO USE, TOTALLY PAINLESS, AND CURES RAPIDLY AND PERMANENTLY.

If you have varicose veins, or a bad leg, you should obtain full particulars of the Vecsey Method of Treatment. They will prove most interesting to you. Would you like to be certain that you could, by a few weeks' painless treatment, entirely rid yourself of varicose veins and any unpleasant consequences that accompany them? Would you like to know that your leg was as strong and supple as it should be? Would you like to be for ever free from the pain and mental aggravation that the varicose veins create?

If you would—investigate the Vecsey Method of Treatment. Every effect has a cause—every disease an antidote—some have not yet been found, but they exist. Until the discovery of the Vecsey Method, a cure for Varicose Veins was not known. Take advantage of its wonderful efficiency. Consultation and Advice Free.

Read this Grateful Testimony.

ALMOST INCAPACITATED.

Bridge-street, Sydney, 17th May, 1910.
THE VECSEY VARIX-ARIUM, Sydney.

Dear Sir,—For over twelve years I suffered greatly from Varicose Veins in the legs. These veins traversed both my legs from knee to ankle, and were often so painful that for days at a time I could not put my feet to the ground.

The veins burst twice, and were, in fact, so tender that whenever I walked I was in constant terror that they would again break out. I had doctors' advice and treatment continuously, but with only temporary relief at all times, until I finally got so bad that I feared to attempt to walk.

A friend told my husband of Mr. Vecsey's method, and he kindly undertook my cure, with the result that in less than two months all pain had completely left me. The veins became stronger and subsided rapidly, and I do not know what it is to have trouble from the old cause, although it is nearly a year since my cure was effected.

With almost the first application of the treatment I got great relief, and my improvement advanced rapidly to the condition as stated, and I only hope that many may profit by my gratifying reference and experience.

Yours faithfully, (sgd.) A. F. GRUBBA.

Every patient who undergoes this treatment recommends it to his or her friends.

If a case is incurable, we say so at once. We do not believe in false hopes. In some cases treatment is supplied for alleviation of the trouble only, but the percentages of incurable cases is fairly low.

FAT PEOPLE REDUCED
TO NORMAL. CURE GUARANTEED

HARMLESS.——EFFICACIOUS AND POSITIVE

in the results fat people can turn to this wonderful method of treatment for the reduction and elimination of excess fat in the full confidence that they are not to be disappointed, nor likely to lose their money. Thousands have been cured by our successful method; THE ONLY TREATMENT ever known for obesity which benefited the heart instead of injuring it or impairing its action.

Thousands of women who are fatter than they should be, by a careless disregard for the primary stages of obesity (probably through ignorance of its ravages), allow themselves to drift into a condition of almost hopelessness and helplessness before they wake up to the fact that something must be done to get rid of the accumulated corpulence and adipose tissue.

As likely as not, when they do make up their mind to try to reduce they begin useless purging or the use of strong acid drinks, neither of which do any good, and often end in irreparable harm to the system and to the general health. You cannot reduce your weight by these methods. Fasting also is often recommended, but we have yet to learn of its ever being successful.

Only by a proper course of treatment can the disease of obesity be overcome, and until the discovery of the wonderful remedy, there was no safe, harmless, and absolutely certain means of overcoming the trouble. DON'T BE MISLED BY OUR IMITATORS.

"FAT-CURE"

"FAT-CURE" is a purely vegetable compound, containing no injurious or animal extracts. It is pleasant to take, and used as advised by us will reduce your weight rapidly and permanently. Many cases lose as much as five pounds a week, and some even more.

"FAT-CURE" will strengthen your heart action by removing the depressing fat from around that organ, and as the internal fat disappears such chronic complaints as indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, etc., that exist only because you are excessively fat, will entirely disappear.

THE RIGHT SORT OF PROOF.

Manager, Watworth Co., Sydney. Garwong, via Mundooran.

Dear Sir,—I did not have a chance to get weighed until the other day, and I find that during the few weeks I have been taking your treatment that I lost nearly two stone. I knew I was losing weight right along, because I had to make all my clothes entirely over and smaller. I can now do my work a thousand times better than before using "Fat-Cure," and my health is in every way improved—exactly as you said it would be, and I can conscientiously endorse all you say regarding the treatment being absolutely and permanently harmless, and I thank you very much for your kind consideration and continued care of my case.—Yours very truly,

Mrs. MARIE JANE MARTIN.

When you use "FAT-CURE" you know that you are losing your excess weight, and that you are getting full value for your money.

Dear Sir,—Please do not send further treatment, as I do not want to become any thinner. After using your tablets I find they deserve all you claim for them. They not only reduce flesh, but they also build up the system. I think them a great boon to stout people, and shall always find pleasure in recommending them whenever I have the opportunity. Thanking you for your kind interest.—Believe me, yours faithfully,

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 21st to hand, and I wish you to send by return post another course of treatment, as I think I can afford to lose just a little more excessive fat. My neighbours and friends tell me I am quite thin enough, and I have had to alter my clothes three times since I first began taking your treatment.—Yours respectfully, (Signed) Mrs. C. SCHULZ.

TELEPHONE RATES.

MR. COOK'S CRITICISM.

THE MINISTER IN REPLY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Postmaster-General (Mr. Thomas) stated to-day:—"I have noticed Mr. Joseph Cook's remarks respecting the new telephone charges. He expresses great surprise that I should suggest that a subscriber in a residence using a telephone, and receiving precisely the same service as a subscriber in business, should pay the same for such service. Do I understand Mr. Cook to mean that as a department we should not charge for service rendered; but base our charges on the character of the messages telephoned. If so, then it does seem to me a most remarkable idea. To carry it out to its logical conclusion we ought not only to take a count of the messages transmitted; but also a note of the character of such conversations, in order to enable us to charge accordingly. It seems to me that such a system would land us in hopeless difficulty. The length and intricacy of regulations which would be necessary to provide for such a system would be stupendous. Would we under such regulations place religious and secular messages under the same rate? If I send a telegraph message of a business character, am I to be charged more or less than if the message were of a social nature? I may say that I never heard, while Mr. Cook was Postmaster-General in New South Wales, that he proposed to introduce such a startling innovation as this into that service. The table submitted by Mr. Cook is correct. He fell into a very sad error when he referred in the House to £7 0s 10d and £6 0s 10d per annum as the minimum charges for the telephone in the city and country respectively. These, as I stated at the time, are not minimums, but averages, which makes a great difference. I have had submitted to me an analysis of calls made by subscribers in the metropolitan area of Melbourne and in various country districts of those who now come under the measured rate, or what is called the Chapman rate; and I may say that all new subscribers have come under these rates for some years past. I find that, taking business and private telephones together, 6½ per cent. do not average one call per day. There are 24 per cent. of these who average under two calls per day. That means that nearly 30 per cent. of these would, under my scale of charges, actually pay less than under the Chapman rates, and less than was charged under the system which Mr. Cook introduced in New South Wales. If we deduct from that 30 per cent. those who are business people there will be fully 30 per cent. of those in the metropolitan area of Melbourne in private houses to-day who would pay less than under Mr. Cook's charges in New South Wales; so that the small user is really a trifle better off under my system than under Mr. Chapman's, or even under the one introduced by Mr. Cook in Sydney, when the net work there was not nearly so large and extensive as it is to-day. When we come to consider the country exchanges, taking as large a centre as Ballarat, I find that there are 14 per cent. of those under the measured rate at present in existence who would pay less than under the Chapman charges. There is an aggregate of 55 per cent. of these who use the telephone under twice a day. Consequently a big majority of the 55 per cent. would, under my rates, only pay the same as they do at present. If from these we exclude the business people, then there would be quite 55 per cent. of those who are now connected who would actually pay less under my scheme. I think that these facts show that the small user is in no way penalised. But, before passing from Mr. Cook's remarks, I might, in answer to the criticism in regard to the checking of the calls of subscribers, draw attention to the report which was submitted by the Merchants' Association of New York who appointed a general telephone committee, including among its members accountants and telephone engineers. In the course of this report the following appears:—'From the foregoing it appears that the registration of telephone calls is accomplished with an accuracy which compares favourably with commonly accepted commercial methods for measuring the service which a vendor carries out for a customer.' I may say that so far as the system of recording the calls by meter is concerned, the department's system is similar to that referred to in New York."

MINISTER REMAINS FIRM.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Postmaster-General was asked by Mr. Palmer (Vic.), in the House of Representatives, whether, in view of the speech made by Mr. Webster on telephone rates, he would hold his hand until the report of the commission was received and considered by Parliament.

Mr Thomas replied: "It is my intention to bring in the toll telephones on September 1."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have received from the Postmaster-General's Department an account for the last half-year for calls by me through my toll telephone in excess of the thousand free calls allowed in terms of the regulations. I find that I am charged 1164 excess calls, which means that during the six months I made 2164 calls, or 83 calls per week. As my office is only open on Saturday for half a day, and obviously as I do not use my telephone on Sundays, this results in an actual working of 5½ days per week. Working this out shows that my average number of calls per day is just over 15, so that as I pay £2 12s 6d per half-year for my telephone, by adding the amount of excess calls for which I am charged (that is, a thousand at two calls for a penny, and 164 at three calls for a penny), I am called upon to pay £2 6s 3d in addition to my rent of £2 12s 6d, so that, although I have to pay five guineas per annum for rent, I shall be paying, based on the average above shown, nearly the same amount extra for excess calls during the year. What I want to know and what I cannot understand is: Am I charged for every time that I get cut off when speaking to a subscriber, that is, get cut off in the middle of a conversation, have to ring up the exchange, and ask them to put me on to the number again?

When the toll system was introduced, I took the trouble of causing a record to be kept of the first six months, and found that I averaged not more than eight calls per day. I was then informed by the department that they could not recognise my average, and that I would have to accept theirs as being the correct record, so that now I am charged with just double the number of calls per day to what I recorded when I kept my register.

I think some explanation is due to the public as to how these calls are registered, and under what system.

I understand that if we get cut off we are expected to inform the attendant, and then the next call is supposed not to be registered, but in the "hurry of business," and (no doubt) the anxiety of the attendant to get through with each subscriber as quickly as possible, is it likely that this careful safeguarding of the subscriber's interests is watched according to instructions? I trust that these observations may lead to some elucidation of the matter. I am, etc.,

Sydney, July 8. NEVILLE W. MONTAGU.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I note with pleasure, and so does everyone else who has a telephone, that a change of system will shortly take place, and certainly not before it is needed. The present system (if, indeed, there is any system at all) seems to allow you to ring up the central several times before they reply, and then it is a nine days' wonder if they put you on the number you ask for, and still more surprising if you are not "cut off" just as you begin your conversation. My own opinion is that want of proper attention, want of supervision, a tired feeling, and complete indifference are the chief cause of all the trouble, of all the complaints, annoyances, etc., and the sooner a complete change is made the better for all. It is the worst service I know; it annoys everyone who has anything to do with it, and it is only the "apathy" of the public which has allowed such "chaos" to exist for years past. The cost is too high, and the article supplied at present is of very inferior quality. The big retail and wholesale houses, and large firms and companies, etc., ought to pay in proportion for the services required and rendered. I am, etc.,

THE CHAPMAN SACK.

HOW THE LAW IS EVADED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Referring to his intended action in extending the crusade against the use of bags containing over 200lb, the Minister for Customs to-day said that he had been informed by a reliable authority that 25 per cent. of the wheat exported from Australia last season was contained in the old four-bushel bags, the weight of which ranged from 260lb upwards. Large Java sugar bags, which hold between 300lb and 400lb of wheat; second-hand maize bags, and large-sized oat bags, were frequently used for wheat. Bales of them were, the Customs authorities stated, even sent back empty to Australia for the specific purpose of the wheat trade. The power which the Minister for Customs proposes asking Parliament to endow the Customs Department with will enable the Minister to prohibit the export or import of produce in larger bags than would hold 200lb.

LADIES' POULTRY CLUB.

SECOND ANNUAL SHOW.

The second annual show of the Ladies' Poultry and Cage Bird Society was opened yesterday at the Masonic Hall, Castlereagh-street. A good entry was received, numbering 325 exhibits, comprising the cream of the season's winners in most varieties. Orpingtons make a capital display in the three varieties. Leghorns are a splendid lot. Wyandottes were few in the laced varieties, but whites make a fair showing. Indian Game are a good lot. Plymouth Rocks are good classes. The selling classes contain some fair birds. No classes are provided for ducks. A capital lot of pigeons are penned, and competition is good. This fixture is the last of the season's shows. The exhibits are well staged, and make an interesting display. The light was somewhat bad for judging the black Orpingtons, and the judge had a severe task to pick the best birds, but came through the ordeal very satisfactory. A fair number of fanciers and persons interested in poultry attended the show yesterday, and the arrangements were carried out very well by the hon. secretary, president, and co-workers on the committee. The show will be open to-day from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. The pet classes and a few additional special prizes are to be awarded to-day. The judges were:—Poultry: Mr. Fern, all Orpingtons; Mr. W. C. Forster, all Wyandottes; Mr. G. Bradshaw, Plymouth Rocks, Langshans, Minorcas, and Andalusians; Mr. W. Brown, all Leghorns; Mr. S. Kermode, game. Pigeons: Mr. C. Turner, working homers; Mr. J. THAT HAPPY VOICE FROM RUTHERGLEN

PEOPLE GO FROM FAR AND NEAR TO SEE THE LIVING PROOF OF THIS GREAT RECOVERY AND CURE BY CLEMENTS TONIC, WHERE ALL TREATMENT FAILED.
A PAGE FROM THE BOOK OF MIRACLES.

'I Stand Before Them All This Day.'

The medicine that saves and lengthens human life as this one does; that brings back the health so long despaired of; that proves by restored vigor and mental energy, that out of years of pain and suffering, men and women recover and enjoy life, surely this is the medicine for the people in every rank and walk of existence. People who are ill, sickly, weak-nerved; with strength, vigor, energy undermined; or who cannot get strong after long or sudden illnesses or attacks of fever, &c., should read these letters to a great medicine. The writer can be seen at Rutherglen any day.

Mr. PATRICK DOWNES, a miner, from Corowa, N. S. Wales, and now at Rutherglen, Victoria, writes just the simple story of renewed health after years of despair and useless treatment, but it speaks for itself to the general public. Everyone should read it, written in October, 1909:—

CLEMENTS TONIC LTD.

"With sincere thanks I write, hoping you will cure sufferers as you have cured me. I suffered for two years with stomach trouble, spitting of blood, unable to digest food, causing great pain and stomach distention. I was in four hospitals in New South Wales and Victoria. In five months I had seventeen medical examinations, which said the blood was from my lungs, and it was a chest trouble. No treatment did me any good; but Clements Tonic did. I have never seen a Clements Tonic agent; for I could give hundreds of witnesses to my statement, who said I would never COME OUT OF THE HOSPITAL ALIVE. But, thanks to your Clements Tonic, I am still living, enjoying good health. I am a poor hand at writing, or I would publish this IN ALL THE PAPERS, so I am sending it to you with full consent to use it as you like.

"(Signed) PATRICK DOWNES."

Great Southern Consuls Mine, Victoria.

On 19th May, 1910, Mr. Downes again writes to Clements Tonic Ltd.:—

"I have sent my photo as you desire. I wish I could do more to advertise Clements Tonic to sufferers of ill-health, for scores of men and women came to me the last three months, from far and near, to see me, and wanted to know if Clements Tonic cured me. I am thankful I can assure them all, without fear or doubt, it has. I can say that also to the hundreds of people who know the truth, when I was ill in Clunes, Ballarat, Wangaratta, and Corowa, and to those who had no hope for me. But, thanks to this medicine, I am here before them all this day a cured man. I wish I could show you in person the look of surprise many persons have (especially those connected with the hospitals) who meet and see me alive.

"(Signed) PATRICK DOWNES."

Rutherglen, Vic., 19/5/10.

Late Acting Matron, Condobolin Hospital, N.S.W., writes:

"Often in cases which have come under my notice, both in the city and country, I have seen evidence of the wonderful health-restoring powers of Clements Tonic in Anæmic and nerve-wrecked men and women, who, after taking a brief course of it, have recovered so much as to surprise their friends."

"(Signed) NURSE HOLLAND."

Clements Tonic may be described as a national medicine, one of the best for the people, and this assertion is based on the fact that testimonies from persons in all ranks of life are given to it. These come from various parts of the country, from farms, sheep stations, cattle runs, shearers' camps, and other sources, and from business and professional men and women in the large cities of the Commonwealth.

* * * * *

Various professional men recommend this tonic because it is pregnant with those properties which rebuild the constitution. Nurses associated with some of the largest hospitals in the Commonwealth, have noticed its effect for good on convalescents. That it helps Nature regain her strength is undoubted.

* * * * *

Women who are weak through household duties, the responsibilities of maternity, the heavy tax upon the system's strength through fever attacks and other illness, will find it of unquestionable benefit to them in building up the system so necessary to the restoration of vitality. After a few doses, benefit will be felt in a healthy desire to eat; the nerves will grow stronger, the heart and pulse regular and firm, and the whole system healthier.

* * * * *

Men who are weak from over study—medical or law students—men in prominent public positions, may prevent NERVE BREAKDOWN by its use. The artisan and worker should keep it in their homes. A dose taken after each meal will prevent indigestion and assist digestion. Its effect upon tired or wrecked nerves is to ensure sound sleep, restful repose, stimulating the brain and vital centres, making a man fit and well. This is what Clements Tonic does. It gives new life leases. Send for it.

BOOT TRADE DISPUTE.

FINAL DAY'S HEARING.

The case in which Whybrow and Company, together with 36 other boot manufacturers, applied for a writ of prohibition restraining the Commonwealth Court of Conciliation and Arbitration, and the President of the Court, and the Australian Boot Trade Employees' Federation from further proceeding in the plaint, and upon the award, in the boot trade dispute, recently heard before the Commonwealth Court of Conciliation and Arbitration, was resumed before the High Court.

Mr. Mitchell continued his argument in reply. Counsel contended that the men never asked for any conference with the employers on the points at issue. The wages awarded by his Honor were higher than those asked for by the employees. The employees objected to the subject matter of apprenticeship, and the basis of wages of apprentices being age and not experience, and also to the rate fixed. They objected to the existing apprenticeship deeds being interfered with. It had been contended that there were bogus deeds of apprenticeship drawn up, but this was done by outside employers. Only the more respectable of the employers had been cited. Those who were the chief offenders had been left at peace.

The Court reserved its judgment.

STOREKEEPER'S DEATH.

MOREE, Friday.

The inquest on John Kibby, late managing director for M'Intosh, Ltd., storekeepers, Moree, was commenced at the Courthouse to-day, before Mr. John Jamieson, district coroner. William James Edwards was present in custody. Inspector Butler, of Narrabri, represented the police, and Mr. A. B. Ziotowski (solicitor) watched the proceedings on behalf of Edwards.

Marian Jane Kibby, widow of deceased, deposed that at about 9 p.m. on the 22nd ultimo deceased left the Post-office Hotel, Moree, where witness and deceased resided, to go to the stores of his firm to see that everything was alright. She next saw him about 10 o'clock the same night, when he returned to the hotel on foot, assisted by two men. His head was then in bandages, and blood showed through the bandages. She spoke to deceased. Edwards was not there. She said to deceased, "What's happened to you?" He replied, "Edwards said 'Good-night, Mr. Kibby,' and then struck me in the eye, and hit me again; and then I fell and screamed murder and help. He (Edwards) seemed like a frightened cat running up and down the enclosure, and then I heard him climb the fence." Deceased also said, "I am positive it was Edwards. I saw him as plainly as I can see you." Deceased was helped into bed on the night of June 22, and subsequently was taken to Dr. Magill's hospital, where he remained till his death last night. He was 56 years of age. Witness knew William James Edwards, now in Court. He was employed in the store of M'Intosh, Ltd., as grocer about three months ago.

The inquest was adjourned on the application of the police to Monday next.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

AN INDIAN BISLEY.

COMPARED WITH AUSTRALIA.

Major J. K. Forsyth, a local officer at present attached to the Indian Army, recently sent to the military authorities a report of an interesting rifle meeting held at Ambala, India. This was sent to the National Rifle Association, and the wonderful advance in service competitions was favourably commented on.

The secretary of the local N.R.A. has replied to the authorities, thanking them for the valuable report of Major Forsyth, and informing them of the efforts being made locally in the direction of encouraging service shooting.

The reply pointed out that the existing conditions in Australia did not permit such extensive and up-to-date methods by the volunteer riflemen as were used by the permanent forces of India; still, a great deal was being done to make service shooting a special feature of the Australian Bisley. A sum of £1165 is given in prizes for service shooting alone. The Governor's Cup and several other events were put on the programme, and these approached as near as possible to service conditions.

A further extension of the service matches was under consideration, and it was intended to induce every club in the State to train a team of service shots, which should visit the district headquarters to decide the championship of the district, and then the winning team, for every district would attend the annual meeting of the association at Randwick, and shoot under service conditions for the championship of the State.

An invitation was extended to the Minister for Defence and the Inspector-General to visit the annual prize meeting of the N.R.A. in October.

STUD SHEEP SALES.

SELECTED FLOCK MERINOS.

GOOD PRICES MAINTAINED.

Yesterday's sales of purebred merino sheep conducted by Hill, Clark, and Company, Ltd., in conjunction with Messrs. Powers, Rutherford, and Co., of Melbourne, comprised for the most part pens of flock and selected rams. They were well attended, and prices throughout were good. Everything placed before the public in presentable order was freely competed for at what was considered in every instance very good prices. A few sheep that were in very low condition owing to having been saturated by recent heavy rains were not disposed of, but the bulk of the catalogue went in record order. An object of considerable interest at the Pyrmont warehouses was the grand champion ram Dandie Dinmont, a splendid sheep, from the Haddon Rig stud, which was on exhibition only. Mr. J. C. Stanford, the auctioneer, said that several offers of 1250 guineas had been refused by the manager of the station, Mr. James Hunter, during the present sales. The sales were:—

MR. HENLEY AND THE GAS COMPANY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It appears to me that Mr. Henley is most unjustly attempting to depreciate the value of the Gas Company's shares, and to create alarm amongst hundreds whose trust funds are invested in this company, at rates of interest not much higher than is allowed by the banks on fixed deposit.

He appears to think that the supply of gas and water should be under municipal or Government control. Many will no doubt agree with him, but many thousands in this city will also agree that the management of the gas company, and treatment of the public by that company, compare very favourably with the arbitrary methods of the Water and Sewerage Department, on the board of which Mr. Henley is a member.

If the Gas Company is to be resumed, let it be done on fair and just lines. To use language published in your recent excellent articles on nationalisation, and more particularly in the "Herald" of Tuesday June 21, "Let there be no confiscation"—"let there be no infraction of the canons of common honesty." Mr. Henley would lead people to suppose that all the shareholders of the Gas Company are holders of original stock, but the fact is that there are nearly 1000 shareholders, and I doubt if you would find three who are original shareholders. I do know this, however, that for many years, and right up to the present time, many trust moneys have been invested in the Gas Company's shares, upon which widows and children greatly depend, because it is regarded as safe, though the yield amounts only to between 4 per cent. and 5 per cent. Mr. Henley apparently knows a great deal about new inventions, candle-power, value of by-products, etc., but I doubt if his information on those subjects is reliable. In his latest letter he refers to cheap water gas, but if he consults the engineer of the Gas Company, I think he will learn that water gas costs the company more than coal gas. It was a good thing for the public during the recent severe coal strike that the company had an alternative means of manufacturing gas, as this water gas proved of invaluable assistance.

It is popular, especially on the eve of a general election, to attack a well-managed company, and an attempt is invariably made to belittle it in the eyes of the public by calling it a monopoly. Mr. Henley apparently does not know the meaning of the word, and I advise him to consult a dictionary. In this connection it is a coincidence that a general election is at hand, and Mr. Henley is a candidate for membership. He is a member of the Liberal party, but if he voices the opinion of the whole party, thousands of the electors will consider that the name should be changed to the "Illiberal" or "Confiscation" party. I am, etc.,

Sydney, July 8. ANOTHER SHAREHOLDER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have read a reply from Mr. T. Henley in your to-day's paper to a gas shareholder, under the heading of gas and private monopoly. Whilst not in sympathy with the Gas Company (having had one or two brushes with it myself, owing to unjust charging in meter not registering), yet, when we compare one of our very much mismanaged Governmental departments, where money is unfairly squeezed out of the pockets of consumers to swell the banking account of the Water and Sewerage Board, which is under the control of the Government, it appears like the pot calling the kettle black. Mr. Henley states that gas could be supplied to the consumer at 3s per 1000 cubic feet if financed in a bona-fide way. I quite believe that, but I scarcely think a board appointed like our Water and Sewerage Board could do it; especially if it had a rental valuation Act to rate the consumers at, instead of what they consumed being charged for.

The system of rating enforced by the Water and Sewerage Board is a standing disgrace to any Government. If a tradesman was to act in the same way to his customers he would be before our courts, and I should say justly dealt with, but this is a Government department, and is permitted to treat the public (consumers) otherwise. The Gas Company does supply a meter to each consumer, and they are only expected to pay at a given rate for each 1000 cubic feet of gas that is consumed, but the Water and Sewerage Board can, according to rental valuation basis, rate you for twice as much water as you consume (by the reading of your meter), and then charge you for water over again, that supplies w.c., at the rate of 6d in the £ of rental valuation. This is twentieth century fair-play and justice, enforced by twentieth century enlightened minds. We truly ought to be proud of such legislation. Let me cite you an actual case. A Mr. A. was living in a house, rental value £40 per annum for domestic purposes; on such rental valuation he is allowed 20,000 gallons of water. He has a water meter on, and by its reading he only consumes 16,000 gallons of water, he receives a bill per half-year, in advance, of 10s. Now, please note, 4000 gallons which he has not used he is charged for. Then again all water consumed in w.c. has already been accounted for at meter, and paid for in the 10s; yet he is charged for it again at the rate of 6d in the £ of rental value, viz., £40, including sewerage charge in all for w.c., £1 10s per annum. Now, is this fair and just? There are only two people in the house. A house near by has 14 persons in it; yet they only pay same rates, not having a meter, but rated on rental valuation. Now Mr. A. improves the borough in which he lives by spending money by making alterations to his property, which bring up his rental value to £7d per annum. There are still only two persons in the house, and his meter still says that he only has need for domestic and w.c. purposes of 16,000 gallons of water. Yet, how does the Water and Sewerage Board rate him? Notice: Water £1 18s, and sewerage, including water charged for over again, £3 0s 2d per annum. If this is not a system of robbery, it would be difficult to find one. The Water and Sewerage Board says: "But you can use twice as much water." But if you don't require it, is it just to make you pay? If your milkman, who before the alteration left you a quart of milk at a cost of 5d per quart, wanted to charge you 10d per day, and stated that as your rental value had doubled you should consume two quarts per day, and if you didn't you would be charged just the same, would you be proud of a law that gave him the right to charge you for twice the quantity of milk you required, saying nothing about the right to charge you over again for milk that you had already paid for? I think not. Yet he has as much right as the Water and Sewerage Board.

I think Mr. Henley had better have consumers treated honestly in this department before he claims the right of the Government to make another board of control, as he suggests, viz., the gas monopoly.

I trust also that Mr. Henley will see that all consumers who have been unfairly treated in this respect by the Water and Sewerage Board have all unjust overcharges refunded to them, he will then indeed right a wrong that now exists. I am, etc.,

Leichhardt, July 7. J. W. RIDING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—It might be inferred from Mr. Henley's letters that if Government had control we should have everything we desired. Take the supply of water as an example of how not to do things. The water will show what happened in one case, and there are probably many more such. Two years ago the Gas Company laid a service a distance of about 200 yards from the Rocky Point-road to my property, there being no other house to serve therefrom at that time. The water is in Cook Park and Rocky Point-road, both dead ends. The board would rather have thousands of gallons wasted weekly clearing them than undergo the expense of coupling, although the distance is not twice that laid by the Gas Company. Moreover, the water would be supplied to four houses between the points, and there are rates on unoccupied land. The Gas Company does not ask 5 per cent. guarantees, as does this vaunted Government institution. I am, etc.,

OPEN-AIR PICTURE SHOWS.

Owners of open-air picture shows in the suburbs are naturally anxious to get their places of entertainment roofed-in in some way for the winter season. Some of them, it appears, have done so lately without authority. The intention of the Government, when new regulations were issued last month, was that in isolated places only should this be allowed; but there seems to have been an impression that the Chief Secretary's Department favours the concession generally. It is recognised that the roofing-in is a considerable danger to the public, and it also entails periodical and expensive inspections by the Government Architect's Department to ensure that safety is duly provided for. These open-air shows pay only £1 per annum as license fee. This does not compensate for their inspection, etc. They have very liberal treatment in the present state of the law, and are competing against public halls that are properly constructed in accordance with the Act, and with every possible provision for the public safety. In fairness, it has been decided that the roofing will be allowed only where the open-air shows do not compete with the halls, which pay in most cases much higher license fees, and having an assurance of safety for the public.

Darling, regret and sorrow you always kept at bay,
Till death stole into your peaceful, pulsing breast;
No hand on earth could then prolong your golden stay.
Then your clay cold lips I took farewell and kissed,
Never thy sweet face to see it more.
My heart pulsing heaves in my sorrowing sigh,
Regret is deeply branded in my lingering core,
While regretting tears flood upon each longing eye,
That sweet face of charm, that dear love of mirth,
Which strove to cheer and make all life sublime.
Though, darling, you have vanished for ever from earth,
For ever you will hold your claim on this heart of mine.

ADELAIDE.—In loving remembrance of our own darling mother, Mary Anne Adelaide, who departed this life, at her residence, St. Peters, on July 7, 1896, in her 43rd year. Inserted by her loving children, Adelaide, Lena, Rita, Lily, and her son, William. Rest in peace.

It's years, dearest mother, from us you did depart—
Left us young buds in coming years to bloom;
Though dead, you still live within our lowly, longing hearts,
To banish all pain and daily gloom.
We feel, dear mother, you are ever near,
And for our coming you anxious watch and wait,
For our souls to journey to that lofty sphere,
You will be waiting at the glory gate,
With that gracious God you placed all your trust,
Untiring you strove all your duties to fulfil.
All too fleeting time journeys to that real land of trust,
So, dearest mother, all, yes, all, is safe and well.

HAIR BEAUTY.

In a hot climate the hair very quickly loses its colouring, and gets grey, even in young people. How to reproduce the natural shade of the hair, and invigorate it, without giving the unnatural dead appearance caused by using sulphur hair restorers and dyes, has been a matter for investigation by chemists for many years. The secret has now been solved in the manufacture of NERO'S HAIR TINT.

The advantages of this preparation are many over other preparations for the same purpose, in being permanent, in giving the natural shade, in being easily applied, in one liquid only, and it cannot be detected on the hair. Made in Auburn, Chestnut, Light Brown, Brown, Dark Brown, and Black.

CRICKET AND THE PUBLIC.

There is not a little curiosity respecting the report which the Cricket Association is to present shortly on how to make cricket more popular. That such a question should be under consideration is tantamount to an official confession that all is not too well just now with the national game. While there may be differences of opinion as to the extent to which public interest in cricket has waned, there is no doubt that the interest is not so keen as it was. This is proved by the dwindling "gates," which furnish the sort of argument the association cannot ignore. We have not the exact figures to refer to, but our impression is that representative domestic cricket does not now draw very much more than half the number of spectators it did a few years ago. In the case of international cricket the falling off has been not so noticeable. The last matches with visiting Englishmen resulted, as we may remember, in a handsome return. So that, as far as the biggest fixtures are concerned, perhaps there is not much to complain about, although even here comparisons with the past are not favourable to the present. When MacLaren's team was here, seven or eight years back, a crowd of 35,000 watched the play with New South Wales, and the test matches during that season were played to crowds almost as large. Despite the good financial results, the last visiting team did not attract spectators on the same scale. If, therefore, we are to measure the interest not so much by the number of players as by the number of people who watch players, we must believe that cricket is losing ground. It may be only for the moment, as all games have their ups and downs; but, even so, the friends of the national game cannot note the circumstance without concern.

It is not easy to account for the decline, although theories are plentiful enough. There is little room for doubt, however, that the protracted and unseemly quarrels between players and the governing authorities, and the over-emphasis of the financial factor, have left a distinctly bad impression upon the public mind. But most important consideration of all, perhaps, is the tendency for matches to become less attractive as spectacles. With every respect to the players themselves, it is to be feared that cricket is becoming too serious. It is becoming less of a sport and more of a science. Competition among players has become so intense that each is disposed to play more for himself than for his side. A few years ago in England, if an amateur player were discovered keeping his average he prejudiced his prospects. But nowadays even in England it has become fashionable to keep averages and to talk about them; while in this country the average has become a positive tyranny. When the New South Wales Association, a few weeks ago, invited expressions of opinion from a number of authorities as to the best means of rendering the game more attractive, one of the most pithy replies came from Mr. A. J. Hopkins. "Pick men," he said, "who do not think of their averages." Playing for averages is only too apt to resolve the game into a weary succession of maiden overs. Batsmen to-day are prone to wait for opportunities to score—"pick their ball," as the phrase goes—whereas batsmen of a former time were accustomed to make opportunities. What Andrew Lang once called the "champagne of cricket" has become, too frequently, flat beer. How often do we now experience the thrills which the batting of Massie and Lyons and Percy M'Donnell once administered? For of course it is the batsman that makes the game for the spectator. So far as present-day New South Wales batsmen are concerned, it is only Trumper, Bardsley, S. E. Gregory, and occasionally Cotter, who quicken the pulse of the crowd.

But the passion for averages apart, the very perfection of the present-day wickets favours the piling up of long, monotonous, and mechanical scores. A. G. Steel once said that the ideal match was the one in which neither side scored more than 200 runs; but all cricket legislation of recent times has been in favour of the batsman, and to that extent has contributed to the prolongation of matches. However they may differ as to the means of securing them, most patrons of the game are agreed that shorter matches are desirable. Players themselves may enjoy most the wary contest in which no concessions are made to chance. But the general public wants compression—wants play short, sharp, and exciting. It may be questioned whether this demand is altogether compatible with the best exhibitions of cricketing skill; but it is only another expression of the hustling spirit of the present day, and therefore has to be met. The time limit, as in England (circumstances make it compulsory there), has had much support in the association here, but the public leans to the played-out match. There have been also a multitude of suggestions for economising time while the players were on the ground, and many of them are useful. The abolition of the second innings finds favour with a minority, but the objection to single-innings matches is that too much is left to the luck of weather and team condition—such matches might be too short. But after all these many suggestions are in the direction of mitigation rather than remedy. The indications are that the remedy lies with the players themselves. Let batsmen cease to forget that cricket is first a recreation and a sport, and not merely a highly-specialised form of athletic exercise. We shall then have more movement, more abandon—in a word, more fun. And perhaps we may then hear less about the decline of popular interest in a noble game.

IMMIGRATION.

We commented recently on some proposals made to overcome the difficulties of emigration and over-population contained in a paper read by a Mr. Enock before the Royal Society of Arts, and subsequently published. Mr. Enock suggested that tracts of country in the overseas Dominions should be purchased by local bodies in Great Britain, filled with their unemployed, and subsequently worked on a commercial basis. He anticipated an objection to the expense by showing that in the end the ratepayers would gain by being relieved of their paupers, and answered any possible objection of the Dominions, firstly, by refusing to admit that these emigrants would not make useful citizens; and, secondly, by insisting that it was the duty of each of the parts of the Empire to help Great Britain by receiving those of her citizens for whom she could find nothing to do. Mr. Enock denounced as unfilial and dangerous the attempt of the Dominions to secure only those immigrants who were capable of helping themselves, either by their physical capacity or by their means. He impressed upon his hearers his conviction that if the principle implied in this attempt were allowed, then there would cease to be any value in Imperial unity or any further justification for the expenditure of money on Imperial defence. A somewhat similar expression of opinion has been evoked by a conference on emigration recently convened by the Royal Colonial Institute, and by the discussion of some new regulations issued by the Government of Canada. The two most practical hints given at the conference came from Dr. Barker, the head of Barnardo's homes, and from Mr. Jebb, who seems to be recognised as an authority on all that concerns the future of the Dominions. Dr. Barker complained that the information given by the Agents-General was not specific enough. He had nothing but praise for the book issued by the Colonial Office as a guide to intending emigrants, but he stated that it was exceedingly difficult to obtain the detailed facts which should be furnished on behalf of each colony. Mr. Jebb suggested that at the time of the next Colonial Conference a subsidiary conference should be held on the subject of immigration. The remainder of the speeches at the conference cannot be said to have added much to the available information on the subject. All the speakers referred to the enormous difficulty of securing employment in England and the abundance of land awaiting settlement in the colonies. One of them drew a contrast, which has now become a commonplace, between the waste places he had seen on his travels and the story told him of an applicant for the post of doorkeeper who found 300 rivals to compete against. Another speaker dwelt on the fact that during last year more than a hundred thousand British subjects went to the United States, 86,000 to Canada, and only 27,000 to Australia. But none of them could offer a plan by which the determination of the colonies to secure a certain type of immigrant could be overcome, or how under these conditions their necessities could be supplied.

How strong this determination is held has been shown by the new Canadian regulations. The year 1907-8 was the record year for British immigration into Canada. In that year, out of a total of 260,000 immigrants, 120,000 were British subjects, 83,000 were from the Continent of Europe, and 58,000 from the United States. In 1908 began the short period of economic stringency which caused the stoppage of some manufacturing concerns, and a good many public works, and subsequently reduced the market for employment. The Canadian Superintendent of Immigration was then instructed to inquire into the success of the system in use, and its effect on the demand for labour. It was his report that put an end to the welcome which had previously been offered to all classes of immigrants. He reported that of the men out of work a noticeably large population were assisted immigrants, and advised that assisted immigration should be discouraged. The Government then published a regulation that no assisted immigrants should be allowed to land unless certified as suitable by the Superintendent before leaving, and later on forbade any immigrant to land whose passage had been paid by a charity society unless he was suited for, and had already been guaranteed from Canada some employment or work on a farm. The effect of this legislation has already become apparent. There has been an increase in the number of American immigrants, and a proportionate decrease in the number of British. That process has been going on more rapidly than ever which French-Canadian has recently declared must end in the secession of the Western provinces from the Empires. The Canadian Government, of course, can bear the loss of the thousands who have been deterred with equanimity. They have the farmers of the United States to draw upon; they have splendid inducements to offer to immigrants, and their organisation has for many years been conducted with liberality and directed by a man of brains and influence. We in Australia have as great inducements to offer, equally good land, and more genial climate, but we have not the United States as an alternative source of supply, and we have not had either the same ability or the same opportunity to guide our agents. Yet there is no Australian, among the keenest advocates of immigration, who would consent to have the work on our behalf carried on on a principle less strict than the Canadian. But that is no reason why we should not arrange to work in conjunction with the voluntary or official agencies in England, either at the next Colonial Conference or as Mr. Jebb suggests, at subsidiary conferences of the persons most interested.

DEFECTS IN SOCIAL LIFE.

At two distinct meetings recently held under the auspices of two different philanthropic agencies, Lady Dudley and Lady Chelmsford gave utterance to important sentiments with regard to certain glaring defects in our social system. Both the institutions securing such advocacy had in view the important work of mitigating the sufferings of those who from one cause or another had fallen on evil times. Broadly speaking, the theme was rescue work; in one instance among men, and the other among women. In both cases the attitude of the speakers was deeply sympathetic with those workers who have undertaken the important duty of mitigating the effects of those evils that would appear to be indigenous to every great city. The encouraging words offered by Lady Dudley to the workers on behalf of the Pilgrim Men's Home, constituted an appeal for help of a practical kind towards improving the condition of many unfortunates who drift along the currents of life at the mercy of every evil influence that makes for the undoing of men. The work of rescue of such is difficult and disheartening, and the majority of the community must be merely spectators of it; but there is abundant reason for adopting Lady Dudley's advice, and "cheering" the hearts and stimulating the efforts of those who are in the thick of the fight against social despair. There are, of course, a multitude of causes for the poverty and vice of any great city, and whilst the country as a whole, through its representatives in Parliament and elsewhere, should be at work upon the business of radical reform, there is full scope for the energies of those who are attempting the betterment of individuals.

The improvement of the condition of the poor and unemployed is an important matter, but more important still is the serious problem presented by the social question brought into view by the remarks of Lady Chelmsford at the meeting of the Mothers' Union. It is true that the number of cases in the maternity and rescue homes of Sydney constitute a theme upon which might be based a serious indictment of the moral life of the community at large. The "girl-mothers" to whom Lady Chelmsford referred represent a side of social life that only comes into public view when our philanthropic agencies are giving an account of their stewardship to those who support their work. To use the phrase which covers this hidden sore of the world, "the social evil" has its roots deep down in human nature, and its terrible record has stained the pages of human history, but the pathos of the sad story is in the fact that so many of its victims are the young, who were surely born for a better purpose than to become candidates for the brand of shame as slaves in the service of vice. Lady Chelmsford's appeal to the Mothers' Union to make renewed efforts in the cause of the girl-children of our homes will find an echo in every true mother's heart, and there can be little question that the solution of the problem lies nearer the hands of the mothers of the State than either the power of legislation or the remedial efforts of philanthropy. Dr. Mackellar's position, however, is a thoroughly sound one, and the legislation he is advocating ought to be passed. We do not believe that Sydney contrasts unfavourably with other great cities, but no one can observe the numbers of girls of quite irresponsible age permitted to wander in our city and suburban thoroughfares at all hours, under no kind of supervision or restraint, without realising what a risk of moral failure is being taken. The girl-mothers are being sacrificed to the inherent selfishness of the age.

To-day's "Herald."—Sir Henry Lucy in "Life in London" (p. 5) this week has a good word for Sir George Reid. Our High Commissioner is hailed as a great acquisition among after-dinner speakers. The new departure in publishing novels at two shillings, instead of the orthodox six shillings) is also commented upon. Our special London correspondent contributes one of his racy sketches on "The Derby" (p. 5), and the account of one of the greatest meetings in the world is well worth reading. Although the last Royal Academy has been dealt with before, the account of the work of some Australian artists (p. 5), as shown therein, will be read with interest by picture-lovers. Mr. Maiden finishes his "Botanist's Notes" (p. 5) in this issue, and those who have followed his previous articles will find this one a satisfactory completion of the series. We give a review of the June reviews on page 4. A heart-stirring account of the work of the Day Nursery in Sydney will be found in "The Stranger" (p. 7). Mr. Petford Allen's "A Midnight Storm" (p. 7) will appeal to those who love a good word picture, and are acquainted with the Blue Mountains in shadow and shine. Lovers of honey are commended to "Wild Bees and Sugar Bags" (p. 6). "Science Notes" (p. 7) this week continue last week's account of insect development. Literature, and Music and Drama, will be found in their usual places, and the other features of Saturday's paper are maintained at the usual high standard.

Experiments in Wireless.—Mr. J. H. A. Pike, the young Ashfield wireless expert, received a message from the R.M.S. Makura on Thursday night. The vessel was then nearly 900 miles away, and, though the signals were indistinct, they were perfectly readable. The message received was to the effect that all were well, and the weather fine. Mr. Pike has received a number of messages from the mail steamer since she left Sydney, and all were transmitted at the rate of 20 words a minute. "This is fair going," he remarked, "over a distance of 900 miles, and it is very evident that the operator on board is sending the messages through as though he were transmitting to a station 150 miles away."

Admission to the Municipal Library.—A number of suburban residents who are anxious to become borrowers from the Sydney Municipal Library are, judging by correspondence received from them, not cognisant of the conditions under which books are lent. One correspondent states that the rule relating to the admission of borrowers restricts persons to those guaranteed by city ratepayers. This was the case up till June last, but the existing by-laws provide for the admission to the library of anyone over the [illegible] years, presenting a card [illegible] a member of either House or of the City Council, the heads of Government departments, and Public school headmasters.

Pardons for Imprisoned Soldiers and Deserters.—The Government has received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies copies of a special army order, containing the terms of remissions of sentences to imprisoned soldiers, and pardons to deserters, the order being issued as an act of clemency by the King on the occasion of his accession to the Throne. The pardons are granted on condition that the offence was committed before the date of the order (May 23), and that the absentees surrender themselves within two months after that date if at home, or within four months if abroad.

Sunday Concerts.—The Theatres and Public Halls Act does not apply to halls used for religious worship only, but, in order to suit the wishes of a large section of the public, special provision is made in it for the use, with the previous approval of the Colonial Secretary, of a licensed theatre or public hall for the purpose of holding sacred concerts on Sundays. On no account, however, is a licensed building to be used for a public entertainment or a public meeting on Christmas Day, Good Friday, or on a Sunday. The Minister's consent limits the Sunday concerts to sacred and selected items, and so far the concessions under this portion of the Act are in the nature of an experiment. Whether the form of Sunday recreation under the conditions ruling will prove successful has yet to be shown.

The Monitor's Downfall.—Mr. Dudley Le Souef, of Melbourne, lecturing to the Naturalists' Club, said that the names of iguana and goana applied to the Australian monitor lizard were equally objectionable. The creatures were very destructive of young birds, but sometimes in their eager quest for food they encountered trouble. He saw a monitor once ascend a high tree and stick its head into a king-fisher's nest in the hope of finding a fledgling. The mother-bird happened to be at home, and she flew so fiercely at the intruder, and pecked him so vigorously upon the nose, that he lost his balance, and fell to the ground, being badly injured. He had seen monitors 7ft 6in long in Victoria, and had ascertained that they fed upon young opossums, rabbits, and hares when they could get them. They absorbed this food by a series of jerks or muscular contractions, as they had no teeth to tear it to pieces.

The Amateur Status and Rowing.—There was a general impression years ago that amateur rowing in New South Wales was too exclusive. During that period this State occupied a pretty low level in interstate rowing. The two facts might have been totally dissociated as far as cause and effect were concerned, but they were still coincident. Seven years ago the amateur qualification was widened by the removal of the bar to the manual labourer. It was then confidently predicted that there would be a large influx of country rowers, but the opportunities offered by the Rowing Association seemed insufficient to bring about the desired result. The association is again endeavouring to widen its sphere of activity. However, it is sticking closely to amateur rules. A motion to prevent the approved regatta officials from having anything to do with the control of professional boat racing is to be considered. The effect of this will be that judges and others connected with professional sport will forfeit their amateur status. "It is hard to see in what way the reputation and usefulness of an amateur are compromised," writes a correspondent, "by his appreciated connection with professional sport. Just at the present time such men as are leaders in amateur rowing are interesting themselves in promoting the interests of Ernst Barry, the aspirant for the world's sculling championship on the Zambesi, Mr. Guy Nicholls being treasurer to the fund. In nearly all great professional matches the umpire has been a leading amateur rower."

Power of the Bagpipes.—"The bagpipes are able to charm anyone," said Rev. Professor Ronald G. Macintyre at a lecture on "Highland Folk Lore and Legend" at St. James's Hall last night. "They are at their best," he continued, "in one of the Highland war pieces. These will strike at the heart of either man or beast. I remember an incident in the Peninsula War, when an Highland officer and his servant in crossing the frontier were surrounded by wolves. In order to keep them at a safe distance they kept throwing their food to them. The supply was drawing to an end. Suddenly the thought struck Donald of the power of the music of the bagpipes. He remembered how he had been told of the charm it had over hearts. He seized the exciting opportunity. But directly he struck up a tune the wolves put their tails between their legs, and scattered off at a terrible pace. Before the first two bars were finished the last of the wolves was 'over the hills and far away.'"

Mr. Chas. J. Newall, of Mosman, writes pointing out the dangerous state of Military-road, Mosman, towards Neutral Bay, owing to insufficient lighting. His son, he says, met with a serious bicycle accident in consequence.

Mr. J. J. Jagelman writes eulogising Colonel Onslow's action in drawing attention to the selection of the Bronte tram route. The correspondent contends that the new route should branch off from the Bondi line.

Constables Nicholls and Terry made a sudden rush into a house in Brisbane-street last night. From a bunch of nine Chinese they picked three, marched them to the Central Police Station, and charged two with smoking opium, and the third with assisting to keep an opium house.

At one time the Church Lads' Brigade, which is connected with the Church of England, numbered 16 companies in the diocese of Sydney alone, but owing to various causes it has dwindled down to three—viz., St. Stephen's, Newtown, St. Clement's, Marrickville, and All Saints', Petersham. The Archbishop of Sydney presided over a meeting in the Chapter-house last night, which had for its object the revival of the movement. A sub-committee was appointed to bring the organisation under the notice of the clergy.

THE CORONATION.

FEDERAL MINISTERS TO ATTEND.

The "Weekly Times of Ceylon," published in Colombo, on June 10 stated that the Hon. Andrew Fisher, Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, announces his intention of proceeding to London to attend the coronation of his Majesty King George V. It is considered probable that he will be accompanied by Mr. W. M. Hughes, the Attorney-General, and Senator Pearce, the Minister for Defence. The three statesmen will travel by the Orient line of steamers.

THE CIVIL LIST.

PROVISION FOR THE QUEEN.

YIELD OF CROWN LANDS.

LONDON, July 8.

The Civil List recommended by the select committee of the House of Commons grants Queen Mary an annuity of £70,000 in the event of King George predeceasing her. This is similar to the provision made for Queen Alexandra by the Civil List of King Edward.

The sons of King George are granted £10,000 each on attaining their majority, and an additional £15,000 upon marriage.

The report of the committee shows that Crown lands yielded, in 1909, £563,000.

Up to the accession of William and Mary the Monarch enjoyed the rents of the Crown lands, the feudal rights (surrendered by Charles II. in exchange for excise duties), the proceeds of the Post Office and wine licenses, and the produce of the taxes voted to the King for life. Out of this the sovereign was expected to defray in times of peace the cost of the Civil Service and of public defence, as well as to defray the charges of maintaining the Royal dignity. After the revolution of 1688, however, Parliament fixed the annual revenue of the Crown in time of peace at £1,200,000 (about the sum the various rents and taxes had realised in the two previous reigns), and appropriated £700,000 to the personal and public expenses of the King. The money was derived from the hereditary revenues—that is, from Crown lands and part of the excise duty. So the civil list came into being. It remained at £700,000 down to the accession of George II., when it was raised to £800,000. When George III. came to the throne Parliament for the first time assumed direct control over the personal expenses of the King. The Monarch surrendered his life interests in the hereditary revenue in return for an annual payment of £800,000, subsequently increased to £900,000. With the accession of William IV. the Civil list was put on what is practically its present footing. The King surrendered every source of revenue, most of the charges which properly belonged to the Government of the Kingdom were taken over by Parliament, and the Civil list was fixed at £510,000, raised when Queen Victoria came to the throne to £385,000.

The Civil list of King George is proposed at £470,000, the same as King Edward's. There has to be added to that £70,000 for the Queen Mother, £25,000 a year for the Duke of Connaught, £6000 to Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, £6000 to Princess Louise, £6000 to Princess Henry of Battenberg, £3000 to the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, £6000 to the Princess Helena of Waldeck (Duchess of Albany), and £6000 each to the three daughters of the late King. This will make the total charge on the consolidated revenue of £610,000—£47,000 in excess of the yield of the Crown lands.

EMIGRATION.

NEED OF THE EMPIRE.

DANGER OF GERMAN GROWTH.

LONDON, July 7.

The Duke of Marlborough, speaking at a meeting of the Central Emigration Board, said that the Empire must have a larger population in the Dominions overseas in order to meet the growth of the Pan-Germanic nation, and to combat the development of the Yellow races.

The progress, he said, of scientific emigration was necessarily slow. Out of 700 applicants during the year only 100 had stood the board's test.

THE VICTORIAN DELEGATION.

The first three persons who are going to Australia after seeing Mr. M'Kenzie and Mr. Mead, the Victorian Immigration Delegation, are practical farmers, with capital respectively of £1000, £800, and £300.

FRENCH CIVIL SERVANTS.

LEGISLATION AGAINST STRIKES.

TRADE UNIONS AUTHORISED.

LONDON, July 7.

The French Premier, M. Briand, has introduced a bill authorising State servants to belong to trade unions. It forbids strikes like that of the postal employees, but guarantees members against arbitrary action and favouritism.

ARCTIC SOVEREIGNTY.

CANADA MOVING.

FORESTALLING UNITED STATES.

LONDON, July 8.

A Canadian expedition in the steamer Arctic, commanded by Captain Bernier, has sailed from Quebec on a two years' exploration of Hudson's Bay.

Captain Bernier will plant the British flag on islands in the Arctic circle, and thus end the contention of the United States that Canada has no sovereignty in those regions.

Last year Captain Bernier took possession of the Arctic Archipelago for Canada from long. 60 west to 141 west up to lat. 90 north.

HOUSING THE IRISH.

4½ MILLIONS SPENT.

LONDON, July 8.

Mr. A. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, speaking on the Irish Estimates in the House of Commons last night, outlined what had been done in the way of providing better housing accommodation in Ireland. He said that 23,000 houses had been built under the Labourers Acts since 1906, and that £4,250,000 had already been spent in these works.

The Government, Mr. Birrell said, was prepared to provide a further million for cottages to replace the present stinking mud-heaps.

SETTLEMENT IN CANADA.

A GREAT INCREASE.

LONDON, July 7.

Reuter's correspondent states that 23,354 free homesteads in North-west Canada, of 160 acres each, were taken up during the past five months, compared with 13,111 during the corresponding period last year.

Seven hundred excursionists are leaving Canada to tour Great Britain under the auspices of the organisation known as the "Sons of England." Each member pledges himself to induce one Briton to come to Canada.

UNREST IN CRETE.

LEGISLATORS THREATENED.

LONDON, July 7.

Several representatives in the Cretan Legislature have been threatened with death if Moslems are countenanced.

THE QUEEN MOTHER.

JOURNEY TO COPENHAGEN.

LONDON, July 8.

DOCKS FOR DREADNOUGHTS.

MERCHANTS ANXIOUS.

THE ADMIRALTY'S PROVISIONS.

LONDON, July 8.

Yesterday an influential deputation, representing Chambers of Commerce, urged that dry docks should be provided for the largest warships on the Tyne and Humber, and at other ports on the east coast of Great Britain.

Lord Charles Beresford, M.P., stated that Germany had seven docks on the North Sea, and would soon have 13. If the fleet was to carry out the fastest tactics, clean bottoms and docks were essential.

Mr. R. M'Kenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, in replying, said that floating docks would shortly be completed and stationed, one on the east coast and another at Portsmouth. He hoped that Rosyth would be completed in 4½ years. He was asking Parliament shortly for permission to build another dock at Rosyth.

Mr. M'Kenna added that the Tyne was unsuitable for a large dry dock. Liverpool had just decided to build enormous docks without the help of the Admiralty. This would meet all the requirements of the west coast.

LIVERPOOL'S EXTENSIVE SCHEME.

LOOKING FAR AHEAD.

The Mersey Docks Board has sanctioned the construction of a dock 1020ft long and 120ft in width. The cost will be £500,000.

This dock is part of an extension scheme costing £3,500,000, and taking from 10 to 15 years to complete. The scheme will include deep-water docks for the biggest vessels likely to be built in the next half-century.

The carrying out of the scheme is due to a fear that the Mersey may lose the Cunarders.

TRIANGULAR CRICKET.

SOUTH AFRICA'S DECISION.

REGRET IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, July 8.

The decision of the South African cricket authorities not to send a team to Australia, because a guarantee is not forthcoming, is a great disappointment, and has caused much regret.

High cricket circles cannot understand the question of a guarantee preventing the tour, and consider that it means the abandonment of the triangular series of matches, also the Imperial Cricket Conference, which was eagerly anticipated.

High cricket circles say that if the triangular scheme fails the question arises whether South Africa could claim to come to England in 1911.

Marylebone Club will have to consider the question when full particulars are received. Leading cricketers declare that it will be an infinite pity if the tour of Australia by a South African team is abandoned, and they hope that further reflection will be bestowed on the decision.

R.M.S. MALWA IN COLLISION.

SLIGHTLY DAMAGED.

LONDON, July 8.

The R.M.S. Malwa, homeward bound from Sydney to London, has been slightly damaged through colliding with the British steamer Nairn, 3627 tons, near Colombo.

The Malwa was struck on the bows above the waterline. She is being repaired at Colombo, and will proceed to London to-day.

When this message was brought under the notice of Mr. A. Gordon Wesche, the acting-superintendent in Australia for the P. and O. Company, he said he had received a cable advising the arrival of the Malwa at Colombo on Wednesday evening. In view, however, of the fact that no intimation was conveyed to him in this message of the collision referred to, he felt confident that any damage caused was of a very slight character.

The Nairn is a steel screw steamer of 3627 tons, built at Sunderland in 1904, and owned by the Park S.S. Co., Ltd. She is registered at Glasgow.

BISLEY MATCHES.

CANADA WINS MACKINNON.

AUSTRALIA VERY LOW DOWN.

LONDON, July 8.

Shooting for the Mackinnon Challenge Cup at Bisley was concluded yesterday, and resulted in a win for Canada, who scored 1567. Australia was fifth with a score of 1483.

The wind was tricky. Australia scored 530 at 800 yards, and, making a bold effort to retrieve lost ground at the 900 yards range, put up a score of 521, but at 1000 yards Australia obtained only 432.

Scores were:—

Canada	1567
Scotland	1526
England	1495
Ireland	1492
Australia	1483

Individual scores of Australia were:—

J. H. Williams (V.)	134

G. Fisher (N.S.W.)	120
O. E. Boyd (N.S.W.)	116
H. Goy (Q.)	115
J. F. Burgoyne (S.A.)	102

Last year Canada won the event with a score of 1617 out of a possible 1800. Next in order were Transvaal 1514, England 1492, Natal 1491, Scotland 1491, Guernsey 1449, Ireland 1448, Southern Rhodesia 1422, and India 1376. The match is open to teams of 12 men, ten shots to be fired at each of the ranges, which are 800yds, 900yds, and 1000yds. The Challenge Cup was given in 1891 by the late Colonel Mackinnon. England has won the match 10 times, Scotland 6 times, Canada 3 times, and Ireland once.

DEATH OF MR. CLUNIES ROSS.

"KING" OF COCOS ISLANDS.

LONDON, July 8.

The death is announced of Mr. Clunies Ross, "king" of the Cocos Islands, in the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Clunies Ross, who is of mixed Scottish and Malay descent, is the great-grandson of the Ross who settled upon Cocos Island about 1825, and who, by virtue of strength of character, won over to his side all the Malays of Hare, another adventurer, claiming the island. Mr. Clunies Ross was about 15 years of age, and took over the government of the island on the death of his father 40 years ago. His mother was a Malay lady, and in complexion he was quite brown. He was an excellent speaker of English, very eloquent. He was a man of great force of character, and by his industry and business methods had built a big trade in copra with the outside world. He was the shipbuilder of the island, the designer of the houses, and had also much artistic ability. He ruled his people absolutely and well, and introduced many improvements into their modes of life. Though he, as they are, was a Mohammedan, polygamy is absolutely unknown on Cocos, and anyone who offended against the rule of one wife would find himself ostracised. Mr. Ross was married to a lady, who is largely of Malay blood, and who cannot speak English, and it is an interesting fact that for a space of 18 years on the island he neither spoke English himself, nor heard it spoken.

Two interesting articles on Cocos Island by V.R.J. appeared in the "Herald" some weeks ago.

FOLLOWING THE FIGHT.

CHICAGO WELCOMES JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON PROHIBITS.

LONDON, July 8.

Johnson, the coloured pugilist, had an immense reception on his arrival in Chicago yesterday.

Crowds of negroes lustily cheered him. A long procession of motor cars accompanied Johnson to his mother's house.

The public welcome was given, despite a prohibition by the police. Bands were forbidden to play, except in Johnson's home, where a carpet of roses was laid from the kerb to the door.

The authorities at Washington will not permit Johnson to appear at the music halls of the city.

PICTURES FORBIDDEN.

MANY TOWNS TAKE ACTION.

ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION IN ONTARIO

The movement to prohibit cinematograph pictures of the fight between Johnson and Jeffries is spreading. Washington, San Francisco, Boston, Los Angeles, and many other cities have forbidden the exhibition of the pictures. The States of Maine, Georgia, Texas, Indiana, and Arkansas are likely to follow suit.

In Scotland, the City Council of Glasgow is discussing the advisability of prohibiting the pictures.

8.25 a.m.

The Government of the Province of Ontario has absolutely forbidden the exhibition of fight pictures.

A "SKILL CONTEST."

JOHNSON AND BURNS.

LONDON, July 8.

Mr. Hugh D. M'Intosh, speaking at a press club banquet at San Francisco, announced that he hoped to arrange a "skill contest" between Johnson and Burns at the Olympia, London, at Christmas-time.

The contest will be for 20 rounds, will be fought with six-ounce gloves, and will be a test of ability, not of endurance.

STATEMENTS BY SHOW MANAGERS.

NO PRODUCTION AT PRINCIPAL HALLS

No intimation has yet been received by any of the proprietors of moving picture shows as to when the Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures will be produced in Sydney.

The managers of both Spencer's Theatrescope and West Pictures were emphatic in stating that no company, up to date, had contracts to show the pictures in Sydney, and both were equally emphatic that the pictures if brought to Australia would in all probability not be shown at either the Palace Theatre or the Lyceum Hall.

The managers of both houses said that their theatres had never been devoted to the exhibition of such series of moving pictures, and though individual members of both firms might exhibit pictures of the fight in other halls, it was unlikely, from a business point of view, that they would be shown in the two Pitt-street establishments.

PERSONAL.

Lady Chelmsford will preside at a meeting of the Health Society of New South Wales on Monday, when Mrs. Helen Barton will lecture on "Municipal Work in Glasgow."

At the last meeting of the New South Wales Interstate S.S. Owners' Association, Captain T. Langley Webb was re-elected to the chair for the ensuing 12 months. Captain Webb brought about the establishment of this association in 1901, after the old Steamship Owners' Association had dispersed, and held the chairmanship for five years. He then retired, on account of pressure of other business; but in 1908 was again elected, and re-elected each year since.

Dr. Louis Laurence Smith, one of the best-known residents of Melbourne, died yesterday after an illness extending over a few days. He caught a severe chill on Sunday, and at his advanced age—he had reached 80—his condition became so serious that no hope was entertained of his recovery. Dr. Smith had been a resident of the State for over 50 years. Of recent years Dr. Smith lived in comparative retirement; but there was a time when he was closely identified with public affairs in Victoria. He leaves a widow and several children.

About a dozen men had the temerity last night to attend a conversazione which was tendered by the Women's Progressive Association to Miss Muriel Matters and Miss Violet Tillard. THE COMMONWEALTH.

OVERTIME IN PENSIONS OFFICE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In reply to Mr. Edwards (N.S.W.) in the House of Representatives, the Prime Minister stated that officers of the Old-age Pensions Office, Sydney, had been ordered to cope with special work beyond their ordinary duties. The officers had not received overtime since July last. No overtime would be given, but time off, in lieu, would be allowed.

DECIMAL COINAGE SYSTEM.

The Prime Minister told Mr. Edwards in the House of Representatives that he did not think it worth while to hold over orders for Commonwealth token currency below the value of sixpence till Parliament had been consulted as to the adoption of a decimal system of money and currency, and to meet any immediate demands by supplies of British token coins. The decimal system would be fully considered.

FEDERAL CAPITAL.

Mr. Kelly was informed by the Minister for Home Affairs that the Government was prepared to construct permanent buildings at the Federal capital with every expedition, subject to the necessary appropriations.

CIRCULATION OF "HANSARD."

Mr. Catts (N.S.W.) asked the Prime Minister whether he would favourably consider a proposal to supply "Hansard" to the public at 1s per session. Mr. Fisher replied that he had always held that it was a mistaken policy for Parliament to make "Hansard" so expensive. If reducing the price to 1s per session would enable the poorer members of the community to read "Hansard," it would be a valuable innovation.

THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

Mr. M'Williams (Tas.) has given notice in the House of Representatives of his intention to move for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the sugar industry.

LIVE STOCK TRADE.

ROYAL COMMISSION PROMISED.

HOT WORDS AT DEPUTATION.

MR. WADE THREATENED.

A VIGOROUS RESPONSE.

Mr. F. E. Winchcombe, M.L.C. (president of the Chamber of Commerce) introduced a large and influential deputation to the Premier yesterday upon the subject of the Homebush sale yards.

The deputation called upon the Premier to perform a promise made on a previous occasion to refer the whole matter to the Public Works Committee for investigation if the improvements effected by the City Council were not satisfactory.

Mr. Winchcombe said that he knew of no subject upon which the people interested were so unanimous as the utter inadequacy of the present sale yards and the impossibility of improvement, no matter how much might be spent upon them.

Mr. Gunn, M.L.C., held that no improvement in the present site could ever meet the requirements of the trade. The only thing would be to shift the yards bodily to the abattoir area, where there was ample room to deal with stock in every respect.

Mr. B. B. Allen (Pastoralists' Union) read a resolution passed by his union praying for an immediate investigation.

Mr. J. M. Atkinson (Stockowners' Association) refuted a statement said to have been made by the Minister for Works to the effect that the president of the association had said that the yards could not be in a better place than at present.

Mr. Patten (president of the Farmers and Settlers' Association) said that practically to a man throughout New South Wales they were agreed as to the utter inefficiency of the Homebush yards. They had lost faith in the City Council, and would never be satisfied till the yards were placed under Government control. (Cheers.)

Mr. R. Griffiths (Country Stock and Station Agents' Association) said they had not only lost faith in the City Council, but were beginning to lose faith in the Government.

Mr. Wade (sharply): In what respect?

Mr. Griffiths: Inasmuch as for years we have been clamouring for improvements in the railway administration and these yards.

Mr. Wade: You should say Governments to be correct. You don't blame this Government, do you?

Mr. Griffiths agreed that previous Governments were also to blame in the matter. Nevertheless, there was a great revulsion of feeling in regard to the delay in having the matter investigated. He very much regretted to have to say it. There was a feeling of hopeless despair that it was impossible to get these things which were so much required.

Mr. J. P. Martin (Bourke) declared that there was a feeling against the present Government on account of this matter not having been referred to the Public Works Committee. They seemed to think that the Government did not wish to carry the matter through. Perhaps it was a very hard thing to say, but they were thinking of bringing this matter into the next election.

Mr. Wade (emphatically): We must discuss this thing without politics. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Martin: I think I should mention it.

Mr. Wade: It cannot affect me. We will do what we consider to be the right thing, and, if necessary, go down doing it. (Very emphatically.) We will take our chance.

Mr. Martin: All we ask for is a reference to the Public Works Committee. If it is against us the whole thing will end.

Mr. George Maiden was of the opinion that if the two previous speakers had attended the previous deputation they would not have made the remarks they did. (Cheers.) They all felt that they had got a fair deal from Mr. Wade, and his Government. (Cheers.) The agitation was brought about solely by the failure of the City Council to rise to the occasion. Through the City Council the pastoralists had lost hundreds of thousands of pounds. It was now time for the Government to take a hand. (Applause.)

Mr. C. Welsh stated that cattle and sheep were daily maimed and mutilated through being discharged at a railway unloading position having an angle of nearly 45 degrees.

Mr. J. Perry wished to disabuse the mind of Mr. Wade as to any want of confidence in the Government. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wade: Don't worry about that.

The other speakers were Alderman Mackenzie (Mayor of Strathfield), Dr. Hurst, and Mr. Henley, M.L.A.

THE PREMIER'S REPLY.

The Premier, replying, laid it down that the matter must be discussed entirely on its merits. The political aspect would not influence him in the least degree; nor should it influence them. The Government would do what it considered to be the correct thing, irrespective of any consequences. However, the remarks of two of the deputation did not occur to him as offensive; but as due to a spirit of enthusiasm and friendliness. (Hear, hear.) At any rate, he was prepared to take that view. (Hear, hear.) However, he wished to correct the statement that the Government had done nothing in the matter. The congested state of affairs on the railways and in the saleyards was due to the success of the closer settlement policy of the Government. No one could have foreseen the immense increase in trade that had come about during the last three or four years. But the Government had grappled with it as far as possible under the existing railway system by providing a large amount of additional rolling stock and by projecting the duplication of the main lines. A special sum of money would be set aside for this work, and he hoped that it would be a very live question in a few weeks. (Cheers.) The other thing necessary to make their position satisfactory was ready access to the sale yards and facilities for dealing with their stock in a proper way when they were being unloaded. Anything in the way of new yards would cost between £80,000 and £100,000. When the previous deputation waited upon him it was impracticable and premature to make any reference to the Public Works Committee. The House was in recess, and no reference could have been made, and the City Council was about to make certain improvements, the practical results of which could not then be known. For that reason at the time he told them that if they came back again when Parliament was in session, and with actual knowledge of the results of the City Council's efforts, and of their own practical knowledge could say that the state of things was still unsatisfactory, he would be prepared to refer the matter to the Public Works Committee. They came now strengthened by actual experience, whereas their previous statements were hypothetical. He recognised the strength and representative character of the deputation, and was bound to assume that it was there in good faith making representations which it believed to be correct. (Hear, hear.) That being so he felt it incumbent upon him to honour the promise which he made on the previous occasion referred to. (Cheers.) He would have the necessary preliminary steps taken to have the matter referred to the Public Works Committee. There was, however, the possibility that in view of the approaching early termination of the session, the committee would be unable to take up the inquiry and carry it through to an absolute conclusion. The Government had been considering the larger and cognate question of the regulation and control of the meat trade. With the growth of closer settlement and the increase of stock in the country, the opportunity might easily arise to secure a very large export trade. In view of that expectation and the best method of supplying the metropolis, and the requirements of the producers, the Government would be prepared to establish a Royal Commission. He would get into touch with the Public Works Committee, and if it was unlikely to be able to take up the inquiry and carry it through, the Government would appoint a Royal Commission with equal powers, and, if necessary, introduce special legislation early next session to give effect to its recommendations. In the meantime the other details of the abattoir scheme, such as the construction of a bridge over the main road at Flemington, would remain in abeyance. The matter of taking out the troublesome dead-end on the railway, which was causing so much congestion, was a matter that could be, and should be, remedied without delay. (Cheers.)

THE DUNGOG MURDER.

NEWS FROM GERMANY.

The Inspector-General of Police (Mr. T. Garvin) has received information that Gerlach, who is accused of the murder of John Coleman at Dungog some months ago, is in safe custody at Germany. It will be remembered that Gerlach was arrested in Suez, and taken to Germany by the German authorities.

The Inspector-General of Police has received a photograph of Gerlach, which has been identified by the police. The photo was submitted to Mr. Bolson, an hotelkeeper, who went to the Savings Bank in Sydney in company with Gerlach when the latter drew Coleman's money from the bank. Mr. Bolson stated to the police that the photo is that of Gerlach, whom he knew under the name of Coleman. The authorities are waiting for further information from Germany.

LIONS AT LARGE.

SENSATION AT MURRURUNDI.

AN EXCITING HUNT.

SOME NARROW ESCAPES.

MURRURUNDI, Friday.

Wirth's circus played last night to a large house. A great sensation was created during the performance.

After the first three acts, Mons. Marco commenced his performance in an iron ring with three lions, a polar bear, Russian wolves, and a boarhound. Nearing the completion of the act the wolves were run into their cage, the trainer meantime keeping his gate open. An employee was securing the wolves in the end cage, the door through which they had entered being left unfastened. Suddenly, however, one of the lions jumped into the first cage from the ring, and was quickly followed by the two others. The doors of the second cage being unsecured, the lions had a passage right through, and made their escape into the open, followed by the wolves and dog, the polar bear being the only animal retained.

The performance was at once stopped, and although the audience appeared terror-stricken, they coolly retained their seats. All the performers entered the area safely, some climbing the circus poles. The best horses were put in a place of safety. The wolves and dog were easily caught, but the three lions dodged around the tent for a while. One pounced on one of the ponies, nearly killing it. The lions occupied the main streets for some time. Searchlights were brought into use, and after half an hour one lion made his way to the fowlhouse of a private residence near the circus tent. Tarpaulins were secured, and a cage was backed to it, and the lion safely landed in the cage after some trouble. The trainer wanted to enter the outhouse where the lion was, but was dissuaded from doing so by the proprietor.

Attention was then paid to the other two, one eventually being captured near the railway goodshed, where several telephone workmen were camped in tents. The performance, which was continued, ended before the third lion was captured about a quarter of a mile from the circus, in the backyard of a resident of Mayne-street. People feared leaving the tent till the news of the recapture was circulated.

Several narrow escapes were reported. Some people were entering the tent when the lions brushed past them. Only for the closing of doors the lions would have got into houses. Datas, the memory man, just stepped out of his carriage to proceed to the tent to give his performance, when he was confronted by a lion. A horse belonging to a resident, which was in a yard, was frightfully mutilated by one of the lions, and may have to be destroyed.

It is remarkable how the incident passed off without loss of life. It is estimated that nearly 100 people, armed with battens, picks, and stones, pursued the animals.

LONG-RANGE SHOOTING.

GOVERNMENT'S EMBARGO.

STRONG LETTER BY N.R.A.

Since the matter of long-range shooting was mentioned in these columns marksmen throughout the State have been apprehensive as to whether the military authorities would carry out their threat to discontinue the upkeep of rifle ranges beyond 600 yards. Leading riflemen expressed the opinion that such a policy would be undoubtedly a retrograde one. The N.R.A. Council took the matter up, and the secretary (Lieutenant Dakin) has sent a letter to the authorities, in the course of which he states that the effect of the Government's order will be to throw the whole cost of construction and upkeep of rifle ranges beyond 600yds on to the shoulders of the members of rifle clubs or private individuals, with the result that shooting at long distances will be entirely done away with.

The letter continues:—

The association is strongly of the opinion that where the necessary land is available everything that is possible should be done to encourage long-range shooting. In the great majority of places in the Commonwealth land is available. The council, therefore, holds to the opinion that in this matter the department should not be guided altogether by the regulations adopted in European countries, which are greatly congested by population, and to a large extent rifle ranges have to be curtailed on that account. Long experience has proved to the council that the modern weapons in the hands of skilled riflemen are effective at long ranges, and that the practical rifleman who can shoot at long distances is also the better man at medium and short ranges.

Experience has also demonstrated to the association that the most popular form of shooting is at long distances, as our riflemen can now shoot with such great accuracy at all distances up to 600yds that it has been found necessary to use longer ranges to keep the interest alive, and to get the maximum value out of the improved modern weapon.

Members of the council suggested that before the Military Board definitely decided on such action the advice of experts should be taken as to the necessity for long-distance shooting in Australia.

A FETTLER KILLED.

RUN OVER BY THE BRISBANE EXPRESS

Shortly before noon yesterday John Knight, a fettler, was run over by the Brisbane express, near the Epping railway station, and killed.

The deceased prior to the accident had been working with a number of others on the permanent way close to the station. A train made its appearance on the up line, and the men stopped work to allow it to pass by. Knight stepped on to the down line. Hardly had he done so when the Brisbane express, which was running an hour late and trying to make up time, made its appearance. A fellow-workman named Hamilton, realising his comrade's danger, made a plucky attempt to drag his comrade out of harm's way. His effort, however, was unsuccessful. Knight was knocked down by the engine of the express, and drawn under the train. Before the express could be brought to a standstill the whole length of the train had passed over the unfortunate man's body, which was cut to pieces. Deceased, who was middle-aged, lived with his wife and family at Carlingford.

PASTURES BOARD POWERS.

"ABSOLUTELY USELESS INSTITUTION."

APPLICATION FOR DISBANDMENT.

SINGLETON, Friday.

At the conclusion of the agenda at the meeting of the Singleton Pastures Protection Board, the chairman (Mr. J. C. Mayne) said he wished to ask the opinion of the board in regard to taking further action with the Department of Lands to try to get the board killed or put on a better footing. They were that day a new board, and when last they interviewed the Minister they were a board approaching the end of their term. Perhaps another deputation, showing the feeling of the electorate, would be a good thing. They had a favourable reception last time, and if nothing came of the deputation on this occasion, their only course was to keep pegging away to get something done. There was a stock inspector, who was under the direct control of the central board. All they had was the privilege of paying his salary. Personally, he thought it would be much better to have the inspector's salary paid from the consolidated revenue. At any rate, they could tell the department that the stock board in this district—and most other districts as well—was an absolutely useless institution. He was going to ask them as a whole board to go to meet the Minister as a deputation, asking that where stock boards did not consider they were necessary they should be disbanded, and the control handed over to the department. Mr. Drake thought it would be far better if there were no boards in existence, and people did their own clearing. It was moved by the chairman, and seconded by Mr. Hardy, that a deputation consisting of the whole board be appointed to wait on the Minister on a date to be arranged, which was carried unanimously.

ROYAL EXCHANGE SECRETARY.

RESIGNATION OF MR. HAYES.

Mr. Charles H. Hayes, who for 40 years has occupied the position of secretary of the Royal Exchange, has resigned on account of ill-health. He has received from the chairman of directors (Mr. George J. Cohen) a letter, expressing the regret of the board at his resignation, and the high appreciation of the directors of the long and faithful services rendered by Mr. Hayes during his term of office. Mention was made of the fact that when Mr. Hayes was appointed, the affairs of the Exchange were in a very moribund condition, and that the company's present prosperity is largely due to Mr. Hayes' successful management. Mr. Hayes's connection with the many public movements for the benefit of the commercial community, and in respect to the many exhibitions held at the Royal Exchange, was eulogised, and the hope was also expressed that Mr. Hayes would be spared for many years to enjoy a well-earned rest. Mr. B. Millin, who has been acting secretary for some time past, has been appointed secretary.

WONDERS OF "WIRELESS."

CONTROLS TORPEDOES AND AEROPLANES.

YOUNG AUSTRALIAN'S INVENTION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Some remarkable results have been achieved by Mr. A. J. Roberts, a young Australian inventor, in the control and guidance of torpedoes and aeroplanes by means of Hertzian waves. These are, in the language of the layman, electrical discharges, and are a form of "wireless."

Mr. Roberts is at present in England, whither he proceeded last year bearing credentials to the Admiralty from Mr. Deakin. His brother has furnished some account of his doings. Mr. Roberts established himself on a lake at Dagenham, Essex, and, after many delays and mishaps, got his apparatus into working order. About three months ago he had the satisfaction of successfully guiding a torpedo on and under the surface of the water in any direction he desired. "It rammed a moving buoy," said Mr. Roberts yesterday, "dived below the surface of the lake, dashed along the top in figures of eight, and then my brother whistled to it, and it returned to the dock like a well-trained seal."

The system by which these remarkable evolutions are accomplished is simply an application of the principles of wireless telegraphy. "We send messages to the torpedo," said Mr. Roberts, "and the torpedo understands them. The waves are so regulated as to affect different receivers on the torpedo, by means of which various electric switches are affected, and the planes and rudders regulated at the will of the operator. When the torpedo is submerged deeply by the depression of a tail-plane, the communication is temporarily broken."

"Then how do you get her up again if you can't speak to her?"

"That's easy," smiled Mr. Roberts, as he pulled a stop-watch from his pocket. "When she gets round to here" (indicating the racing hand of the watch) "she connects up a switch, which operates the planes, and up comes the torpedo. There is an automatic arrangement which straightens the plane when she reaches the surface. Anyhow, she couldn't fly up in the air, but if the plane were not straightened it would retard her speed. We have marked her course before she dives, and we pick her up again when she comes to the surface."

"Your trials were made in smooth water. What about a rough sea?"

"Yes, that makes it more difficult, but you know that Brennan has fitted his torpedo with gyroscopes to keep her straight. Our idea is to fit the Brennan with our gear and probably attach an aerial wire to receive the messages. That would enable the torpedo to run submerged, and thus preserve the great advantage of invisibility. You can kill a torpedo with quick-firers if she runs on the surface. The depth at which she runs is regulated by an automatic contrivance of air chambers. Of course, that is all Brennan's stuff. We have to do only with the directing. If we should miss our target we can circle her round again and have another shot. We were well satisfied with our trials—there were three official occasions—and we have to make certain improvements in the hull to meet conditions which the trials discovered. We want to fix our gear to an Admiralty torpedo modified to suit it. An aerial wire, for instance, would affect her running in the water, and that, among other things, would have to be met."

"The principle may be extended to navigation?"

"Yes, my brother bought a French dirigible, 105ft in length, 40-horse power, and was able to guide her with the wireless apparatus. He has also sent up a Voisin biplane, and manipulated both rudders and planes by 'wireless.' There was a pilot on board in case any of the delicate mechanism failed, and he also looked to it that the engine kept running. You don't send thousands of pounds' worth up into tricky air currents, and risk too much on a chance. We had a small model plane at Doncaster, which we were controlling in this way. My brother has also applied the gyroscope to the aeroplane for lateral stability by fitting his 50-h.p. Voisin with gyroscopes revolving 6000 times per minute. The problem has been solved, but at the cost of greatly-increased weight and a bigger strain on the driving power of the engine. But all this aeroplane work is in the purely experimental stage. The torpedo control is the finished article, and in that we are practically within sight of our goal."

SYDNEY'S CHILD MOTHERS.

BILL IN THE ASSEMBLY.

PROBABLE GOVERNMENT SUPPORT.

Lady Chelmsford, in addressing the Mothers' Union a few days ago, drew a pathetic picture of the many child mothers in the maternity homes.

Dr. Mackellar, M.L.C., who was interviewed on the subject yesterday, thinks that the note of warning sounded by Lady Chelmsford was justified, and needs serious consideration. It is a matter that the doctor has for years been trying to get the Government to take up. His Girls' Crimes Protection Bill, passed successfully through the Legislative Council, was before the Assembly last session, where it was blocked. This bill made the age of consent 16 years.

"Last Wednesday," said Dr. Mackellar, "I moved a resolution to resuscitate the bill in the Assembly, where it now lies in the care of Colonel Onslow. And I have some reason to believe that during the present session it will obtain the aid of the Government, and be passed into law. Of course, you cannot make people moral by legislation. But the Government can, and should, make men responsible for their immorality."

At present the Infants Protection Act, which Dr. Mackellar was practically responsible for, enables the mother of an illegitimate child to secure substantial financial aid at the expense of the father. But Dr. Mackellar points out how it is sometimes evaded. "I am sorry to say," he said yesterday, "that the father frequently succeeds in inducing the girl mother to get some foster mother to adopt the child. You often see in the advertising columns of the press: 'Wanted, a kind lady to adopt a healthy baby, aged one month.' That advertisement might sometimes with truth be interpreted: 'Wanted, a perfectly unscrupulous woman to take charge of a baby.' The father persuades the mother to place the infant in the hands of the 'kind lady,' giving a few pounds in many instances for such services, which relieves him of all responsibility. This is often followed by disastrous results to the child. A great safeguard here could be effected by providing that a foster-mother taking over one child shall be registered and obtain a license. Thus the proper authorities could keep an eye upon her actions. At present the law does not apply unless a woman undertakes the care of two children."

MARKSMEN'S MUTINY.

SOUTH COAST DEFIANT.

OFFICIALS WARNED.

The revolt from the authority of the N.R.A. on the part of the South Coast riflemen has now reached an acute stage. An enthusiastic meeting was held in Kiama, with Major Honey (president) in the chair, and it was decided to hold a rifle meeting entirely independent of the National Rifle Association, and distribute the £40 received from the authorities in a teams' match. As the local paper viewed the matter, the death knell of the South Coast Rifle Association was sounded, but a splendid funeral was arranged.

As a result of the resolution passed by the N.R.A. council on Wednesday, the executive waited on the State Commandant, Colonel Wallack, and placed the position before him. Then, being sure of their authority, the council wrote to the secretary of the South Coast Association, expressing cognisance of their intention to hold a rifle meeting, and warning the association that rule XI., class C, of the association's rules has not been complied with. This rule provides that the programme and conditions of the district association meetings must be submitted for approval by the N.R.A. council. The N.R.A. secretary was also directed by the council to inform the southern body that no funds belonging to the association were to be used for the proposed rifle meeting. If the injunction of the N.R.A. were ignored, the members of the council would be held personally liable.

That is how the matter stands at present, and it remains to be seen whether the southern men will yield to the authority of the council.

FEDERAL NOTE ISSUE.

TO OPERATE IN THREE MONTHS.

SPECIAL SIGNING OFFICERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is the intention of the Federal Treasurer (Mr. Fisher) to bring his note issue scheme into operation within three months. He stated to-day that the initial issue would be about £4,000,000. This will mean fully 3,500,000 notes; which will all have to be signed. It will be necessary for him to appoint special officers to do the signing.

THE EMPTY NORTH.

AUSTRALIA'S PROBLEM PROVINCE.

DEVELOPING THE TROPICS.

(BY W. M. B.)

II.

RAISING TROPICAL ANIMALS.

European animals do not thrive in the Northern Territory on account of heat and insect pests. Experiments in stock-raising have been made in Arnheim Land, and proved most disastrous. The first pioneers stocked this country with European cattle, but they perished from redwater or other diseases formed from insects. Arafura was stocked with 20,000 cattle. These either perished or made back on to the tableland from whence they came. Had the zebu (Indian Brahmin cattle) been introduced, or the buffalo, a very different tale would have to be told, and instead of proving a failure it would have been a success.

Let us look for one moment at the buffalo. These animals were introduced into Port Essington when the convict settlement was formed in the twenties. Sixty years afterwards a mere handful of beasts had increased to sixty thousand, and buffalo shooting had become an industry. Over 60,000 hides have been exported from the Territory, and there are said to be 25,000 animals now on the mainland and 10,000 on Melville Island. Ticks and insect pests that drive European cattle almost to frenzy have no effect on the thick-skinned buffalo. They are Nature's animals for a tropical country. You cannot go against nature. Had the buffalo been raised industrially instead of shooting them for their hides only, a most profitable industry would now be established. The meat is good. In Manila a buffalo is sold at from £8 to £25, but rinderpest is very prevalent. This disease is unknown in Australia. What is known as the buffalo in Australia is the carabao of the East. These are domesticated animals used for field work, dairying, etc. They are most tractable, and yarded and branded would be just the same as cattle. They have become wild in North Australia.

LESSONS FROM OTHER COUNTRIES.

Wherever Europeans have settled in tropical countries the invariable mistake has been made of introducing European cattle in place of those specially prepared by nature for such climates, or of a suitable cross of the tropical and European species to be determined under skilled management. The differences between the two primeval species from which European cattle were successfully evolved were quite as pronounced as the difference between Eastern and Western species are to-day.

Zebu cattle differ strikingly from European cattle. Their ears are large, and tend to hang down (a protection from flies). They grunt instead of bellow. They possess a constitution which enables them to withstand the trying influences of great heat and prolonged exposure to strong sunlight. This power of resisting heat is doubtless in a great measure due to the fact that the skin is black, and more sebaceous than those of western countries. A distinct relationship between colour of skin and climate extends to all four-footed animals exposed in nature to tropical or semi-tropical solar influences. It is found, in consequence, that underneath all colours of hair the skins of wild animals, such as the giraffe, camel, zebra, rhinoceros, etc., are all black for protective purposes. In India the zebu has been crossed with both shorthorn and Hereford cattle. These crosses are proving most successful.

In parts of Texas, where European cattle cannot live for the same reasons as obtain in the tropical portions of the Northern Territory, five species of zebu cattle have been introduced, namely, the Krishna Valley breed (the fleshiest of all Indian cattle), the Hissar, a north-western breed, used for heavy army traction purposes; the Gujerat, an animal used for field work, and the most docile of all Indian cattle; the Gir, from the Gir forests of Katheawar, Northern Bombay; and the Nallone, a dairying breed from Madras. These have been crossed with Herefords and proved a great success; in fact, it solved the difficulty which has confronted cattlemen for so long for the various purposes of dairying and meat production in regions where European cattle have proved a failure. This country is on a par with Arnheim Land. European cattle have proved a failure, and much capital has been wasted in the endeavour to raise them. During my stay on the Adelaide River I found several zebu bulls amongst Mr. Laurie's small herds of Herefords; the cross is noticeable, but the zebu is dying out. On making inquiries, I found that two bulls and half-a-dozen cows had been taken there about the same time as the buffalo, in the twenties.

The country from the Macarthur River, right along the coast to the Victoria River, is country suitable for raising tropical animals such as those mentioned, besides Timor ponies, the Arab horse, angora goats, and pigs. Mohair-growing should be one of the great industries of tropical Australia. Canning the meat of the buffalo and tanning the hides are another; mangrove, bloodwood, and other indigenous barks are plentiful, making excellent tanning material. Raising zebu cattle for exportation to the East, and dairying; indiarubber and sesil hemp cultivation; the turtle industry, and others—these should turn the north coast into a hive of industry. You cannot raise merino sheep or shorthorn cattle in these tropical areas. The endeavour to do so has proved disastrous.

WHITE ANTS AND TROPICAL RAINS.

There is little doubt existing that the Northern Territory has been overrated as a suitable country for the cultivation of tropical products. It is generally misrepresented, and its probabilities and possibilities from an agricultural point of view are not very encouraging. From that point of view, the coastal areas will be difficult to handle on account of the Australian ideal: long periods without rain; terrific tropical storms during the wet season; and insect pests, especially white ants. These termites are of all sizes, from the tiny emmet to one-half an inch long. Intense cultivation of trees or bushes will always be a difficulty on account of these pests. Even the Chinese are tardy about extensive cultivation owing to them. The hills are gigantic, reaching as high as 20ft, and 20ft round, in districts. You ride through miles and miles of country covered with huge ant beds, all leaning in one direction. The only land where I have seen the same thing is in the Transvaal and Rhodesia, where the Boers have to shepherd the herds with natives; a fence would be impossible unless built of iron. Houses in the Territory have to be raised off the ground, and protected; even then they get inside. The cultivation of rubber trees, cotton bushes, coffee, is doubtful owing to the white ant. A tree appears to be progressing favourably when suddenly it dies. The ants are in the root. Cotton has been sown in several localities, and bushes may be seen growing wild on the shores of Port Darwin, but it is difficult to determine if plantations could be successfully carried on, even if you had the labour necessary for this work. Once, while camped, I left a thick pair of boots at the foot of a tree. In three days nothing was left but the eyes and nails. I have had a canvas upon which I was lying perforated with hundreds of holes while sleeping on the ground. All campers hang saddles and packbags in the trees.

Cocoanut plantation should be a paying industry, so I asked the Chinese why they did not cultivate these trees. "White ant eat 'em" was the invariable reply.

Besides the white ant, there are also borers, grubs, various beetles, and other insects that play havoc with plants, but vegetables and fodder plants can be grown with little difficulty in the wet time of the year. The only place where experiments are carried on by the Government is in the Botanic Gardens. Of course, the plants are watched by a Chinese gardener, and it does not follow that they could be cultivated on a large scale. The Chinese gardens are most primitive, where mangoe and other fruit trees flourish on a small scale. "Why don't you grow rice?" I asked one of these gardeners. "Cheaper buy 'um China" was the reply.

THE WET SEASON.

Another drawback are the heavy tropical rains. The wet season usually sets in in October with light storms, lasting until the end of March. During December, January, and February it is at its zenith. The storms are then terrific. In the afternoon they come up in dense black masses, with wind of the hurricane description. Then the rain pours down in torrents. Four or five inches will fall in a few minutes, and 10 or 12 in a night. The surrounding country is then a running mass of water. The Chinese settlements often become wrecks during these storms, built as they are of grass, bark, and old iron, and frantic celestials may then be seen chasing their goods and chattels for miles. The gardens are destroyed, and maize crops flattened with the earth. When the south-east monsoon sets in, there are practically six months without any rain at all. During this dry period you pay 7s 6d a bushel for maize brought half round the continent from Adelaide. They say maize grown in the Territory is soft, and will not keep. A bale of compressed fodder costs 10s imported from the south. Yet the inhabitants of the North will tell the visitor that "anything will grow."

I shall never forget being camped one night on high ground in a tent. How it did rain to be sure. In the morning I was surrounded by a sea of water, and my horses had disappeared.

During this wet period everything is at a standstill. The creeks run bankers, consequently traffic is congested. The mining shafts fall in, and work practically ceases. It is a period of rest, locally called "putting in the wet." Drovers, travellers, miners pitch camp on high ground, and remain idle for months. The natives come in from their hunting grounds, and camp in old batteries or other buildings. It is an extraordinary period, this putting in the wet. I travelled a good deal on horseback during this time of the year amongst the mining camps. Every place was the same. The white man and his dusky consort had laid in provisions for a four months' rest. The Chinese, however, fossick in the gullies for gold and stream tin. Over 60 inches of rain falls during these few months.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

"SYSTEM REEKING WITH DISHONESTY."

Yesterday a deputation initiated by the Voting Reform League waited upon the Premier and asked for reform in the present voting system to ensure candidates being elected by a majority of the people. Mr. Fell, M.L.A., who introduced the deputation, said that it was supported by the Women's Branch of the Reform League, the Women's Liberal League, and the friendly societies. He advocated some system of preferential or contingency voting such as they had in Tasmania.

Mr. D. Storey, M.L.A., denounced political leagues, both Liberal and Labour, as excrescences. Under the present system Parliament was not what people made it, but what they had the chance of making it.

Mr. Broughton declared that the present system reeked with political dishonesty.

The other speakers were Colonel Onslow, M.L.A., Mr. Lonsdale, M.L.A., Alderman Pratten (Mayor of Ashfield), J. R. Frith (Council of the Liberal Association), Alderman G. T. Clarke, Robinson (secretary Voting Reform League), and Alderman Magney (Woollahra).

The Premier, replying, said that the matter was not new, either to the Government or the Liberal and Reform Association. The question of obtaining the full voice of the people was made a plank of the Liberals at their conference last year. The difficulty was to devise a scheme that would be effective and also meet with support outside. A scheme that might be successful in a small place like Tasmania could not be successfully applied in a large place like New South Wales, with its scattered population. There was a difficulty also with regard to the preferential vote. To give effect in public life to the policy of any party, Liberal or Labour, there must be party organisation. If party organisation were destroyed there would be a wild go-as-you-please among candidates before the election, and in the House afterwards. If they wanted to secure the good results aimed at there must be true party organisation. The question was not free from difficulty and it was not plain-sailing. While trying to find a remedy they must maintain party government.

Mr. Storey: Will you do something before the session closes?

The Premier: The Government is considering certain papers which aim at arriving at some scheme which will meet the difficulty.

THREATENED FREIGHT WAR.

OVERSEA MAIL STEAMERS.

THE N.D.L. REDUCED RATES.

A CONFIRMATORY CABLE.

Messrs. Lohmann and Company received a cable yesterday, confirming the cabled news that the North German-Lloyd Company contemplated making important reductions in rates.

Herr Philip Heineken, the chairman of directors of the company, who is at present in Sydney, says there is nothing to prevent undercutting in the agreement between the shipping companies. His company, however, did not want to adopt this policy beyond limits that were fair. All it wanted was treatment similar to that extended to it in the North Atlantic trade. There should be the same differentiation in rates between Europe and Australia as was allowed between Europe and America. There the steamers were classed and were allowed by the common agreement to charge different rates according to the speed and comfort of the different vessels engaged in the trade.

The rates to apply on and after October next will be, for all steamers, including the Scharnhorst and those sailing after her, the following:—First-class, single £66; return £99. Second-class, single, £38 10s; return, £57 15s. Third-class so far has not been subjected to any alteration. These fares represent a reduction of £15 on the first-class single, and £24 on the return. In the second-class the reduction is £5 on the single fare, and £12 on the return approximately.

The Grosser Kurfurst (13,200 tons), the largest steamer that has traded to Australia, will sail on March 25, from Sydney to Europe, this being the popular season for passengers to Europe.

"VERY FRIENDLY RELATIONS."

Mr. A. Gordon Wesche, Acting-Superintendent in Australia for the P. and O. Company, said yesterday:—"I feel sure that the very friendly relations existing between the P. and O. Company and the North German-Lloyd Company will bring some way out of the present difficulty other than the war of rates indicated in the press cable. I have not received any official advices on the matter. This is a question which, as I have previously said, is one entirely for settlement by the board of directors in London."

ORIENT COMPANY'S POSITION.

Mr. David Anderson, general manager in Australia for the Orient line, expressed himself as being hopeful that this rates question would yet be amicably settled between the companies. How this would be brought about would, however, be a matter for determination by the directors in London. The Orient Company had to observe the conditions of its mail contract. This meant that a certain speed had to be maintained in order to effect deliveries within the prescribed time. The boats also provided much insulated space, which was very necessary for the development of the Australian trade.

THE ANTARCTIC.

PROFESSOR DAVID'S STORY.

SOME HAIRBREADTH ESCAPES.

Last night, in the great hall of the University, Professor David told the first part of the story of the experiences of the Shackleton expedition in the Antarctic. He threw most of the story on to the screen. It is only beginning to be realised how extremely improbable it was at various times during these adventures that the expedition would ever return. Here, for example, are some of Professor David's remarks:—

In the seas, after leaving New Zealand, we were in imminent danger of foundering. The water gained on us at the rate of two or three feet an hour sometimes. It looked so black and cold—one could not help wishing that if we were going to drown we should have some comfortable warm water to drown in.

In saying good-bye to us the Koonya nearly collided with us. She was, I suppose, within one yard of our stern—going very fast.

In our climb up Mount Erebus (13,000ft) one of our party fainted just as we reached the crater; but he very soon recovered. A blizzard came on, and for 30 hours we were lying on bare rock and snow in our sleeping-bags. Adams and Brocklehurst left their bags, got driven down a gully, and were very nearly frozen. Brocklehurst was laid up for three months in the hut after that, and it seemed as if both his legs might have to be amputated; but he got off with the loss of one big toe.

On March 10, 1908, quite unexpectedly we reached the actual summit of Erebus, and found ourselves on the edge of an enormous chasm 9000ft deep. From below from time to time there came terrific explosions of steam, which shook the whole mountain, and sulphur gas came up, which was very suffocating.

That point Professor David made the end of his first lecture.

POLICE REPORT ON PICTURE SHOWS.

Altogether there are about 1500 halls and houses of entertainment in the State. Since the passing of the Theatres and Public Halls Act the open-air picture show has come into being, and apart from the permanent halls and other places where the moving pictures are shown, there are now some 80 temporary structures in and about Sydney, which have been licensed during the last 12 months. The total of these for the whole State is something like 100.

Recently a question was raised as to the morality of the pictures shown, whereupon the Chief Secretary directed that a careful general report be furnished on the subject. In forwarding the reports of his divisional officers, the Inspector-General of Police intimated that, generally speaking, it appeared that there was nothing in the pictures exhibited throughout the city and suburbs to which exception could be taken.

MR. WADE AT HORNSBY.

GOVERNMENT'S CLAIM TO SUPPORT

The Premier spoke at Hornsby in the School of Arts last night to an audience which was thoroughly in sympathy with the Government. In reviewing the Government's work he said he only wished to deal with one or two salient features, and to reply to one or two misrepresentations which were being used against the Government.

The audience was in sympathy with him when he asked them to view with mistrust the man who had no better claim to their suffrages than a policy of slander and misrepresentation of facts. Those who fell back on those methods surely could not have a very strong political programme to submit for their consideration. It was merely electioneering claptrap, but there were always some people to whom that sort of thing appealed, and in whose minds it had some weight, unless the true facts were placed before them. (Hear, hear.) Any Government that attempted in these broad democratic days to injure any one section of the community could not stand; but although the methods of one party might vary from those of another, it was only a fair thing to give their opponents credit for an honest attempt to do the best for the country.

Going on to deal with the position the worker occupied in New South Wales, Mr. Wade said that Germany was often pointed out as a nation that provided for the welfare of the working man by a system of insurance against sickness and accident. They had that in New South Wales, with the one great difference that whereas in Germany the employer and employee had to find the funds, in New South Wales organisations formed for that object were liberally subsidised by the Government. He also pointed out that New South Wales was the only State in the Commonwealth that had made provision for the decrepit and infirm by a system of invalid pensions. During the next week or two, also, he hoped to see placed upon the statute books a law providing for compensation for a workman injured in the course of his employment. In regard to the system of workmen's compensation he said it was only fair that the employer should treat injuries to his employees as part of the wear and tear of his establishment, and should bear, to some extent, the burden of compensation for the injury sustained. The workman who was injured was to be given relief in the same manner as that given by the Compensation Act in England and in some of the other Australian States. It was not to be regarded as a full remedy. A man who was injured could resort to the Courts and recover full damages as far as a jury thought fit if he could prove negligence. In serious accidents the employer would have to bear the burden, even though they might not prove against him any personal neglect. The bill will also, he thought, prove of great benefit to railway men, who met with unfortunate and preventable accidents perhaps more frequently than any other class of workers.

The Premier again told the story of the strike and the measures taken by the Government to protect the people. Reference was also made to the charges brought against the Government of destroying trial by jury, and the audience showed its approval when Mr. Wade justified all that had been done, and explained the part taken in framing the provisions of the Act by the Labour party.

TRAVELLING STOCK ROUTES.

CONTROLLING BODY TO BE APPOINTED.

The Minister for Lands yesterday received a deputation representing the council of advice of the Pastures Protection Boards, the Stockowners' Association, the Shires' Association, the Homebush selling agents, and the Farmers and Settlers' Association, which laid before him a resolution passed at the recent shires' conference, that it was desirable that camping reserves and watering places not under lease should be handed over to the control of the pastures protection boards. A resolution passed at a conference at Inverell was also presented, which held that all travelling stock routes, watering places, and camping reserves should be controlled in the same way.

The Minister intimated that in order to have the matter thoroughly gone into it was intended to have the travelling stock reserves reviewed by competent boards, which would deal with the subject as expeditiously as possible. The boards would be composed of men fairly representative of the interests involved, and everybody concerned would have an opportunity of coming forward and making representations. When this work was completed it was intended to place the reserves under control of a body which would have a recognised standing, and in which those interested could have confidence, and which would have a say in anything that was done. He said that hundreds of applications had from time to time been brought before him for curtailment or lease. He had always endeavoured to study the interests of travelling stock to the fullest extent. He considered that it was a good thing to put them under some tenure, some form of tenure or control, otherwise they would simply become loafing grounds for stock, and breeding grounds for noxious weeds and vermin. When dealing with applications for revocation or lease he gave the most careful consideration, and where there was conflict he referred it to a local land board to adopt every reasonable means for seeing that all interests were fairly dealt with.

SHIRE INTERESTS.

CONSULTATION WITH THE MINISTER.

Yesterday the president of the Shires Association (Mr. R. J. Higgins), together with a deputation, laid before the Minister for Lands (Mr. Moore) a number of matters which were dealt with at the recent shires conference.

Among the subjects put before the Minister was the request that the words "plying for hire" might be more clearly defined in regard to licensing vehicles. This the Minister said would be done in the ordinance. The regulation of the width of tyres was embodied in the draft of a bill which would be before Parliament during the present session.

It was asked that there should be greater facilities for admission of local government engineers. The Minister declined to reduce the qualifications, but he said he would give further consideration to the suggestions of the councils. In reference to the cadet engineers' suggestion, he expressed himself very much in favour of it, and said that he was considering how the ordinances could be arranged to allow of its being brought into effect.

In regard to borrowing for other than temporary uses, he did not consider that the time was ripe for the proposal.

A request was put forward that the approaches to bridges within high-water mark should be maintained as national works, instead of by the shires. This the Government has done as a matter of grace, but the Minister said he would consider the advisability of putting it in the bill.

Ferries over rivers which are boundaries between two States, municipalities, or shires, the deputation urged should be maintained by the respective Governments of such States, shires, or municipalities, as national works. The Minister said that if the other States would do their part, New South Wales would do its share.

The control of traction engines would be covered by the Width of Tyres Bill.

The Minister promised to consult the Chief Secretary, with a view to giving effect to control and licensing by shires of sheepskin, hides, and dead-wool dealers. In reference to the time limit in connection with claims for damages for injuries, he said he would approve of notice being given within a reasonable time. As to what would be considered reasonable time, he would consult the Crown Law officers. He also promised to consult the Treasurer in respect to a request that the stamp duty on shire contracts should be reduced to 1s, with a view to having it carried out. If that could not be done it would be put on a pro rata basis.

The Minister agreed with a proposal in respect to works on roads before dedication, where the owners and the councils have agreed in writing to the proposed deviation, and the proper plans have been prepared, and application to the Lands Department made.

Mr. Moore also expressed himself in favour of Mr. Higgins' scheme for putting country hospitals under control of the shires, and promised to submit the matter to the Cabinet.

NEWSBOYS' CLUB.

CAPITAL SITE.

STATE'S UNFAIR TREATMENT.

DENUNCIATION BY MR. WADE.

The Premier, speaking at Hornsby last night, delivered a severe criticism of the Fisher Government over its action in connection with the payment of the State's share of Commonwealth revenue and the delay on the capital site question.

He said he wished, as far as possible, to avoid saying anything that would lead to trouble or strained relations between the Commonwealth and the States, but he must enter a protest on behalf of the States at the unfair treatment being meted out by the Federal Government, which had an overwhelming power for the time being. Unless the States received that fair and reasonable treatment for which they were entitled to ask, they would be forced to impose further taxation to meet their growing requirements. They agreed last year that they would make sacrifices and take less money in the future; they even helped to launch a scheme of old age pensions on the understanding that the bargain made would be permanent, and that they would not be disturbed every few years. Now, however, that Mr. Fisher was in power and could command a large majority, he appeared to hold that he could break that bargain and make any law he thought fit.

"My remarks have been received with cold scorn," continued Mr. Wade. "All I asked for was a fair thing. We were content to make sacrifices. I asked Mr. Fisher to be kind enough and generous enough to discuss the question. The scornful answer came back, 'No! we are in power; we are almighty. You hear our terms. Take them or leave them.' But they are on their trial," said Mr. Wade warmly, "and, bear in mind, they are the embodiment of the power of Labour at the present time. They can rest assured of this: If they are going to show any high-handed action in the Commonwealth Parliament against the States or against those fighting for the just rights of the States a day of reckoning will come. (Hear, hear.) The public will say to these men who represent the power of Labour 'there is no room for you in New South Wales.' (Loud applause.)

"Now there is one more test to show the tendency to unfair treatment of the States, and of New South Wales in particular," continued Mr. Wade. "That is the trouble between the New South Wales Government and the various Commonwealth Ministries over this unfortunate Federal capital question. Power was being wielded and strings were being pulled in Melbourne to retain the capital there for all time, and to induce the Government to be untrue to the Constitution. It was only after enormous trouble and the exercise of untold forbearance that we were able to arrive at an agreement satisfactory to all parties. The Act was eventually passed and the seal of the Commonwealth placed upon the documents which declared that the capital should be near Yass. There was only one formality to be gone through, that of proclamation of the site as Federal territory. Unfortunately, Mr. Deakin delayed the proclamation until after the Federal election, and then he went out of office. Mr. Fisher has had nearly three months now to complete the solemn bargain entered into. He only has to issue this simple proclamation, and the bargain is sealed for ever. Unless he does that the whole of the work of the past is so much waste time, so much waste paper; and whilst that proclamation remains unissued it is open to Victoria, to Melbourne, to all malcontents, to those hostile even in New South Wales, to pull the strings and reopen the whole question, leaving the capital for all intents and purposes in Melbourne for years and years to come."

THE ASYLUM TRAGEDY.

WOMAN'S ROMANTIC HISTORY.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

Mrs. Webster, one of the victims of the poisoning tragedy, is a sister of Lionel Terry, who shot a Chinaman in Wellington some time ago, under remarkable circumstances. She is said to have been a woman with a curious romantic history. Beautiful and highly accomplished, she became infatuated with an officer of the British army, and followed him to South Africa during the Boer war.

It was there she met Captain Jones, and his wife. A casual acquaintance ripened into friendship; and on the termination of the war all three determined to settle in New Zealand. They took up residence at Omaha, where Jones started a vineyard. Mrs. Webster had three children, aged six years, three years, and one year. As to Mr. Webster nothing seems to be known. Jones on one occasion, accounting for the interest he took in her, stated that her husband had deserted her, and since died.

She was of a bright, vivacious disposition, and manifested no signs of mental aberration until about the end of last year, when she read the novel "Kigs in Clover," some incidents in which bore so remarkable a resemblance to those in her own life that her mind became unhinged, and she was committed to an asylum. Her madness, however, was quite harmless; and she was among the brightest and cheeriest patients. A few minutes before her death she was noticed by a doctor of the asylum talking and laughing with Jones in her usual buoyant spirits. On Sunday last Jones had an interview with the doctor, and asked for his candid opinion of the prospects of her recovery, and was told there was little or no hope.

Jones then seems to have determined on their double deaths. Whether he induced her to take the poison in ignorance or whether she knew what she was doing will probably never be known; but a letter addressed to his wife shows that he intended to commit suicide, and another to the asylum doctor that he meant that Mrs. Webster was also to die. When his body was searched a loaded revolver was found on him, also a razor.

Y.W.C.A.

£20,000 TO BE RAISED.

Members of the Young Women's Christian Association were called together last night to take counsel with one another concerning a project for the raising of £20,000 to provide accommodation for the rapidly growing needs of the association. Lady Renwick, who presided over the gathering, expressed great pleasure at seeing so large an attendance. For six months past almost daily consideration had been given to a plan of campaign for raising the fund, and the work of preparation had now been so far advanced that within a fortnight the campaign would be actually opened, and an appeal made to the generous impulses of those in sympathy with the institution. They wanted to bring under the notice of the public the nature of the work the Y.W.C.A. was doing, and the fact that the present building was now quite unequal to requirements. If this were done she had no doubt there would be a generous response to the appeal made.

Miss Meager, the general secretary, said the plan of campaign provided for the appointment of five captains, each with a staff of lieutenants and a fixed number of rank and file. Each of these five sections would meet together as often as was found desirable, and do their part in carrying the movement to a successful issue. They would need to exercise great tact, to be enthusiastic, and not to be cast down by reason of any disappointment that might await them. It was God's work they were taking in hand, and that was a privilege alike for them and for those to whom they appealed. The campaign would be opened a fortnight hence by a demonstration in the Town Hall. The programme would be of a varied nature, and one of its principal feature would be a spectacular procession, representing women in other lands. Every care would be taken to guard against overlapping in the collection of subscriptions. A list was being prepared of some 7000 or 8000 persons, whom it was intended to approach, and a record would be kept of each person called upon, so as to guard against the same person being asked by more than one member for a subscription.

Short addresses were given by the five captains—Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Smyth, Mrs. M'Lelland, Miss Mullins, and Miss Beale. These were of a cheery nature, and indicated considerable enthusiasm.

In connection with the forward movement which the Young Women's Christian Association is inaugurating this month, two very successful drawing-room meetings have been held during the week, one at Ginahgulla, the residence of Lady Fairfax, the other at Stanmore by invitation of Mrs. T. H. Nesbitt.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE DOLORES CONCERTS.

At her fourth song-recital to-night at the Town Hall, where Mdlle. Antonia Dolores has renewed all her former popularity, the star soprano will sing two songs by Scarlatti, Queen Marie Antoinette's "C'est mon Ami," "I know that my Redeemer Liveth," two songs by Schumann, "Ah, fors e lui," Blumenthal's "My Secret" and "Serenade," Goring Thomas's "Winds in the Trees," and Mattei's "No-no-no." Mr. John Prouse will also include some favourite numbers, namely, "Thou'rt Passing Hence," "My Brother" (Sullivan), Alfred Hill's "My Fairest Child," and, by request, Alicia Needham's spirited Irish ballad "Queen of Connemara."

Mr. H. N. Southwell, in response to innumerable requests, more particularly from ladies, has arranged for a matinee on Wednesday next, the plan for which opens at Paling's to-day.

THE "BRASS BOTTLE" COMPANY.

Mr. Claud Vernon arrived here yesterday from London, by the Orsova, under engagement to J. C. Williamson to "produce" Anstey's farcical comedy "The Brass Bottle" at Her Majesty's Theatre on Saturday, July 23. The newcomer was stage-manager in London during the recent eight-months' run of the piece under Gaston Mayer at the Vaudeville Theatre, and before sailing began to rehearse the newly-organised company in their parts. Mr. Vernon is a young actor, who has played parts with Lewis Waller and other well-known artists during his eight years' career on the stage, more than half of which has been devoted to stage management. In this connection he was at the Court Theatre for quite a time, including the period of the run of the Maugham's comedy "Lady Frederick."

As regards the forthcoming production of "The Brass Bottle," the new company will be headed by Mr. Leslie Holland, a well-known London Gaiety comedian; Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, a character actor identified with Shakespeare and the higher drama; Mr. Evelyn Vernon, a light character comedian, who will appear as the genie; Mr. Herbert Greville, a farce comedian of experience; Mr. Arthur Scames, a juvenile actor known in comic opera; Miss Dora Rignold, who made successes in Shakespearian comedy here five or six years ago; Miss Augusta Haviland, who plays matronly parts, and has appeared much in London comedy productions; and Miss Sinna St. Clair, a character comedienne, who has played both in drama and pantomime at Drury Lane. All these artists will arrive by the Mongolia next week.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The J. C. Williamson New Comic Opera Company will this evening produce at Her Majesty's Theatre the new American musical farce, "A Knight for a Day," with novel spectacular effects, ballets, and dashing songs.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Miss Nellie Stewart will make her reappearance at the Theatre Royal to-night, when J. M. Barrie's last comedy "What Every Woman Knows," will be produced for the first time here. From the days of his first play, "The Little Minister," this author has always aroused interest and discussion, and to-night's performance will present a novel element in the fact that Miss Stewart's new character (Maggie Wylie) is different from anything in which she has been seen hitherto.

CRITERION THEATRE.

Mr. Matheson Lang and Miss Hutin Britton, in view of engagements before them in England, will not be able to play a return season here, and in this way they open this evening their last ten nights in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Jerome's strange play has "caught on" with the public, and is certain to run out the season to large audiences, crowded houses being the rule. Upwards of 3000 postcard replies to Rupert Clarke and Meynell's offer of £2 2s as a prize for the best answers to questions relating to this piece have now been received, and the task of adjudicating will be a difficult one. Should a number of the competitors prove equal the prize will be awarded by drawing a postcard at hazard from the "equal" category.

"THE ARCADIANS."

"The Arcadians," a fantastic musical play, will be produced for the first time at the Criterion Theatre on Saturday, July 23. The company, newly-organised by Clarke and Meynell, will introduce Miss Maie Sydney, Messrs. Tom Walls, Charles Stone, Arthur Edwards, Percy Clifton, Misses Lait, Cavanagh, Lena Denton, Forsyth, Gilliam and Callcott, together with such favourite artists as Miss Essie Perrin, Messrs. Harold Thorley, and Wm. Cromwell. Advance booking applications by letter only will be received until next Saturday, and the ordinary plan will open at Elvy's on Monday, July 18.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

At the Tivoli Theatre this afternoon and evening, Mr. Harry Rickards' new programme will introduce (after a long absence) Liane de Lyle, and M. Brunin, from the music halls of England and the Continent, in their clever and amusing "Scene in a Billiard Room." Two new artists by the Orsova, Pip Powell and Kate Vesey, will be seen in comedy duologues; and the Dardinis (comedy juggling), Lieut. Frank Travis, and Miss Marjorie Dean, Charlene and Charlene, Miss Lily Langtry (last nights), and Billy Williams (last nights) are included in the long list.

NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE.

At the National Amphitheatre where the usual matinee will be given to-day, Nat Clifford continues as a popular star feature. Bonita, Child of the Plains, and Cleopatra with her snakes, are making their farewell appearances, and three new artists, J. M. West, in unique specialities, Joe Charles, an "uncontrollable comedian," and Pearle Smaile, a dainty serio, are in the bill, as well as new pictures by the Elorama. Wills and Hassan, noted equilibrists, will arrive from America for next Saturday's matinee.

THE HAMILTON-MAXWELL CO.

The Allan Hamilton and Max Maxwell Dramatic Company will open at the Palace Theatre for a long season, commencing September 10. The opening production will be "Woman's Revenge," one of the most popular dramas in Bland Holt's repertoire.

AMERICAN DRAMA "LOVERS' LANE."

A new theatrical firm, consisting of Messrs. Harry Plimmer, Reynolds Denniston, and Allan Hamilton, has been formed for an Australasian tour with Clyde Fitch's successful drama "Lovers' Lane," and other pieces. Mr. Plimmer secured "Lovers' Lane" as the result of his recent visit to the United States, where the piece was everywhere popular. The new firm will start operations in September at Auckland, and come on here later.

LYCEUM—SPENCER'S THEATRESCOPE.

At the Lyceum, where Mr. Chas. Spencer gives daily matinees, the new star film is "Thou Shalt Not," a lesson in self-sacrifice that is beautifully illustrated. "The Treasure Hunters" is an exciting story. "Courting the Merry Widow" and "An Interrupted Honeymoon" are new, and "An Escape from Andersonville," "Girl and Fugitive," and "This Year's English Derby" are all included. "The King's Funeral" is retained.

PALACE THEATRE WEST'S PICTURES.

There will be the regular matinee to-day and on Wednesday at the Palace Theatre, but on other days Mr. T. J. West's popular "In and Out" shows will be continued. The new star films will comprise "Victims of Fate," "Hunting in France" (exclusive), the comic episodes of "Milk Diet" and "The Interrupted Honeymoon," and "Double Dealing." "The King's Funeral" will be continued. Mr. L. De Groen's Vice-Regal Orchestra will play.

THE BIOGRAPH AND DAILY LIFE.

The latest publication of this decade is "West's Picture Journal of Daily Events." The management notifies that "what the morning papers give you for a literary breakfast, West's Pictures will illustrate for your amusement supper." In other words, daily events as they are recorded will be presented upon the sheet as a living picture.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY.

The Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society will give their next concert at the Town Hall on Wednesday, July 20, when Herr Slapoffski will conduct Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2 in D," to which some reference is made in our "Music and Drama" column. Wagner's "Faust Overture" and Jarnefelt's "Praeludium" will be "first performances," and the "Oberon" overture and "Peer Gynt" suite will be rendered. Besides singing "Ritorna Vincitor," Mme. Slapoffski will join with Miss Muriel Barton in the duet from "Lohengrin." The Wagnerian scena should prove of exceptional interest. The plan will open at Paling's as notified.

ST. CECILIA CHOIR CONCERT.

The programme for the concert of the St. Cecilia Choir of ladies' voices, to be given in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Monday, July 11, is of special interest. It includes "The Captive Soul" cantata by E. M. Woolley, and a varied second part. Well-known singers include Miss Thelma Hanlon, Miss Kathleen Morven, and Mr. Maurice Chenoweth; and Miss Rose Seaton, Miss Grace Hall, and Mr. Gladstone Bell will assist. Mr. Hector Fleming will conduct. The plan is at Paling's.

MISS MATTERS' LANTERN LECTURES.

On Monday evening Miss Muriel Matters, a well-known suffragette leader, will deliver a lecture at King's Hall, Phillip-street, upon "The Women's Movement in England." Miss Matters will make a second appearance on Friday next, when her subject will be "Within the Walls of Holloway."

MR. WALTER BENTLEY'S LECTURE.

Mr. Walter Bentley will give an address on "Burns" in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on the 21st of the present month, when, interspersed throughout the address, Miss Bessie Fraser, Miss Winnie Fraser, Mr. Hindmarsh Jamieson, and other artists will sing the songs of the great Scottish poet. The recital will be under the patronage of the Highland Society of New South Wales, at Falmouth-chambers, Pitt-street, where tickets may be obtained. Mr. James Muir will act as chairman, and Mr. J. E. Sykes as accompanist. The plan is at Paling's.

The new cast will include Miss Winifred Birch as San Toy, Miss Nita Rattray as Dudley, Miss Holly Elvy as Poppy, Mr. Fred. Goldney as Bobbie, Mr. Frank Outred as Yen How, and Mr. Bevan Harris as Li. Mr. Aug. W. Juncker will conduct. The plan will open at Paling's on July 12.

Invitations may be obtained from Nicholson's music warehouse, where seats can be booked.

MRS. PERRINS' PUPILS' RECITAL.

BESSES O' TH' BARN BAND.

The announcement Messrs. J. and N. Tait make in to-day's issue that the celebrated "Besses o' th' Barn Band" will open their season at the Town Hall on July, after some three years' absence, should be received with satisfaction. The band contains a number of new faces, principally in the soloists—for instance, the cornet players are, if anything, better, whilst the solo euphonium player, Mr. E. P. Kerry, is especially remarkable. Plan arrangements will be duly notified.

COMMONWEALTH EISTEDDFOD.

The entries for the Grand Commonwealth Eisteddfod, to be held in the Town Hall and Y.M.C.A. Hall from August 13 to September 10 next, are well up to last year's record, and it is expected, before the closing day (Wednesday next, 13th inst), that the number of competitors will total very much larger than 1909. Several of the gold medals and all the challenge cups, donated by many of the Sydney business firms, are now on view, and Messrs. W. H. Paling and Co. will be showing these prizes in their window for a week dating from to-day. The names of all the adjudicators will be announced next week. The interstate ice hockey contest, Victoria v New South Wales, will take place about the end of this month, and preparations are in hand for the annual fancy-dress carnival, which is fixed for August 11, or thereabouts. MR. HENLEY CHALLENGED.

ROYAL COMMISSION ASKED FOR.

A vigorous reply was given to the statements of Mr. T. Henley, M.L.A., in Parliament recently respecting the settlement of trade disputes by union secretaries outside the Arbitration Court, and other matters, at the Burwood School of Arts, last night, by Mr. T. Tytherleigh, the Labour candidate, who is opposing Mr. Henley in the Burwood electorate, and by other prominent Labour men. Alderman R. Shute (Mayor) presided, and said that in view of recent happenings, interest in the candidates for election had been increased.

Mr. T. Tytherleigh said that whatever he had to say about Mr. Henley would not be under the shelter of Parliamentary privilege. Mr. Henley had publicly stated that he was opposed to the jury system, and any man who would make that statement was unworthy of support. Mr. Henley's attitude respecting the Gas Company was another instance of political dodgery. Mr. Henley knew perfectly well that all he could say or do would not affect the company in the least. The electors could contrast Mr. Henley's attitude in that respect with that he displayed when the operations of the brick combine were under review. Then it appeared that the combine was regarded by Mr. Henley as a blessing.

Mr. Dooley, M.L.A., commended the straightforwardness of Mr. Tytherleigh to the electors, and said he was ashamed to have to meet the representative of Burwood in Parliament. Parliamentary privilege under which Mr. Henley had attacked union secretaries was meant to apply to statements made in heat about fellow-members of Parliament. If ever there had been an atrocious breach of Parliamentary privilege it was Mr. Henley's recent attack on union secretaries. He challenged Mr. Henley, if he was man enough, to utter his charges of blackmail outside Parliament without any shuffling. Everything done by union secretaries in settling cases had been on advice of Mr. Justice Cohen and Judge Heydon. He challenged the Government to appoint a Royal Commission of inquiry.

FERRY MISHAP.

When the ferry boat Carabella was about completing her last trip from Sydney on Thursday night she bumped into the newly-constructed concrete wall at the Lavender Bay wharf. Strange to say, the wood stood the test better than the concrete. The boat was practically undamaged; but the concrete yesterday presented a sorry spectacle. Twenty inches thick though it was, the wall could be seen in a wrecked condition. The cost of repairing it might run into three figures.

COAL-LUMPERS' STRIKE.

MEN DOWN TOOLS.

PERTH, Friday.

A strike occurred this morning amongst lumpers at Fremantle, resulting in 72 men throwing down their shovels. The men had been engaged in unloading the Norwegian steamer Sverre, which has been chartered by the Adelaide S.S. Company for six months to bring coal from Newcastle. Immediately it was chartered by the company the Australian rates of wages was paid to members of her company. The lumpers, however, entertained the belief that as she was a foreign vessel, foreign rates of pay were in force upon her, and yesterday showed signs of refusal to work her cargo. When work was resumed this morning some of the ship's men manned the winches, and in a body the lumpers dropped their tools. A hurried meeting of the Lumpers' Union was held, and the executive pointed out to the strikers the error of their ways, but the men refused to resume work. The conference of employers and lumpers' delegates, which was in progress regarding the redrafting of the industrial agreement, has now been abandoned for the time being.

HAT FOUND FLOATING.

ITS OWNER MISSING.

The discovery of a hard black hat floating in Blackwattle Bay is believed likely to clear up the mystery of the disappearance of Sydney E. Nelson, a young man, who has been missing from his home in Cardigan-street, Glebe, since last Saturday. Nelson had been of melancholy disposition for some time, and about 11 p.m. he left the house with the remark that his people would never see him again. Hitherto they have [illegible]. The next day the hat was found, but it was only yesterday, when the finder of the hat happened to be informed that it was the one worn by Nelson (of whose disappearance he had been unaware), that any special significance was attached to the discovery.

FINANCIAL.

GROWING TAXATION.

When the Federal land tax is imposed there will be still another sharp increase in the burden of taxation per head borne by the people of the Commonwealth. Taking the taxes imposed by the Federal and State Governments, and by the local bodies, the taxation in each State of the Commonwealth may be compared with that in the United Kingdom as follows:—

	Total Amount of Taxation.	Rate per Head of Population.
Victoria	£5,018,709	£3 18 10
New South Wales	6,355,583	3 19 5
Queensland	2,472,446	4 8 7
South Australia	1,295,786	3 18 8
Western Australia	1,488,984	5 7 4
Tasmania	709,447	3 16 4
Total	£17,603,882	£4 1 11
United Kingdom	£201,557,000	£4 10 6

The above figures exclude wharfage rates and harbour dues. So, it appears that the total taxation for Australia is £17,603,882, or an average of £4 1s 11d per head per annum. The lowest rate, £3 16s 4d per head, prevails in Tasmania; South Australia and Victoria are next, the former with £3 18s 8d, and the latter with £3 18s 10d; then follow New South Wales, Queensland, and Western Australia, with £3 19s 5d, £4 8s 7d, and £5 7s 4d per head respectively. In the United Kingdom the taxation is 8s 7d per head above that in Australia, and is higher than in any of the Australian States except Western Australia.

AUSTRALASIAN SALES.

The table hereunder gives full particulars of sales of wool in the various States of the Commonwealth and in New Zealand during the past 12 months, as compiled by Dalgety and Co., Ltd., in their "Annual Review" of the wool trade. The total amounts to no less than 1,889,745 bales, as against 1,657,906 bales in the previous season—an increase of 231,839 bales. The quantity sold in Australasia for the year under review easily constitutes a record. The 1908-9 figures were previously the highest. The figures of sales for the past three wool years are as under:—

	1909-10. Bales.	1908-9. Bales.	1907-8. Bales.
Sydney	818,330	745,889	599,003
Melbourne	361,837	295,973	294,404
Geelong	104,177	101,772	98,218
Adelaide	138,585	134,701	119,113
Brisbane	180,589	146,973	88,316
Tasmania	19,704	21,852	19,118
Fremantle	1,389	1,037	—
Commonwealth	1,624,561	1,449,917	1,218,772
New Zealand	265,184	207,989	132,349
Australasia	1,889,745	1,657,906	1,351,121

An increase of 231,839 bales for 1909-10 as compared with 1908-9.

THE OUTLOOK.

Regarding the prospects for the coming season, the "Review" says:—

Though there is plenty of evidence, statistical and otherwise, in favour of a continuance of values somewhere about present prices, we cannot help thinking that towards the commencement of the regular selling season values will be established on a somewhat lower plane, and as there is less disparity at present in the cost of fine and strong wool than for many years, it seems reasonable to expect that crossbreds will be more likely to decline than merinos. In this respect, however, fashion, at all times a fickle jade, may upset calculations. To conclude, unless something unforeseen happens, there should be no violent fluctuation in wool prices for some considerable time ahead, and everything points to another large clip from Australasia returning producers good remuneration for their year's labours.

BANK ABSTRACT.

LONDON FINANCIAL CABLE NEWS.

The Bank of England return, now that the half-year is well entered upon, has once more resumed its normal appearance. The reserves have diminished somewhat, but not nearly to the same extent as the liabilities. The bank's stock of gold is nearly one million sterling lower than it was a week ago. The money markets are easier, this being especially the case in connection with call loans which are down to 1 5-8 per cent. In both Paris and Berlin lower rates are quoted. Consols have eased 2/6, most Government stocks, including New South Wales securities, being unchanged. Where alterations were recorded they were not particularly important.

It has been decided that members of the chamber should be circularised asking for particulars of anomalies in the Federal tariff, with a view of the chamber forwarding same to the Minister for consideration, with a view to rectification.

The bicentenary of the Sun Fire Office was recently celebrated.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

TURPS AND WOOLPACKS DEARER.

The wheat market has advanced in sympathy with London, and prices yesterday ranged up to 3/7, while flour was selling steadily. The market was firm for woolpacks, and there was a strong inquiry, business being reported at 2/4. It is expected that nothing will be offering from Calcutta for some weeks to come, and these will be late for the present season. With the known shortage in imports, combined with the fact that there was no carry-over from last season, it is expected that prices will rise to 2/6. Cornsacks were quiet, and Calcutta was reported easier, so that the quotation for country delivery does not exceed 4/9½.

Australian sultanas and currants were in good demand, and the supplies hardly covered the inquiry. Most distributing houses raised the price of one-crown to 5½d; two crown to /6. One sale of 10 tons in one line was reported of two-crown sultanas at /5¾. All descriptions of evaporated fruits were selling freely, apples, peaches, and apricots being taken at full current quotations. Prunes are quoted at from /5½ to /7½. The various lines of fish are quiet, and stocks are low. If anything like an ordinary demand arose prices would certainly go higher. In salmon the stocks are still very bare, and the outlook is uncertain until the result of the present season's catch is ascertained. The price of jams has not risen, although the market was inclined to harden owing to the recent rise in sugar to manufacturers. The shortage in Gold Medal milk has been relieved by the arrival of a vessel with a consignment on board.

There was a sudden rise in the local market of /1½ per gallon for Pratt's turps. It originated at manufacturers' end, and during the day sales were effected at up to 4/3½ for that brand, while second brands rose in sympathy. In metals the market was quiet.

W. C. DOUGLASS, 53-5 Liverpool-street, Sydney, holds large stocks of everything appertaining to the Grocery Trade. Special Wholesale Agent for "A.B.C." Tea, "Breakfast D-light," "Bovril," "Bird's Custard Powders," Daum's Extract of Coffee, Courtney's Sauds, Bubla Cocoa, Rainree Tobacco.—Advt.

The average price of fine silver during the month was a fraction over 2/2¼ per oz.

BREADSTUFFS.

WHEAT FIRMER.

The wheat market was firm yesterday, owing to London cables reporting a rise of 3d per quarter there. Cargoes on passage were reported as having realised up to 33/9. Locally millers were operating quietly, but several thousand bags were placed with them at 3/7, while shippers were offering from 3/5¾ to 3/6 in parcels, without, however, much business resulting.

Flour was still in demand at the convention prices of £8/15/ and £8/12/6 per ton, and there appears to be no prospect, seeing the tone of the wheat market, of its price lowering.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 735 tons of wheat and 112 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

TEA.

Business in tea was practically confined to the auction sale; very little was offering on spot. The prices realised showed a firm market. On Tuesday next Mr. Claud J. Gant will offer, on behalf of Messrs. Claude Healy and Co., a large catalogue of 1115 packages of Ceylon teas, and in anticipation of this many buyers are holding off. The steamer Itonus, which has been eagerly looked for, is due here on the 14th, and brings a quantity of the "shut out" teas from previous boats.

Messrs. H. W. Carey and Co. submitted, under instructions from Messrs. Parbury, Henty, and Co., 409 packages new season's Foochow teas, and 260 packages Ceylon tea; also, on account, of Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co., 630 packages Ceylon tea. They report having quitted the whole of the Chinas and all but a few lots of the Ceylons at prices showing a firm market, Panyong Congous realised up to /8¼ per lb, and Saleoune Congous /6¼ to /6¾ per lb; Ceylon broken pekoes and broken orange pekoes, up to /10½ per lb. Competition was well sustained throughout the sale.

Bar silver is quoted to-day 2/0 13-16 per oz standard.

WHEAT.

July 8, 1.50 a.m.

The wheat markets are firm, and shipments are small, but buyers are indisposed to take distant cargoes owing to the nearness of the harvest in the northern hemisphere.

VISIBLE AMERICAN WHEAT.

The American visible supplies of wheat and flour east of the Rocky Mountains are estimated by "Bradstreets" at the equivalent of 23,981,000 bushels, as compared with 26,623,000 bushels on June 29, and 18,680,000 bushels a year ago.

On the Chicago market September options are quoted at 100½ cents.

The wheat cargoes by the following vessels have been sold:—

Carrodale, 4-masted barque, from Western Australia April 14, bound to the Channel, for orders, 37,957 bags at 33/9 per quarter of 480lb.

Cambuskenneth, ship, from South Australia March 5, bound to Falmouth for orders, 36,208 bags at 33/9 per quarter of 480lb.

Caspian, steamer, from South Australia April 2, for U.K. or Continent, 59,325 bags at 33/7½ per quarter of 480lb.

BRADFORD TOPS.

The market for Bradford tops is unchanged, awaiting the opening of the London sales on Tuesday next.

BUTTER.

Butter is quiet, and Australian brands are neglected, though quotations are unchanged. There is a fair demand for Siberian at 98/ to 100/ per cwt.

CHEESE.

New Zealand white cheese is quoted at 56/ to 57/, and coloured at 54/ (last week coloured New Zealand cheese sold at 54/ per cwt.).

LONDON BUTTER MARKET.

Dalgety and Co., Limited, have received a cable from their London office, advising that the price of finest Danish butter is 115/ per cwt; finest New Zealand, 108/ per cwt; finest Australian, salted and unsalted, 104/ to 106/ per cwt. The imports of butter into the United Kingdom last week were 13,000cwt less than for the corresponding week last year. The cheese market in London is dull. Imported white is quoted at 56/ per cwt, coloured 54/ per cwt.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

There was a firmer tone in the wheat market to-day. Farmers' lots were firm at 3/3 to 3/3½, while 3/5 would be paid for parcels. Flour and offal were dull at late rates. Butter was unaltered. Supplies are increasing. Tops brought /11 to /12. Eggs eased to /12.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Wheat was firmer, about 1200 bags being sold at 3/7 ex store, with further inquiries and not much offering. Flour was quiet at £8. Bran sold at £4/10/, and pollard at £4/5/, with better demand. Algerian oats were quiet, but steady. Milling sold at 2/1½ to 2/2½; feed 1/11 to 2/1. Maize was weak, with heavy supplies. Prime flat red sold at 2/4½. Chaff was dull. Oaten sold at 45/ to 57/6; wheaten, 55/ to 67/6. Potatoes were fairly steady generally, but Reds were in some instances easier. Ballarat Reds sold at £5/10/, occasionally to £6; Neerim Reds £5/5/ to £5/10/, Pinkeye £5 nominal, Snowflake 87/6 to 90/; Carmen £4/15/ to £5. Onions were slightly firmer. Prime sold at 60/.

About 300 packages Ceylon tea were sold. Tapioca on spot has been in good demand. Good business was done in Mildura sultanas, partly for export. 300 boxes Smyrna sultanas were sold for export. Cornsacks sold at 4/10½ to 4/11 on spot, 4/8 to 4/9 forward delivery. Branbags sold up to 3/4½. Woolpacks sold at 2/4 on spot. Fencing wire was selling rather freely. Linseed oil was firm, with light stocks, and in good demand.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

TRADE IN SUSSEX-STREET.

POTATOES AND ONIONS EASY.

There was very little activity. The potato market was easier in tone. At rail the price dropped 10/ per ton, which made a fall of £2 on the week. Choice redskins realised 6/7 to 6/9 per cwt. This state of affairs was reflected in the "street." Prices on the wharfs were decidedly easier than when they were first fixed. A report states: "Local growers are rushing the market, with the result that prices have dropped. The arrivals coming forward by rail are altogether too heavy for present consumption, and unless farmers regulate supplies better our market must collapse. There are still five months in which to unload the local crop, and if deliveries are spread prices must be maintained."

The Clarence River steamer brought along about 500 bags of maize, but there was no quotable change in the markets. The business was very small with this commodity. At auction choice oaten rack hay from the western districts realised £4/15/, being an increase of 5/ on the last sale. For Melbourne oaten hay on the wharfs £4 was being asked. The difference in quality was attributed to the margin in price. Chaff had a fair clearance. About 200 bags of onions arrived by the Cooma from Melbourne, and these sold at the same rates as the previous shipment, although a certain weakness was in evidence. Hunter River lucerne was quiet.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

EGGS SELLING WELL. CHEESE WEAK. BACON FIRM. BUTTER UNSTEADY.

The Richmond River steamer brought 12 cases of eggs, and the Clarence River steamer 92 cases. This made a light week-end supply, and on this account better values were realised. Nearly all of them sold at [illegible], but occasionally 1/3 was paid. Taking the quantities together that have come to hand during the week, they have shown an increase on those for the previous week. Heavier supplies are expected to arrive, and for this reason most agents were very loth that the market should advance. It seemed likely that one or two agents would ease their prices of cheese next week, as it was moving so slowly. Bacon had a good market. The agent who had a good grocery connection for butter did not complain of the market, but the others found a very bad state of affairs. They could not sell to the West, because Melbourne under-quoted. They had no outlet for supplies at all. Victorian western district butter was increasing, and the market had an easiness at 121/.

AUCTION SALES.

REDFERN RAILWAY MARKET.

CHAFF AND LUCERNE HAY EASIER.

MARKET GENERALLY DULL.

Fifty truckloads of general farm produce were offered to a small attendance of buyers at auction, and throughout the sale spirited competition was absent. Chaff was in light supply, and quality fair, but nevertheless a drop of 5/ per ton on the previous day's rates was in evidence at the conclusion. Choice wheaten commanded 4/6, prime from 3/10 to 4/, while oaten showed a weakening at from 3/ to 3/10. Lucerne hay was practically unsaleable, and only one consignment of seven sold, and this at 2/9 for medium small bales. Lucerne chaff was unobtainable. Oaten hay sold [illegible]. Derrick straw passed at 2/6 to 2/9. Medium [illegible] wheat found buyers at 2/11½. Pumpkins disposed of at from 37/ to 40/ per ton, while [illegible] were unsaleable. Swede turnips commanded 3/4. Potatoes showed a drop of about 5/ per ton, owing to heavy supplies of late arriving. Choice redskins found the market at from 6/3 to 6/9, prime 5/6 to 6/, while whiteskins went off at 5/6 to 6/, prime 4/10 to 5/.

The sale was composed of chaff 14 trucks, lucerne hay 7, lucerne chaff 1, oaten hay 1, derrick straw 1, wheat 2, pumpkins 3, turnips 2, potatoes 18.

FRUIT MARKETS.

QUIET BUSINESS.

Business centred around the new Tasmanian apple shipment of 15,000 cases. The demand for them was fair. The supply of scarlets from now on is expected to fall off, and will be replaced by Sturmers. They were not favoured.

MINING.

MARKET RECOVERS A LITTLE.

The weak trend of the market was not only arrested yesterday morning, but an improved demand set in, especially for silver shares, with the result that values recovered a little. This improvement, however, did not extend to the copper section, though it was noticeable that in most cases sellers quoted in a more confident tone than usual. Whilst the business recorded in gold shares disclosed fluctuating values in some cases, taken on the whole the tone of the market for gold scrip was fairly satisfactory. Though nothing much was doing in tin shares Tongkah Harbour commanded firm support, whilst holders of other stocks were not disposed to mark down prices.

Seeing that there has been no change for the better in the London metal market, and that mining developments are in no way concerned in the matter, the question naturally arises as to the cause of the sudden change in the tone of the market. The opinion expressed in some quarters is that the bears have not only covered up their "short" transactions, but having bought "long," are now turning in ground and becoming bulls. There was nothing in the state of the London Stock Exchange to account for the local recovery of values, for a broker's cable message received in the morning showed no recovering movement in Thursday's quotations.

That silver shares were in better odour is shown by the fact that in the sales recorded British Broken Hill (old) recovered from 16/3 to 16/9; and B. H. Souths, contributing, from 85/ to 86/6, and that North Broken Hill sold at 73/6 and 74/, the best buyer the previous day being 73/. It is true that B. H. South Blocks eased /1, but a sale at 17/6 was followed by unsupplied buyers at that figure. Sulphide Corporation, ordinary, also remained stationary at 17/6, with further buyers at that rate. Moreover, buyers of B. H. Souths, paid, sprung 1/ on the previous sale, but were unsupplied; the same being the case with B. H. Junction North and B. H. Junctions, both of which commended improved offers without drawing sellers.

Business in copper shares was confined to a firm sale of Tolwong Mineral at 15/, and a time transaction in Great Fitzroys, though the price did not indicate strength. In the higher-priced stocks, such as Mount Morgans, Wallaroo and Moonta, and Kyloe Copper, holders quoted firmly, the same being the case with Munganas and Queen Bee, but Chillagoe, contg., weakened on the previous sale. Though values fluctuated a little, solid business was recorded in Main Ridge Deep Lead, Main Ridge Outcrop, Occidental (Cobar), and East Mexican, contributing, but the paid shares of the latter eased. The fact that the lode of the Cosmopolitan is looking well caused advanced offers for the scrip. In Western Australian gold stocks inquiries were made for Black Range, Black Range West, Great Boulder Proprietary, and Sandstone Development. In the tin section Tongkah Harbour Tin was in favour, and a sale was booked at an advance, with buyers still unsupplied.

During the afternoon, though business was slack in silver shares, nevertheless the improved tone of the market in the morning was well maintained, with steady sales booked in Broken Hill Junction North, Broken Hill Junctions, and Sulphide Corporation. Copper scrip was rather quiet, whilst in gold shares steady support was again accorded to Main Ridge Deep Lead and Main Ridge Outcrop. In the tin section Tongkah Harbour finished up strong, with advanced sales.

The New Prince of Wales Company (Bendigo) yesterday declared a dividend of /6 per share.

The Cassilis Company (Victoria) has completed a plant which is estimated to treat all the slimes from the battery, as well as 800 tons per month from an accumulated dump of 22,000 tons. These are estimated to be worth 22/ per ton, and the manager calculates on a profit of 12/ per ton.

During the week ended July 6 the mill of the B.H. Block 10 Company treated 2286 tons of ore, and produced 345 tons of concentrates, worth 31.4oz silver, 57.1 per cent. lead, and 9.5 per cent. zinc.

Working 407 hours last month, the mill of the Harden Gold Mine crushed 791 tons, yielding bullion to the value of £352/10/. There were cyanided 620 tons of sand, for bullion to the value of £192. At the same time there were sold 37 tons of concentrates, realising net £1291/2/5. The revenue amounted to £1835/12/5, and the expenditure to £1569/1/9.

For the fortnight ended June 24 the Mungana (Chillagoe) Company despatched 1302 tons of ore to the smelters. The stope at the 420ft level of the Lady Jane section is opening out well in copper. The intermediate stope in the Girofla section is looking well at all points, and is yielding a considerable tonnage of high-grade copper ore. The diamond drill has located a body of sulphide ore north of the shaft.

At the Kulamadau mine (Woodlark Island) the face of the No. 4 south level shows 5ft of fair quality ore, whilst the stopes over the same level carry a lode 7ft to 16ft wide, the greater part of which is of fair quality. Two stopes over No. 4 north level show 3ft of fair-quality ore, and three stopes south of this point show 3½ft of good-quality ore. The leading stope over No. 3 north level carries 4ft of medium-quality ore; No. 2 stope 3½ft of good ore. The lode at this point is improving in quality as the stopes rise on it. The driving of the No. 3 south level has been started, and has been driven 4ft to date. The quartz hauled for three weeks totalled 650 tons.

The official report of the operations of the B.H. Junction North Company for the past fortnight is as follows:—"A rise from the 7/22 stope being put up to No. 6 level for ventilation purposes will hole through in a few days' time. The ore passed through is rich. At No. 13 level rising at 13/20 is being started towards the 11/20 winze. Production from the levels was:—From No. 9 level, 66 tons, average assay 16.2 per cent. lead, 11.3oz silver, and 8.6 per cent. zinc; from No. 10 level, 930 tons, average assay 14.4 per cent. lead, 10.4oz silver, and 8.8 per cent. zinc; from No. 11 level, 1894 tons, average assay 14.9 per cent. lead, 10.4oz silver, and 9 per cent. zinc. SHIRE COUNCILS.

LOCKHART.—The council's appeal for contributions towards a fund for boring for water resulted in £30 being subscribed, and, after considerable discussion, it was decided to take the money required for the experiment out of the general funds. The manager of Brookong station notified the council that his company had already spent nearly £2600 on boring experiments without success. On the motion of Cr. W. Day, seconded by Cr. Guest, it was decided to give hearty support to the Wagga-Humula Railway League in its efforts to secure the proposed railway through Humula to Tumberumba. It was considered that the Humula route would be of immense advantage to stockowners in the Lockhart Shire area in times of drought.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Metropolitan sporting folk have this afternoon the choice of horse-racing at Moorefield and pony and galloway racing at Ascot; the V.R.C. Grand National Steeplechase meeting will be brought to a close at Flemington; Albion Park will be the sporting resort for Brisbane sportsmen, and Western Australians assemble at Helena Vale.

The July meeting of the Moorefield Racing Club this afternoon provides an outing for lovers of horse-racing, and the customary service of special and ordinary trains to Kogarah will convey visitors to a picturesque racecourse overlooking Botany Bay. The entries indicate large fields, and good racing may be anticipated. The sport commences at 2.5 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which the places may be occupied by Golden Brown, South Head, and Treat; Orepan, Claydon Common, and Baal Gammon may get home in the order named in the Stewards' Mile; while Mullengeen, Jibe, and Well Done may divide the honours in the Trial Stakes. Blast, Hymeneal, and Bonnie Mura should have the settlement of the Nursery Handicap among them, and they may command the attention of the judge as named. The Moorefield Handicap promises a good race among Brackenburg, Lunoc, Fortunate, and Simonides, and the numbers may be hoisted for Lunoc, Fortunate, and Simonides, while Simola, Classic, and Blazing Star may fill the situation in the Flying Welter.

The programme drafted by the Canterbury Park Race Club for its July meeting demands the attention of owners and trainers on Monday next, for at 4 p.m. entries close with the secretary, Mr. W. L. Davis. The half-dozen event carry £500 prize money, of which £100 endows the Canterbury Handicap, and £80 each of the other events, which include a hurdle race and a nursery handicap.

Patrons of pony and galloway racing will be catered for by the Ascot Racing Club this afternoon. Special trams to the racecourse gates and the ordinary service to Botany will provide the means of transit. The first race is timed to start at 2 p.m.

The scratchings recorded yesterday in connection with the Moorefield July Meeting are Schelle out of the Stewards' Mile, and Kiaki out of the Flying Welter.

Applications for the position of secretary to the Australian Jockey Club must be lodged before 4 p.m. on Monday.

The New South Wales Trotting Club has provided £175 prize-money for its meeting on Saturday next at Epping. Entries will be received by the secretary, Mr. R. C. Hungerford, for the five events on the card up to 9 p.m. on Monday next.

VICTORIAN SPORTING NOTES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Glenemmie, who is returning to the country, has been scratched for the V.A.T.C. Murrumbidgee Handicap.

Black Tom has been taken out of the Australian Steeplechase, and Lord Foote out of the Caulfield Cup and Toorak Handicap.

VICTORIA RACING CLUB.

G.N. STEEPLECHASE MEETING.

THIRD DAY.

The V.R.C. Grand National Steeplechase will be brought to a conclusion at Flemington this afternoon. The big cross-country events are the feature of the card. The times of starting the different events are:—Lawn Handicap, 1.0; Doutta Galla Hurdle Race, 1.45; Grand National Steeplechase, 2.45; Footscray Steeplechase, 3.25; Trial Handicap Hurdle Race, 4.0; and July Handicap, 4.35 p.m.

The Lawn Handicap promises to attract a large field, and the most likely to fight out the battle are Lord Dudley, Socialist, Barm, Eyeglass, and Bostra, and the numbers may go up for Lord Dudley, Bostra, and Socialist.

An interesting contest is promised for the Doutta Galla Hurdle Race, in which the most prominent part should be played by Grenfell, The Reckoning, Obi, and Rogue's March, and The Reckoning, Rogue's March, and Obi may pass the post in that order.

Great interest is centred in the Grand National Steeplechase, in which a number of good cross-country performers are engaged. Rippon, who heads the list, is fully entitled to his position, and may be trusted to run well. Confederate and Nigel are not attractive, but Grafnax, with the handy impost of 11st 12lb on his back, must be very hard to beat, while with 2lb less to carry the South Australian Workmaster must have a good look-in. Harvest should give a good account of himself, and so should Kororoit and Generality; while Lycaon and Riverbank seem the best of the lightweights. The most likely to fight out the finish are Ripon, Grafnax, Workmaster, Harvest, and Kororoit, and the judge may declare for Grafnax, Workmaster, and Kororoit.

Alcium, Pilot, Obelisk, and King Darius should have most to say towards the end of the Footscray Steeplechase, and Pilot, Alcium, and Obelisk may occupy the situations.

The issue for the Trial Handicap Hurdle Race should be fought out among Brownie, Northport, Grateful, and Majestic Peur, and Grateful, Northport, and Brownie may divide the honours.

The reunion will be brought to a close with the July Handicap, in which Son of a Gun, Edenholme, Verenice, and Snowfoot appear to have the best prospects; while Son of a Gun, Snowfoot, and Edenholme may get home as named.

The programme is appended:—

The committee of the Suburban and Country Golf Association has arranged an attractive programme for the annual country week. It will open this year with an amateur bogey handicap of 18 holes on the Kensington links on Friday, 29th inst., and the event will be open to all members of the Australian Golf Club, Royal Sydney Golf Club, and the various suburban and country clubs affiliated with the association. There will be four trophies, one being for the best net score by a country player, and the other three open to all competitors.

On Saturday, July 30, the country districts' premiership will be decided on the Manly links. Teams are entering from the northern, southern, and western districts. Two teams will play in the morning, and the team drawing the bye will play a team of association delegates. In the afternoon the team which drew the morning bye will play the winners of the other match, while the losers will be opposed by the delegates.

The country championship (36 holes stroke), the principal event of the meeting, will be decided at Manly on Monday, August 1. It is open to members of the country clubs affiliated, and will carry the trophy presented by the president, Mr. W. A. Windeyer. ENGLISH AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

Latest files bring particulars of the English amateur championship, which, as we were informed by cable message, was won by John Ball, jun., who in the final defeated C. Aylmer.

The championship was played on the course of the Royal Liverpool Club at Hoylake, and was commenced in mild weather.

The surprise of the first day's play was the defeat of the holder of the championship, R. Maxwell, by H. M. Cairns, two up and one. The latter was the winner of the Irish native championship, and twice runner-up in Irish open, and at one time he held a high reputation as a gentleman jockey in Ireland.

On the second day, in the third round, Captain Hutchison, who was runner-up last year, was beaten by Douglas Currie unexpectedly. The former was one of the warmest favourites for the championship. He was beaten 4 up and 3.

In the fourth round H. H. Hilton had a close call with H. G. Hutchinson; he won 1 up; and also by a similar margin in the fifth round over F. C. Carr. John Graham, jun., played capital golf against H. D. Gillies, who was defeated 6 up and 5 in the fifth round. The winner was in phenomenal form; he went out in 33. John Ball, in the fourth round, defeated J. R. Pease 2 and 1, and in the fifth F. W. H. Weaver 1 up. Aylmer had an exciting match with Dr. Scroggie, the former winning at the nineteenth hole, though in the fifth round he beat C. E. Dick rather comfortably.

John Graham, jun., went out in the sixth round, being beaten by H. H. Hilton, 7 up and 6, which created a good deal of surprise, but nothing like that which was caused by Hilton's downfall in the semi-final at the hands of Aylmer, whose putting was unique. The match is thus described:—Everybody was raving about Aylmer's putting after they had seen him defeat Hilton. Not once in this match did Aylmer fail to give his ball a chance. He won the first hole by holing a 5ft putt after Hilton had missed a little longer distance. Hilton holed out from off the edge of the third green about 16 yards, and then Aylmer inhumanely holed his ball from eight yards, and gained a half. Aylmer was eight yards from the pin on the seventh green, with his tee shot, and his ball hit the back of the hole, and remained on the lip, Hilton getting another good putt down for a half. The latter next topped his drive into a bunker, and Aylmer took the lead on the ninth.

Aylmer missed a three-yards putt, the only reasonable putt that he did not get down. Hilton lost the tenth through getting caught in a pot bunker near the green, and the next where he failed to clear the "Alps" with his tee shot. Hilton should have won the twelfth, but he made a sorry effort on the green. With Aylmer's ball lying dead in two at the "Rushes," Hilton holed a ten-yard putt to win, and was then two down, but his opponent got down a twelve-foot putt for four at the next, which he won, and finished the match by winning the fifteenth in four, again holing from a distance of nine feet. The crowd cheered madly, though the majority would rather have seen Hilton victorious. Aylmer's consistency has confuted any idea that his phenomenal putting was fluky. It was the finest exhibition of putting that has ever been given in such a crucial and important match.

John Ball won his right to compete in the semi-final at the nineteenth hole, where he defeated Robert Harris. In the semi-final Ball beat A. Mitchell 5 up and 4, and for the ninth time became one of the finalists in the amateur championship.

Particulars of the final are not to hand, but it is known by cable message that John Ball, jun., won the amateur championship for the seventh time. He beat C. Aylmer Sidmouth, 10 up and 9 to play.

It is the northern against the southern hemisphere at Rugby League football.

The two Maoris chosen, Asher and Papakura, while being native New Zealanders, represent the pick of the Dominion over the Tasman Sea whether white or coloured. Queensland's contribution is Brackenrigg, and the balance of the Australasian side are New South Welshmen.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE DAVIS CUP.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

A meeting of the New Zealand Tennis Association was held last night, and lasted for six hours. Keen interest was taken in the want of confidence motion by the Canterbury Association, which has expressed dissatisfaction with the decision of the association to play the Davis Cup in Wellington. Canterbury's no confidence motion received no support from other branches. The recommendation to hold the meeting in Wellington was carried by two to one. Correspondence was read, in which Wilding advised Christchurch as the site for the contest, saying he would leave no stone unturned to get to the contest. It was stated that the letter was marked private, but the delegate who received it said there was no news after the letter to bear out the statement that Wilding would not play in the Davis Cup contest unless it was held at Christchurch.

MISS BAKER'S CASE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Ford's further letter appearing in your to-day's issue does not throw any further light on the subject, and as indicated in my last letter the public surely must feel very weary of the matter.

Seeing that no further charges were made by Mr. Ford than the bare fact of Miss Baker's non-appearance in the team, I fail to see what more was expected of the council than what it did. Surely he did not expect us to read his thoughts and anticipate his desires? I would remind him that newspaper correspondence is no official evidence, and also that the council is not judge, prosecutor, and defendant at the one time. If Mr. Ford has any further charges to make, let him make them to the association, when the council, I feel sure, will consent to act in the firstnamed capacity, and he would be given the opportunity of showing his ability as prosecutor.

Mr. Ford accuses me of a desire to discontinue further investigations into the matter. Up to the present I have studiously refrained (out of respect for Miss Baker's feelings) from going into more details than were necessary, but now that I am challenged I shall, in order to assist the public in its conclusions, reluctantly go further into the matter. I would like to point out forthwith that I hold a letter from Miss Baker (the only one received by me from her on the subject), addressed to me, stating that she would not be able to attend the practices, as she was "very busy," notwithstanding which I understand Miss Baker practised privately on the same ground on other than those days set apart for the ladies to practise. I leave this to the public to judge whether this does not show deliberate intention on the part of Miss Baker to flout the selection committee.

Mr. Ford boasts of Miss Baker's refusal on other occasions to practise with the selected ladies. I again leave the public to judge whether, in acting contrary to the desires of the selectors, she is to be commended. Surely she is not so far in advance of the other ladies as to be allowed to act differently from them? Miss Baker's performances in the recent championship tournament immediately following the interstate match, when, owing, I understand, to physical inability to withstand the necessary strain, she had to retire from her contests, clearly shows that the selectors were justified in requiring to see her play, and not selecting her on her reputation. In the correspondence reference is made to the self-sacrifice of Miss Baker in the past. I am sure the council is grateful to her for the services rendered in the matches mentioned, but Mr. Ford carefully avoids mentioning what occurred in November, 1908, when the New South Wales ladies played their initial interstate match against Victoria. On this occasion we desired to be represented by the best possible team, and on Miss Baker being approached to play she refused, alleging that her health was not satisfactory. However, she competed in the tournament immediately following the match, and thus showed to what extent her unselfishness and patriotism to the State could be gauged.

In conclusion, I must express regret that Mr. Ford has forced me to bring forward matter, which I had endeavoured previously to avoid, and an apology is due to the public for my being obliged to continue this doleful subject.

I am, etc.,

Sydney, July 8. THOS. H. HICKS.

ROWING.

R. Hopping and S. A. Kemp will scull in pleasure skiffs for £30 a side this afternoon on the Parramatta River. The course is from the gasworks to Searle's monument. Mr. R. Coombs is stakeholder, Mr. W. Beach referee, and Mr. A. Dawson judge. A steamer will follow the race, leaving Point Macquarie jetties at 3 p.m., and will call at Abbotsford on the way up the river.

ANGLING.

ROD-FISHERS BUSY.

Men who possess 18 to 20 feet rods, and know where the winter blackbream school close to the rocky shores of the coast and in the lower parts of the estuaries are reaping a harvest. Their greatest difficulty is fresh bait. Prawns are preferred to any other bait, but the crustaceans get into deeper water than usual in the cold weather, and are difficult to catch. Long-handled landing-nets are utilised in long rod-fishing from the shore. The sport lately has been of a most exciting character. Messrs. R. J. Geddes and H. J. Ackland caught 18 large ones on Wednesday at the Hawkesbury. Others have done well on the sea-coast.

At the last meeting of the Rod-fishers' Society, Dr. A. J. Brady presided. A letter from the Fisheries' Board thanking the society for its gift of Loch Leven trout ova was received. It was decided to ask the Piscatorial Council, as representing all the angling societies of the State, to take up the matter of a progressive State policy in connection with the inland fisheries.

It has been decided by the Rod Fishers' Society, with the cordial co-operation of the Tourist Department, to hold an exhibition of lantern views of inland fishing streams, which members of kindred societies will be invited to attend. Last year's exhibition of a similar character was very popular.

Mr. E. L. Ramsay continues to catch large jewfish from his wharf at Daley's Point, Blackwall (Brisbane Water). His best fish lately have been two twenty-pounders.

The last outing of the A.F.A. at the Hawkesbury, under the captaincy of Mr. J. Balson, resulted in a win for Mr. R. Yeldham, whose handicap was 25 per cent. behind scratch. Mr. F. E. Gardner berleyed and fished a spot and left it. Mr. Yeldham came on to it and reaped the benefit of the other man's berley by catching several fine bream on the rod. He won Mr. R. E. Eastway's guinea trophy. Messrs. A. Fraser and T. Mitchell secured minor prizes, given by Messrs. Geddes and Eastway.

Visitors to Tuggerah Lake have found blackbream biting at night, but not in the day time. Outside the lake, in the adjacent ocean, where there are reefs and bomboras, plenty of red fish are about. A south-easterly roll interfered with the sport last week, and early this week, but last Tuesday Messrs. D. L. Aitken, G. Hollingdale, and R. Dennis managed to get a good day three miles off Chinaman's Beach, and caught a satisfactory lot of red fish. Some of their tackle was unable to cope with two of the fish, which took hold, but they secured several squire up to about four or five pounds' weight, and one black rockcod.

Last Wednesday the Leichhardt, Petersham, and District A.F.A. held a successful social, attended by about 150 people, in the Dispensary Hall, Leichhardt.

The Royal Albert Fishing Club held its last outing in the vicinity of Lion Island, Broken Bay, the catch running to 236 fish. Mr. F. Saunders, hon. secretary, reports that the club is making headway, and a competition for a £3 3s trophy is being carried on. At the Lion Island outing Mr. Veness got a leg-in with a schnapper weighing 7¾lb, and Messrs. Freeman and Griffin were close up with fish of 7½lb weight.

Cliff fishermen are catching plenty of mixed fish. Black fish, cockatoo fish, carp, drummer, groper, sea perch, and black bream are biting freely, and the best results are being obtained with the rod.

Practice with the fly rod is being engaged in by many novices, many of whom, for lack of expert guidance, are simply developing wrong action and style. Observation of the work of experts, such as Dr. H. L. Maitland, H. K. Anderson, C. H. Gorrick, H. J. Ackland, H. Joseland, F. L. J. Tompson, and Dr. A. J. Brady, can be made nearly every Saturday on Centennial Park. If the beginner has a good casting rod and reel and tackle his practice will be made pleasurable.

Trout culture is now being pursued at Prospect, but the establishment of other hatcheries throughout the country has not yet been accomplished. It has to be remembered by those who belittle the value of hatcheries that trout were brought here first in ova form, and that many tableland rivers are well stocked.

Catches.—Mr. T. Tracey, on the rocks near Manly, caught a nice lot of mixed fish. Mr. H. Cohen, at Bondi, caught several species of fish, including a large sea perch. Mr. Henderson, at Woy Woy, caught 18 whiting. Mr. A. Boyle caught a blackfish weighing 4lb 8oz off the Manly wharf on a No. 24 silk twist. Mr. L. Kingsmill has been catching plenty of winter whiting in the Gosford Broadwater. Mr. E. Tunks secured a fine lot of flathead and flounder (the latter like the Tasmanian species recently introduced here) at Brisbane Water. Mr. J. Arnold caught an 8lb schnapper near the Deer Park (Port Hacking). Mr. F. M'Cabe took an 11lb schnapper at Cowan.

While at Tuggerah recently for a holiday Sub-inspector West, of North Sydney, had an exciting experience beach fishing for tailer with a light schnapper line. He hooked on mullet bait a large jewfish, which when weighed on the only available scales at Tuggerah pulled the balance beyond its limit of 56lb, and was estimated by Mr. W. Parish, solicitor, and an official of the Railway Department, and its captor at between 70lb and 80lb weight. Although he had a leather finger-stall on his right forefinger Sub-inspector West had the leather cut through and the top of his thumb cut to the quick with the rush of the line, but with the aid of a boy's felt hat, to enable him to grasp the line, he beat the fish, after about 25 minutes' combat, and dragged it into the surf, where he secured it. He also caught several large tailer up to 10lb weight.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL.

Given fine weather this afternoon, it is estimated that fifty thousand people will witness the great match between Australasia and England.

It is interesting to note that but one point separates the scores obtained by the Australians against their English rivals in all games played to date, that the tries and goals obtained by each side are almost identical, and that Messenger and Lomas have kicked almost the same number of goals. Full and complete information, from the first match played, right up to date, will be found only in the Zam-Buk Scorer, on sale to-day outside the ground. Be sure it is the Zam-Buk Scorer you buy.—Advt.

THE ROBERTS-LINDRUM MATCH.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the billiard match between Roberts and Lindrum to-day the young Australian was again in fine form. At the afternoon session his breaks were 42, 206, 58, 152. Roberts's best records were 165, 124, 65, 106. The scores at the close of the session were: Lindrum, 16,125; Roberts, 10,368. In the evening Lindrum was in excellent fettle, and made breaks of 155, 163, 261, and 41 (unfinished). Roberts practically had no chances, his best breaks being 44, 26, 84. Lindrum had eight cues, with an average of 62½. Scores:—Lindrum (receives 3000), 16,751; Roberts, 10,623.

A GENEROUS OFFER.

TO PROVE THAT "HARLENE HAIR-DRILL" GROWS HAIR.

A MILLION FREE OUTFITS TO BE DISTRIBUTED.

You have only to ask, and you will receive free of charge:—

I. INSTRUCTION BOOK (that tells you all about "Harlene Hair-Drill," and how to make your hair luxuriant in growth and beautiful in appearance).

II. TRIAL BOTTLE of "Harlene for the Scalp and Hair," necessary for the week's free trial of Harlene "Hair-Drill."

There is no necessity to hesitate, to wait.

If you would like to make your hair grow in healthy and beautiful profusion you can receive free for the mere asking a complete "Harlene Hair-Drill" Outfit.

Now, this is sufficient for a whole week's trial. In that time you can demonstrate to your own personal satisfaction what it is that has made persons of all ages and both sexes—all over the country and abroad—as keen and interested in the practice of "Harlene Hair-Drill" as all persons of hygiene and refined personal habits are in "tooth drill" and "bath drill," for instance.

The hair has been too long neglected.

Let any woman conjure up the vision of how much younger and how much more attractive she would be if her hair was as it was, say, 5 to 10 or 15 years back.

Let any man similarly summon before his mind's eye the picture of the difference that his hair as it was 5 to 15 years previous would make to him to-day.

And it is this great difference that it is possible to restore. No woman's—or man's—hair is to-day what it might—what it can—be, unless it has had the natural and physiological cultivating and beautifying benefit of "Harlene Hair-Drill."

A WEEK'S FREE TRIAL.

It is because we desire that you take up "Harlene Hair-Drill" in the same way, and for the parallel good reasons that you now pay attention to your teeth and body health cleanliness, that we wish you now to at least try, at our expense, the benefit you will gain by even one week's practice of "Harlene Hair-Drill."

Note, all the accessories required will be sent you without a penny cost. It costs threepence to send you the package, and it is suggested that you do Messrs. Edwards the courtesy of sending the threepence for postage or carriage mentioned on the following Coupon (of which you can send a copy, if you would rather not cut it from your paper).

Further supplies of "Harlene" wherewith to continue the practice and benefits of "Harlene Hair-Drill" may be obtained of all chemists and stores throughout the world at 1s, 2s 6d, and 4s 6d per bottle, or sent direct (which must include postage), on receipt of postal order.

THIS COUPON IS GOOD FOR ONE WEEK'S "HARLENE HAIR-DRILL," WITH INSTRUCTIONS AND "HARLENE" FREE OF CHARGE.

"Sydney Morning Herald,"
July 9, 1910.

To Messrs. EDWARDS' HARLENE CO.,

95 and 96 High Holborn, London, England.

Sirs,—I desire to try your offer of one week's "Harlene Hair-Drill," and accept your free trial offer of instruction and supply of "Harlene."

I enclose 3d for postage or carriage to any part of the world.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

SEEN THE NEW £825 COTTAGES YET? SYDNEY'S GARDEN SUBURB.

HABERFIELD HOME.

We are constantly completing new cottages at Haberfield, and for £825 we can now offer you some charming cottages. Take for example the following:—

An Ideal Home, soundly constructed, of artistic design and treatment, built on stone foundation, treated in stucco and shingle style, roofed with shingle tiles, with fine bay window, roomy entrance hall with specially-designed coat and hat rack, and wide tiled verandah. Nicely decorated drawing-room, 19 x 13 dining-room, 16 x 13 bedroom, each beautifully finished with stencilled friezes of modern design.

There are two other bedrooms, and together with kitchen, bathroom with nickel fittings and tap, laundry, linen presses, storeroom, woodshed, with gas, water, and sewerage laid on, this modern home has every convenience.

Although we erect cottages at Haberfield costing up to £1500, this £825 style of cottage is all one could wish for. The interiors, as well as the exteriors, are far superior to the average suburban house, and being situated in such a delightful suburb the value is exceptionally good.

Haberfield, with its eight miles of tree-lined street frontages, with its 400 charming cottages and their beautiful gardens, having its own churches, parks, etc., quickly reached by electric tram direct or train to Summer Hill station, offers you advantages that cannot be obtained elsewhere.

There are a good number of new Cottages, varying in price from £595 to £1500, ready for immediate sale and occupation. Of these we invite your inspection this afternoon. All our salesmen are gathered at Haberfield, and we place a MOTOR CAR at your disposal. The new cottages are thrown open for inspection, so as to afford you every facility to garner fullest information, and see for yourself that all we claim for these beautiful Haberfield homes is more than true. Illustrated booklet together with plans and particulars is supplied on request.

NEW COTTAGES SPECIALLY DESIGNED AND BUILT TO YOUR ORDER.

CAN'T HELP MAKING MONEY.

Put your savings into a lot on RIVERSIDE HEIGHTS ESTATE, Newington, Auburn, and you cannot help saving money. This Estate adjoins the site of the new abattoirs on Homebush Bay. Work on the £150,000 buildings is being pushed on. Values are rising every week.

The prudent buyer who selects a lot NOW will double or treble his money in a year or so. The 1000 men to be employed in the abattoirs will need homes for their families. Many of these homes will be on RIVERSIDE HEIGHTS ESTATE. Further comment is needless.

Choice Lots, £25. Terms: £1 down, 10s monthly. Managing Agents,

Bankstown is one of the most healthful of all Sydney's suburbs—one of the most delightfully-situated. And, in spite of all these advantages, we can offer you on GREENACRE PARK ESTATE full Acres at £40.

GREENACRE PARK lies at the Station on both sides. City water is available on part of the Estate. It will be available all over shortly. Terms: From £1 deposit, and 10s monthly. Write for Plan and Booklet.

And yet the vendors are offering lots on TENNYSON ESTATE, within a few minutes of the tram, 78 x 158 feet, at 5/ a foot. Terms are £1 deposit and 10/ monthly. To-day is not too early to select one of these lots if you want it—

W. F. KAY, GRANVILLE.

There are other things in this business besides commissions.

There is the human side, which awakens the highest and best feelings in one's nature.

A young man comes in full of hope and enthusiasm; he wants to go on the land and work his way to success, an elderly man would retire into a peaceful and superior home, a man of means may want a mansion, or a widow would invest her little legacy to the best advantage.

This is where honesty of purpose comes in, and a little heart-to-heart talk soon makes their interest my own. They are tendered good advice, born of a ripe experience, which puts them on the right road.

When I meet a client who tells me he is doing well, and wishes me good luck and prosperity, do you blame me if my breast swells with pride?

No! I think not, for that is the human side; the consolation of good work done, which brings its own reward.

The day will come when YOU will be glad of such help; perhaps it has come now.

SOLE AGENTS IN N.S.W. FOR

RENAULT, SIDDELEY, AND BELSIZE CARS.

Purchasers of motor cars will do well before making their decision to inspect our large stock of cars.

THE RENAULT is one of the oldest makes of cars in the world, and it has been copied in many respects by practically every other manufacturer. Its reputation in England, Europe, America, and Australia, as being the highest grade car built, is nearly as old as the motor industry itself. Although the Renault costs a little more than others when new, it is infinitely cheaper in the end.

THE BELSIZE is a thoroughly high-grade British Car, being made in Manchester. It is the car for the purchaser who demands quality without undue elaboration, steady service without sensational speeds, and reasonable in cost without the least sacrifice in durability.

ready for delivery. Other sizes to arrive are vehicles for 25cwt and 30cwt loading capacity. Full particulars on application.

THE DAIMLER,

THE MOST FAMOUS BRITISH CAR.

GIVES ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION TO ENGLISH AS WELL AS AUSTRALIAN OWNERS.

Sir W. G. D. Goff, Bart., gives his opinion of the 38-h.p. 1910 Daimler:—

The Manager, Daimler Motor Company, Coventry.

Glenville, Waterford, May 6, 1910.

Dear Sir,—I have to thank you very much for the copies of photos. taken when leaving Coventry on the 28th. I am very pleased to have them as a memento to me of a new departure in motoring. I have no hesitation in saying that the Knight Engine practically gives an explosive engine almost all the advantages of steam, without its drawbacks. I drove on Monday last from Lismore to Clonmel, over the Knockmealdown Mountain Pass, five up, without once changing from top speed, the rise being 1114ft in 7 miles, with many sharp turns. I hardly ever have to change, except when stopped by some obstruction on a hill. Your advice as to size of wheels and other details I find to be quite correct. My fads would have been wrong. I wish I had bought the car a year ago. I should now be a shareholder.

Very Truly Yours,

(Sgd.), W. G. D. GOFF.

P.S.—My son cannot speak too highly of his 22.

ROYAL MERCEDES CARS FOR GERMAN EMPEROR.

Last month the German Emperor bought two more Royal Mercedes Cars. Why? Read below, and you will learn.

THE ROYAL MERCEDES is the Car of Emperors and Kings. Every Crowned Head in Europe uses one. The vehicle is copied by all manufacturers, and every maker pays royalty to the Mercedes firm.

WHY, THEN, BUY A COPY, WHEN YOU CAN HAVE THE ORIGINAL FROM US AT A REASONABLE PRICE?

THE B.S.A. CAR—

THE B.S.A. CAR—the finest designed and constructed Car in Great Britain. Genuine B.S.A. is stipulated by all cycle-makers when mentioning this firm's productions. The same applies to cars, for the mere mention of B.S.A. is sufficient to prove that anything turned out by the Birmingham Small Arms Co. signifies perfection in the highest degree.

THE S.C.A.T.

Car is Italian, and is built and designed by Ceirano. Ceirano is the motor genius of the age. He has designed and turned out almost every Italian car which has any repute at present. The S.C.A.T. is his masterpiece.

OTHER AGENCIES held by us are the COMMER COMMERCIAL VEHICLES, 1 to 6 tons. These are the simplest, most powerful, and most economical lorries in the world. Also the RELIABLE DAYTON MOTOR BUGGY. Besides, we are agents for the CHALLENGE REINFORCED TUBES, which prevent blow-outs, strengthen the outer covers, and allow old discarded tyres being used. We also do MOTOR BODY-BUILDING, and in this we are specialists.

DARLING POINT.

That well-known Family Estate,

"GREENOAKES," DARLING POINT, ST. MARK'S,

10½ acres land, and Mansion thereon, so long owned by the late T. S. Mort, Esq., with large frontage to Ocean-street, and entrance from Main Darling Point-road, the through depth being extensive. The building is commodious, recently renovated, and tenanted by Mrs. H. C. White.

"GREENOAKES" is one of the best known of our high-class Residential Properties, in near touch with the city by pleasant, quick Electric tram, plying at intervals of every few minutes. From the house is commanded a striking panorama of neighbouring attractive houses and cultivated gardens, as well as the more distant enchanting HARBOUR and BAY, environed by pleasing homesteads.

THE HOUSE is of Gothic Style of Architecture, faithfully built of stone, shingle roof, and contains porch entrance, hall, two drawing rooms, sitting-room, dining-room, library, former picture gallery, schoolroom, seven bedrooms, dressing-room, two bathrooms, six rooms for servants, lumber and store rooms, kitchen, stabling premises, and men's cottages.

Undeniably there is a charm in the special location of "Greenoakes," encircled by its own domain of 10½ acres land of various presentment (only a careful viewing will discover the fairylike fascination of the walks, trees, gardens, and swards), fitting it to be the delightful home of a squatter, planter, merchant, or professional city gentleman, and when it shall have served that feature of use there will thereafter remain a very large and growing value in the land alone for subdivisional realisation, its surface contour lending to a design to secure pretty situations, and thus aid to the best profitable result, either to the land speculator or the capitalist in the erection of a series of villas. Practically the Estate is matchless.

PLAN ON VIEW AT THE ROOMS.

By the courtesy of the tenant, inspection by intending purchasers is kindly permitted—per cards to view, obtainable from the Auctioneers.

THE CHIEF DIFFERENCE

The chief difference between Lloyd's Tea and the other kind at the same price is that Lloyd's is a higher grade and much more fragrant tea.

It isn't good for the family purse and palate for you to pay 1/6 a pound for tea when you can get a PURE, HIGH-GRADE, DELICIOUS TEA at Lloyd's for 1/3.

TRY LLOYD'S 1/3 TEA.

It's better than scores of Teas sold at 1/6.
